CITY GREETS CARDINAL TODAY

DEVER SETS OUT CITY'S CASE IN WATER DISPUTE

Canada Already Has Rights, He Says.

BY DONALD EWING.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—The mayor of Chicago stood before a house committee hearing on waterway bills today and answered most every argument that has been put forth against withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan to flow through the drainage canal and carry off sewage.

It was Mayor William E. Dever who resented slurs on his people from New Yorkers, suggested to Wisconsin and other states that they forget sectional jealousies and told of Chicago's past, present and future and desire, to give and receive fair play.

Then it was Judge Dever who discussed international treaties, chided Canada and Great Britain and warned power interests that wealth can never stand above health.

As Man to Man.

And, finally, it was William Dever, terming himself "a man on the street," who explained to his neighbors that his gain would be their greater gain.

"Gentlemen from New York have told you that Chicago is not trying to meet its problems, that it wants others to solve them. That it utterly untrue," he explained.

"Chicago has and will always meet its problems face to face without flinching," he said.

Then he told of spending millions to build the drainage canal of $25,000,- [illegible] now being spent for a sewage [illegible] plants of places for others, of having to stop street improvements because the city didn't have the money to go ahead with them and of how it must now raise $43,000,000 for the work.

Says City Hasn't Money.

"There is no hidden wealth in Chicago," he said. "You can't just say, 'O, Chicago has money; let it build a new system so we can have the water.' It will cost $100,000,000 to build treatment plants. It would take years to do it. And then they might be useless for they are just experiments. And, we'd still have to have water, for you can never completely handle sewage without water."

The canal was built under government supervision, he explained, and the government wasn't attempting to limit Chicago's water supply in permitting 4,170 cubic feet per second, but set that figure to regulate the current so as not to hinder boats.

"We've spent millions making the canal so it could handle 10,000 feet of water per second and still have a current that satisfied the government," he added.

Sees Power Interference.

"I'm half inclined," he said, "to think that if the objection to Chicago taking water were not tied up some way with power interests we wouldn't be here, for, to the man on the street, the plea of our sister states that we lower lake levels seems rather hard to take seriously. We lower them five and a half inches; other withdrawals lower them more than that. There may be boats which have to lessen their load a bit through the five and one-half inch lowering, but not much. You can't make the man on the street take that very seriously.

"Now, I've been told that Canada wants more water, that her power interests want the water Chicago seeks for its health. The international treaty already has given Canada much more than America, and Canada would be very unfair in seeking more at Chicago's expense.

"Now Chicago wants to tell this American committee that we'll do anything that's right, that we'll build anything needed, that we'll do it under federal supervision, that if our deeds in any way affect any American interest we'll make good fully—what could be fairer?

It's an American Problem.

"Canadian power interests may not like it—I can see that they wouldn't, but this is an American congress dealing with an American problem."

It was noticeable that the mayor frequently used the word "American" in his discourse—that while he never said anything derogatory to any other country, he gave accent to his own. When he talked of Canada, he turned to face two representatives of the Canadian government attending the hearing. When he discussed lake levels he faced the navigation interest representatives, while his remarks on waterways and middle western states were addressed directly to congressmen from those states—a large delegation of them coming into hear him.

"Remember this," he continued "the Chicago sanitary district is not a

1923 Income Tax Is Cut 25 Per Cent.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—With the coalition of Democrats and Republican insurgents in unshaken control, the tax reduction bill, as revised by the Democratic leaders, was passed by the senate this afternoon and sent to a conference committee of the two chambers for reconciliation with the house bill.

After failing to save the Mellon rates, wring any concession from the bipartisan coalition, or otherwise jar the balance of power effectively exercised by the La Follette group and other Republican insurgents, most of the regular Republicans voted for the bill on the final roll call.

G. O. P. Regulars Protest.

The vote was 69 for the bill to 15 against it, all the negative votes being cast by Republicans as a protest against the slaughtering of the Mellon plan, in which the administration program of tax reduction originated.

In general, the rates provided in the senate bill are lower on small incomes and higher on large incomes than provided in either the house bill or the Mellon plan, and far lower on all incomes than provided by the present law.

Some pressure is being exerted by Republican leaders to have the President veto the bill when it reaches him, but his position remains in doubt. It is known that Mr. Coolidge objects to certain features of the measure, but the more radical of these may be wiped out in conference and the President may accept the others rather than delay tax reduction.

Mr. Coolidge, in various statements, has been insistent on the Mellon plan, but he never has actually said he would veto any other program.

One fact which might influence the President to accept the bill as it comes from the conferess is his eagerness to avoid futher disturbance to business, due to tax uncertainties.

Salient Points of Measure.

In the form passed by the senate the bill includes the following features:

1. A 25 per cent flat reduction on 1923 incomes payable in 1924, as provided by the house bill. This is just as it is in the bill the house passed.

2. The Simmons (Democratic) normal tax rates of 2, 4 and 6 per cent, compared with 2, 5 and 8 per cent in the house bill, 3 and 6 per cent of the Mellon plan, and 4 and 8 per cent of the present law.

3. The Simmons (Democratic) surtax rates with a maximum of 40 per cent above $500,000, compared with 37½ per cent above $200,000 in the house bill, 25 per cent above $100,000 in the Mellon plan, and 50 per cent above $200,000 in the present law.

4. A personal exemption of $2,500 for all heads of families, compared with the provision of the house bill, the Mellon plan and the present law limting the $2,500 exemption to persons with incomes of $5,000 or less, persons with higher incomes receiving an exemption of only $2,000. The $1,000 exemption for single persons in the present law remains unchanged.

Earned Income Assisted.

5. A 25 per cent reduction of the tax on earned income, the senate bill limiting its application to $10,000, and the house bill to $20,000 with the first $5,000 of income regarded as earned, even though not salaries or wages.

6. A graduated tax on corporation income comprising a normal tax of 9 per cent on all earnings and surtaxes up to 40 per cent in undistributed earnings repealing the 12½ per cent tax on corporations and the capital stock tax of the present law which are retained in the house bill.

7. An inheritance tax of from 1 to 36 per cent on legacies to be paid by individual beneficiaries, instead of the tax of from 1 to 25 per cent paid by estates under the present law, which rates are increased to a maximum of 40 per cent in the house bill.

Tax on Gifts Decreased.

8. A tax on gifts with rates 1 to 38 per cent in the senate bill, compared with 1 to 40 per cent in the house bill.

9. Excise taxes repealed on telephone and telegraph messages, candy, automobile accessories, carpets, rugs, suitcases, etc., and reduced on automobile tires and trucks, amusement admissions, and jewelry.

10. Complete publicity of tax returns and of proceedings before the board

2 Hold Up 30 Crap Players in Loop Hotel

Two dapper young men stepped briskly into the elevator at the Astor hotel, 172 North Clark street, last night, rode to the fourth floor, entered room 435, and, interrupting a dice game, robbed thirty men of some $1,000 in cash and all their jewelry. Then they backed out, took the elevator to the lobby, and disappeared.

For cool daring the holdup shades any of recent months. The Astor hotel is directly back of the detective bureau, next door to the Sherman hotel, and within a block of the central detail of the police. Even while the bandits were lifting watches and wallets out of the pockets of their thirty victims two policemen were directing traffic a quarter of a block away.

Rendezvous of Soda Clerks.

Room 435, the police were told, has been the rendezvous of drug clerks, loop soda fountain boys, and others each Saturday night for several weeks. Saturday is pay day for most of them and the rattle of the dice provided their weekly thrill.

The game had been in progress just long enough last night for one of the players to make three "passes" when the strangers walked in.

Thought It a Joke.

"Put 'em up," one of the couple ordered. The dice rolled on the floor. The players stood still, wondering what sort of a joke this was.

"Put 'em up and don't be slow," was the second command. The short fellow started going through the pockets. One of the players was carrying a gun. The bandit grabbed it and fired one shot into the ceiling. After that the collecting was easy.

Two minutes later the bandits had backed away.

RIVER DRAGGED FOR BODIES OF TWO URCHINS

For seven hours last night the police dragged the river in vain for the bodies of Chester Kucal, 11, and Joseph Zielinski, 9, both living at 1339 Sloan street.

More than 1,000 persons packed the embankment and lined the rail of the Division street bridge over the western fork of the river to watch the fire tug Graeme Stuart patrol back and forth with its drag rake. Early this morning policemen and firemen were still searching.

FORD SELLS BIG ASSEMBLY PLANT TO GAS CONCERN

Henry Ford of Detroit yesterday settled rumors concerning what he intended doing with his big assembling plant at Wabash avenue and Pershing road. He sold it to Ward T. Huston of Ward T. Huston & Co., real estate brokers, for $1,133,000.

For several months this building, one of the largest in Chicago, has been sold by the "have you heard?" gentlemen pretty nearly as many times as Mr. Kirk's "Jap Rosery" has been bought by John Hertz, William Randolph Hearst, and others.

The Ford plant ultimately will be used by the Peoples Gas Stores, incorporated, for a central service station and warehouse for the Chicago district.

On Oct. 1 Mr. Ford will wheel his army of Henrys from Pershing road down to his big Hegewisch plant and his Chicago assembling will be done there.

The building just bought by Mr. Huston fronts 600 feet on Wabash avenue, 160 feet on Pershing road, and 180 on 40th street. Trains from the Chicago Junction railroad run directly into the big structure. The main building is six stories with a large two story addition.

Once a Crook, Her Will Aids Felons' Babies

Detroit, Mich., May 10.—A perpetual trust fund, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the establishment of a home for children whose parents are prison inmates, is created under the will of Sophie Lyons Burke, former international confidence woman, who died here Wednesday night.

The will, discovered today in a safety deposit vault, drilled open in the presence of court attachés, does not indicate the amount to be devoted to the creation of the home, but leaves the residue of Mrs. Burke's estate to that purpose after numerous bequests to relatives and friends.

Amount Not Stated.

In providing for the children's home, the will specifies that any child between 2 and 4 years of age, one or both of whose parents may be a prison inmate, shall be eligible to admittance.

Mrs. Burke, who gave up a career of crime to preach observance of the law and the futility of crime, left an estate value variously at from $150,000 to $300,000, mostly in Detroit real estate.

Jewels Are Found.

When the safety deposit vault was opened today, it was found to contain, besides numerous deeds and other papers, considerable jewelry, knotted in the bottom of an old stocking. The jewelry was estimated to be worth $25,000, and included one ring set with twelve diamonds, which was identified as the engagement ring given her by "Jimmy" Burke when the couple were at the height of their career.

MELLON TELLS PRESIDENT TO VETO BONUS BILL

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—President Coolidge received today the reports of the director of the budget and the treasury department on the costs of the bonus and its effect on the finances of the country in its relation with a reduction in taxes.

Secretary Mellon later called on the President and presented strong arguments for the veto of the bill.

The feeling in Republican congressional circles is that the President will send a veto to congress on the bonus bill which will follow closely the line of his veto on the Bursum pension bill.

The determination of congress to put the ban on Japanese immigration July 1 instead of waiting until spring, as President Coolidge advised, was reinforced yesterday by action of conference committee, as told on page 3.

TOKIO, May 10.—Japan's election day was ushered in with violence. Riots are reported from all over the country, with one political murder. Gangs emulating American Ku Kluxers, garbed in white robes, raided election headquarters of some of the candidates, beating watchers.

Numerous gang fights took place in which clubs and bamboo spears were used. The gendarmes were called out in many sections.

The excitement around the polls was intensified when extra editions of the newspapers reported the action of the American house of representatives on Japanese exclusion were received. Anti-American feeling is growing in many sections.

Leaders Urge Pan-Asianism.

The leading commercial leaders of Osaka are urging Pan-Asianism. Mr. Kodama, director of the Toyo Cotton company, stated:

"If America insists on exclusion Japan might just as well break international relations. Japan should proclaim a national humiliation day on the date that President Coolidge signs the bill."

Mr. Yamamura, director of the Mitsubishi bank, asserted:

"It now appears that the entrance of Japanese nonlaborers perhaps may be difficult following the passage of the bill. This causes apprehension that employés of banks and commercial offices may be limited next. No nation with common sense would dream of such a wildcat scheme, but America has never been equaled in surprising the world by its extravagant acts."

Seek Relations with France.

Mr. Tagami, chief of the Osaka branch of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha, said:

"It seems right now that the Japanese should foster a union of the Asiatic races, closely coöperating with China. It should take advantage of the presence of Gov. Gen. Merlin of French Indo-China and Rabindranath Tagore to promote closer relations with France and India."

The Rev. Mr. Yoshikawa, a Christian preacher, has sent circulars to officials and business leaders in Tokio urging the return of American relief supplies which are still undistributed.

"Japanese should not clothe themselves and eat gifts which are not accompanied by a true sense of sympathy," he said. "Otherwise they will be like dogs eating what is thrown to them."

TRAIN SPEEDS WEST BEARING FAMED PRELATE

Names Those to Be Honored by Him.

The Cardinal's Program

Will arrive at Garfield boulevard and Western avenue, B. & O. tracks, at 2:05 p. m., Chicago daylight saving time. A change in train schedules last evening enables the Cardinal's party to arrive at 2:05, an hour and a half earlier than was expected when the train left New York.

Thence by automobile east in Garfield boulevard to Michigan avenue, north in Michigan avenue to Roosevelt road, where first section of big parade will swing in ahead of him and then north in Michigan to North avenue; west in North avenue to Dearborn; south in Dearborn to Chicago avenue; east in Chicago avenue to State street; south in State to Holy Name cathedral, where services will be held.

BY JOHN HERRICK.

On Board Cardinal Mundelein's Special Train, May 10.—[Special.]—It has been a journey of triumph for Cardinal Mundelein today while he was being carried homeward to the west and Chicago.

The processional welcome that he missed in the murk and rain of last night's landing has been accorded him as the special train of the Baltimore and Ohio railway [illegible] New Jersey into Maryland, on to Washington, and began to climb up the slopes of the Blue Ridge mountains.

An accident marred the progress as the train neared Baltimore. A runaway horse was struck and killed by the pair of heavy engines drawing the fourteen cars in which Cardinal Mundelein and the 250 priests and laymen are being carried.

Throws Him to Seat.

The cardinal at the moment was receiving delegations from the various bodies on the train. The shock of the emergency stop threw him to the seat of the couch before which he was standing in the parlor of his special car. His visitors were hurled to the floor in a heap.

"Is any one hurt—were there men in the wagon?" was his first question. When he was told none was injured the cardinal continued with the ceremony.

Every way station, every crossroad, where news of the new cardinal's coming had preceded him has been the scene of an ovation. Fleeting salutations—switch engines shrilling a greeting—groups of men with uncovered heads and women with children in their arms to wave as the train swept by.

Creeds Are Forgotten.

The word has gone out that Chicago's new prelate is not only a prince of the church but a prince among fellows as well. And it was not only Catholics but non-Catholics as well who gathered along the right of way. At the few stops which the train has made crowds gathered about the observation platform of the cardinal's car as he smilingly came out. Hats came off as he bestowed his blessings.

Just outside Baltimore a halt was made to receive Chicago students at St. Mary's seminary, where they are preparing for the priesthood. It was here that one of the several colorful incidents which have marked the journey took place.

Wiping their hands on their overalls and holding their white peaked caps in their hands, the engineers of the train walked back to the carpeted platform where the cardinal was standing with the students about him.

Blesses the Engineers.

One was J. J. Morgan, forty-six years on the road. The other was C. W. Carey, of thirty-seven years' service. They sought the cardinal's blessing and, kneeling before him and kissing his ring, they received it.

The cardinal has been in excellent spirits all day. He has laughed and joked with those who have been permitted to see him. He replied in the affirmative when he was asked whether the list of honors and decorations recently published was correct, and he named the following who would receive appointment:

Among the laymen are Edward F. Carey, president of the Pullman company; Robert M. Sweitzer, county clerk of Cook county; Francis J. Lewis, head of the Lewis Manufacturing company; Joseph W. McCarthy, architect of many churches and the buildings of the seminary of St. Mary's of the Lake at Area, Ill., and Anthony Czarnecki, election commissioner and member of the staff of the Chicago Daily News.

All will receive knighthood in the Order of St. Gregory the Great.

Names Priests for Elevation.

John Webster Melody, pastor of St. Jarleth's church; Thomas A. Kearns of the Church of the Immaculate Conception; John Dettmer of St. Anthony's church; John Ryan, pastor of St. Bernard's; Daniel Luttrell, pastor of St. Thomas Aquinas; M. Kruszas, Lithuanian pastor, and Francis J. Ostrowski of St. Joseph's, all of whom will become monsignors.

Mgr. Francis A. Rempe of St. Clement's will receive the title of apostolic prothornary, Cardinal Mundelein affirmed, while the Very Rev. Francis Gordon, C. R. Head of the Resurrection Fathers, who because of his order cannot become a monsignor, will receive the special decoration Pro Ecclesia Et Pro Pontifice.

It was further announced by the cardinal that Father William D. O'Brien, general secretary of the Catholic Church Extension society, had been appointed secret chamberlain, which carries with it the title of "very reverend monsignor."

Carry, president of the Pullman com-

One other priest and one more layman, not yet named, are to receive appointments from Rome, the cardinal declared. He refused, however, to make these known until he had time to make the announcement to them in person when he reaches Chicago.

First Polish Layman Honored.

"The Anthony Czarnecki appointment is the first time that a Chicago layman of Polish descent has been honored by the Holy Father," the cardinal supplemented to the announcement of the names of the recipients. "It should be regarded as a recognition not only of a fine honest man, who has aided the church and did work for charity in Poland during the war but also as a recognition of all Chicagoans of Polish descent."

He became jovial as he went on.

"When I asked the appointment of the Holy Father, he asked me whether Tony Czarnecki had the proper social status. And I told him that I had never known a newspaper man who stayed in the game any length of time who could maintain a social status," the cardinal laughed.

Father Kruszas, the cardinal declared, was the first Lithuanian in this country to be honored with the title of monsignor, and he spoke of the priest's honor as an honor to all Lithuanians in Chicago.

St. Mary's for Chicagoans.

"Our clergy has heretofore been drawn from countries all over the world," he spoke when he was asked about the work at St. Mary's of the Lake seminary at Area, Ill., "but now we will take only boys born and raised in Chicago, and all of them are given eleven years' training in the same courses and under the same teachers.

"St. Mary's seminary is therefore a school which takes the cosmopolitan and turns it into the American. These boys who learn there how to be good priests will be leaders in the process of Americanization in the future."

Tells of Papal Audience.

Then Cardinal Mundelein spoke of a private audience which Pope Pius XI. had granted him after his elevation.

"It was America's part in relief work in Europe which was one of the special reasons for the favors granted to Americans by the Holy Father," he said. "His voice broke when he spoke of the children whose suffering had been alleviated by the generosity of this country. One thing he said that is especially worth remembering, this in his words, was 'the axis of the world is slowing changing. It is turning toward America.'"

Give $25,000 to Fund.

On behalf of the Illinois chapter of the Catholic Order of Foresters, Thomas Cannon, high chief ranger, presented a certified check for $25,000 to go toward the $1,000,000 fund which is to be presented to Cardinal Mundelein for St. Mary's of the Lake.

"The thousands whom you represent, in giving this generous donation, are furthering the great work of the faith you received from your ancestors," the cardinal replied in accepting the check. "This sum will be featured in a permanent way. It will help to train priests who will serve the church faithfully and well."

A committee representing all members of the delegations then entered and presented the cardinal with an engrossed volume in which were written words of welcome and the signatures of every delegate.

City Officials Sign.

Aldermen, city and county officials, and judges composed the official committee which extended to the cardinal official good wishes of Chicago. Among the number were Ald. Frank J. Tomczak, chairman; Ald. Charles S. Eaton, D. S. McKinley, Christ A. Jensen, Edward J. Kaindl, Albert J. Horan and J. B. McDonough; Arthur J. O'Brien, secretary to Mayor Dever; Thomas J. Courtney, sergeant at arms of the city council; Patrick J. Carr, county treasurer; State Senator Patrick J. Carroll, First Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank M. Padden, and Judges Joseph Sabath, John P. McGoorty and Michael Girten.

Judge Sabath spoke for the Jewish population of Chicago. He said to the Catholic prelate:

"We look upon your elevation as something more than a sectarian honor. Every Chicagoan is proud of the title you bring back with you. We are all working together for the betterment of the people of our city. In short, your eminence, we're all for you."

Mr. Carr's speech was as much to the point. "We're with you all the way," he declared.

Cardinal Mundelein spoke in praise of the nonpartisan spirit which characterized the committee.

A Story to the Point.

"Coming back on the boat I overheard two men talking outside my door," he said. "One of them said: 'Who is this fellow on board? I hear he is a new cardinal.'

"'Yes, that's Cardinal Mundelein,' said the other. 'He went to Rome to get the red hat, and now he is bringing home the bacon to Chicago.'

"I think that pretty well expresses it," the cardinal concluded. "The

PLAN ELABORATE PROCESSION HERE

Cardinal Mundelein arrives in Chicago this afternoon to meet with a reception that might befit the homecoming of a potentate of old. A prince of the Roman Catholic church, he will be greeted in true princely style.

The Baltimore and Ohio special bearing the cardinal and his party, the citizens' and ecclesiastical committees, and newspaper men left New York City at 11:20 yesterday morning amid a cheering of crowds that filled the station and bands which played rousing martial music.

Barring accidental delay, it will arrive in Chicago at 2:05 daylight saving time this afternoon. This was announced by the headquarters of the citizens' committee to greet his eminence, and it was verified late in the day by the Rev. Father Francis A. Ryan, assistant chancellor of the Chicago diocese.

Route of Procession.

The procession of automobiles bearing the cardinal and the party from the special will go from Garfield boulevard and Leavitt directly east in Garfield boulevard to Michigan avenue, then north to Roosevelt road.

The procession will pass through a solid bank of American flags for not only will the houses all along the way be decorated as they might be on the Fourth of July, but flags will be flying and bunting draped on all the Catholic homes and residences of citizens, the Catholic institutions, churches and schools of the city.

Along the route also will be assembled 100,000 children of the parochial schools and 250,000 members of the Catholic churches.

Fraternities in Line.

In the parade itself will be thousands of members of the Catholic fraternities and organizations such as the Knights of Columbus, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Catholic Order of Foresters, the Polish Alma Mater and others. These will be preceded by various escorts, mounted policemen, firemen, ex-service men and volunteers state militia men in uniform.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh will be grand martial of the parade and lead it and Col. Frank R. Schwengel will be chief of staff.

The members of the societies and fraternities who are to march in the parade will assemble in all the side streets along Michigan avenue, from Roosevelt road to Randolph street. These bodies of men will march into Michigan boulevard on a prearranged signal all along the line. In ten minutes the long blocks of the avenue will be solidly lined with the marchers ready to start forward with measured tread.

Col. Marcus Kavanagh, grand marshall; Col. Frank Schwengel, chief of staff, and their aids will swing in at Washington street, with the details of police and firemen, for here will be the head of the parade. At the same time other marchers will be joining at every intersection. At Roosevelt road the Polish military societies will deploy into line. Along 11th street from Michigan to State street will be assembled the Polish Alma Mater, the Lithuanian, Italian and Slovakian societies, and these will march in from there.

The Catholic Knights of America, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the Bohemian brethren will swing in from 9th street; the Catholic Order of Foresters from 8th street.

The Knights of Columbus will be assembled along 7th, Harrison and Congress streets, from Michigan avenue to State, and, in full regalia, will drop into the march from those stations. Meantime the Holy Name society will march into place from Van Buren, Jackson and Adams streets. The military escorts will form in Madison street and fill the last gap in the parade.

Clear Traffic Lanes.

A signal will again be given, bugles sounded, and the forward movement of the parade toward North avenue will be begun. While the parade is in movement—in fact, long before its forward movement starts—all traffic which is likely to interfere with it in any way, has been ordered stopped.

In Garfield boulevard along the route of the auto procession of Cardinal Mundelein and his party no parking will be allowed after 1 o'clock in the afternoon; and at 1:45 p. m. all traffic in the south drive of the boulevard will be stopped between Western and Michigan avenue.

Parking will not be permitted in any of the east and west streets from Washington street to Roosevelt road, inclusive, from Michigan avenue to State street, after 12:45 p. m. All traffic in Michigan boulevard from Garfield to Roosevelt road will be stopped at 1:30 p. m.

Traffic Stops at 2:15.

All parking in Michigan avenue from Roosevelt road to Randolph will be stopped at 1:15 in the afternoon; and all traffic will be sidetracked at 2 o'clock. From Randolph street to North avenue, no parking will be permitted after 1:30, and traffic will be stopped at 2:15.

Parking will be stopped at 1:45 p. m., and traffic stopped at 4 o'clock along this route: North avenue, Michigan to Dearborn; Dearborn street, North to Chicago; Chicago avenue, Dearborn to State; State, Chicago to Huron.

Police regulations are that motorists, when diverted off Michigan boulevard, use Wabash avenue going north and State street coming south. No one will be allowed to turn west in any side street from Roosevelt road to Washington street, including both these, after 1:30 p. m.

At 2:15 all south bound traffic in Sheridan road will be diverted to the west drive in Lincoln park, and thence to La Salle and Clark streets. None should drive east of State street for the purpose of entering Michigan avenue after 1:45 in the afternoon.

Reroute Street Cars.

The surface cars will be rerouted to suit conditions, the street car company announced.

After the services Cardinal Mundelein will retire to the archiepiscopal residence at North avenue, to make his next public appearance tomorrow night at the great meeting at the Auditorium.

Here the cardinal, still archbishop of Chicago although a prince of the church now, will make one of his rare public addresses. It is said of the cardinal that he displays great wisdom when he speaks publicly; that it is considered by Catholics and non-Catholics alike who are acquainted with him, an unusual privilege to hear him.

Free to All.

This great public reception will be free to all and the doors will be opened to the public at 8 o'clock sharp. A limited number of tickets have been given out, but the holders of these have been warned they must be in their seats at 8 or forfeit them—at 8 o'clock the doors will be thrown open and it will be first come first served.

Resolutions of congratulation on the honor that has become his and Chicago's will be presented his eminence preceding his speech; and several of the city's leading citizens will address the cardinal and the audience.

The Paulist choristers will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Ecce Sacerdos" and at the close join the audience in singing. George M. Reynolds and James G. Condon will make addresses; so also will County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, James a Calek and Michael F. Girten.

Mayor to Be Chairman.

Mayor William E. Dever will be honorary chairman, and D. F. Kelly, knight of St. Gregory, will be chairman. Chairman Joseph F. Connery of the committee on arrangements has promised that in the event of an overflow meeting—which appears certain—the crowds outside will be entertained and givena chance to hear the cardinal and greet him outside the Auditorium in Congress street and Michigan avenue.

The celebration will be continued on into Tuesday, when George Mundelein will celebrate for the first time in public in Chicago as cardinal a solemn pontifical high mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Name.

MOTHER SUES JAS. W. BARRETT FOR ACCOUNTING

Management of Estate by Him the Issue.

It so comes about that today, Mothers' day, is bared to the world the story of an aged mother, told yesterday in her appeal to the courts, of an only son who had been intrusted with nearly $1,000,000, his mother's entire fortune, and who now refuses to furnish funds for her simple needs.

The son so accused is James W. Barrett, wealthy broker, who lives at the Edgewater Beach hotel. His accuser, bent under her 78 years, is Mrs. Anna C. Barrett, widow of Mark W. Barrett, who had accumulated a fortune as a farmer.

Through her attorney, Frederick A. Brown, Mrs. Barrett asked the Circuit court immediately to transfer the fortune from Barrett's possession, to order him to account for what he has done with it, and to make him repay what, if any, sums he has taken and applied to his own use.

When her husband died in 1920 Mrs. Barrett shifted the burden of preserving their fortune upon her son, James. She pleaded, according to the bill, that, because of her infirm years, she could not act as executrix of her husband's will, and called upon the son to act in her stead.

Entrusts Estate to Him.

So the son assumed control of the $600,000 estate, composed of farm lands and $219,000 in Liberty bonds and other securities. And she surrendered to him also, the bill states, her personal fortune of $204,000 in investments. In later years, she asserted, she turned over to him notes aggregating $61,000, a further sum of $75,000 in cash, and her own notes totaling $136,000.

During the last four years, Mrs. Barrett says, she frequently has asked her son for funds with which to defray her living expenses. He would give her very small sums, but not "a a fraction of the sum to which she was entitled from the interest earned by the estate," the bill alleges.

The income which she should have received should have been at least $40,000 annually, the bill continues. Instead, it is charged, she "always has had great difficulty in getting even a little money from Barrett."

Left Stranded, She Says.

The end of even these small remittances came ten days ago, when Mrs. Barrett wired for money from Los Angeles, where she had spent the winter, the bill states. She received a reply from her son which stated: "I am unable to send funds requested. Wrote you fully Monday." She never received the letter, she says.

The aged mother then was forced to borrow from friends so that she might settle her hotel bill and other expenses. And she came to Chicago to confront her son—to demand payment of her rightful share in the estate.

MOTHER'S DAY, THIS, AND SHE'S QUEEN OF MEN

General Observance of Custom in Chicago.

From what every one says, there doesn't seem to be a son or daughter in Chicago who isn't going to remember the "mother" in some way today.

"I am sending my mother a box of candy which she will get early in the morning."

"There are seven of us living—brothers and sisters—and we are each of us sending our mother a special letter with something inclosed—as much as we can afford. She can find uses for it, all right. We are not any of us rich and can't give her a lot of little luxuries we'd like to during the year. But we try to make up on Mother's day."

And so on and on. Every one asked had something special planned.

Churches Remember, Too.

Walter R. Mee, executive secretary of the Chicago Church federation, said:

"We have asked the 700 churches in the federation to make suitable recognition of the day either by devoting the entire service to mothers or making some sort of special tribute. The response will be general."

A program befitting the occasion will be given at the Sam Harris theater at 2:30 this afternoon by the Chicago lodge No. 4 of Elks.

Honored in Sermons.

Songs honoring the mother will be part of the special service at the Immanuel Baptist church. At the Fourth Presbyterian church, where the Rev. Alfred S. Nickless will preach the Mother's day sermon, the morning offering will be contributed to the Presbyterian Home for the Aged. Mothers' day activities will be given all day at the New First Congregational church, of which Dr. Gilbert Wilson is pastor.

For the first time in the history of the Jewish fraternal order B'nai B'rith Mothers' day will be celebrated next Wednesday evening when Chicago lodge No. 982 will present a special program at the Covenant club, 26 North Dearborn, beginning with a dinner at 6:30.

While this day will be celebrated all over the city in halls and churches, it is a day which is primarily for individual celebration. And it will be the little things done, the kindnesses performed, the person remembered, which will count, after all, and bestow the greatest amount of happiness to the person who has meant so much to all—our mother!

Take Sacks Containing Cash for Bank.

Another successful mail robbery in the Calumet district—the second within a few weeks—was staged in Indiana Harbor yesterday. The loot was $35,000 in cash and other valuable property which has not been checked with government records thus far.

The holdup was committed in the rear of the Indiana Harbor postoffice and the money was taken from a contract truck which had just borne the registered mail sacks from a railway station. One of the bags contained two packages of money from the Chicago federal reserve bank.

One of the packages included $20,000 for the United States National bank at Indiana Harbor and the other $15,000 for the East Chicago State bank.

Similar to Harvey Job.

Postal Inspectors Fahy, Jackson and McWhorter were sent to the scene as soon as news of the robbery was flashed to Chief Inspector A. E. Germer. After a hurried survey the men reported the "technique" used by the robbers was identical to that employed by the men who robbed a mail truck in Harvey of $100,000 on March 21.

Orders immediately were sent out to "check-up" the whereabouts of Carlo Fontano and his gang, who were arrested in connection with the Harvey robbery.

Fontano was released from federal custody ten days ago, when his bonds were reduced from $35,000 to $15,000.

How Robbery Was Accomplished.

According to the statement of Harry H. Spencer, postmaster of Indiana Harbor, the mail had been picked up at the Pennsylvania station by Hugh Pierce, a truck driver, and five clerks. They were preparing to carry the mail into the postoffice when they found themselves covered by revolvers in the hands of three bandits who jumped out of a big Cadillac touring car. While two of the robbers stood guard, the third loaded the pouches into their auto.

The bandit car bore Illinois license number 471-092, which records show was issued for a Maxwell car owned by William Thomas, 6938 Blackstone avenue.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 10.—Emphatically denying the government's accusation that the revolution was based on selfish motives, Dr. Carlos Alzugaray Maria Gracia Velez, brother of Carlos Velez, president of the Patriots and Veterans' association, who is in New York, and others arrested on April 27 to forestall agitation in favor of the insurrection, cited eleven causes today for the political unrest in Cuba. 31 Relatives on Pay Roll.

TWO—Nepotism. Thirty-one of President Zayas' relatives have most important government posts, giving great opportunities for graft. The list shows that President Zayas has a brother who is minister to Paris, a son who is lottery director, a nephew who is legal adviser of public works, a cousin who is secretary of the treasury, a nephew who is inspector of jails, a nephew who is prosecuting attorney in the Court of Appeals, a son-in-law who is controller of currency, a nephew who is administrator of the Havana customs house, and a brother of his son-in-law, who is a favorite government contractor, etc. All are said to be getting rich.

THREE—The accusation is made that the government is railroading through the public works projects, costing $8,000,000, without calling for bids.

FOUR—Complaint is made that honest elections are impossible not only because of the unfair tactics of the government but because of a law which gives congressmen control of the assemblies, thereby insuring reëlection as long as they are able to run.

Charges Sale of Pardons.

FIVE—Objection is made to the law giving amnesty privileges to the president, who is accused of selling pardons for political gain.

SIX—Congressmen are immune to criminal and civil laws.

SEVEN—Graft among the officials and poverty among the people is attributed to the lottery. The lottery sale is controlled by the president and there is no way of checking up his profits.

EIGHT—A judicial reform is demanded in the present Spanish system of permitting a judge to reject or accept evidence arbitrarily and which remains the basis upon which the higher court makes a decision if a case is appealed. This system lends itself to bribery.

Claim Congress Was Bribed.

NINE—Abrogation of the railroad consolidation giving the railroads an absolute monopoly is demanded. The railroads paid $70,000 to congressmen, whom, it is claimed, admit receiving the money.

TEN—The government is criticized for its alleged failure to pay pensions as provided by law to veterans of the war of independence.

ELEVEN—Charging bribery, annulment is demanded of the law giving a franchise of sixty-eight miles of government railroad to a private concern.

While the members of the Patriots and Veterans' association insist that their demands correspond to those submitted by Gen. Crowder, the latter refuses to comment, saying his demands never were published, and he declines in any way to signify the contents of his private communications to President Zayas.

FALLS INTO MANHOLE; KILLED.

John Buschick, 2965 Washington boulevard, 55, was instantly killed late yesterday afternoon, when he fell into an open manhole in front of the Madison and Kedzie arcade, a bowling and pool hall at 3127 West Madison street.

FOE OF LIQUOR GETS THRILL OF REAL ROMANCE

Daughter, Pianist, Ups and Weds Cellist.

A romance of Chicago's music studios blossomed into a quiet journey to Valparaiso on Friday night and a marriage ceremony in the office of a justice of the peace of the Indiana Gretna Green was revealed yesterday.

But the parental blessing awaits the principals in the nuptials, Miss Virginia Wilson, 19 year old pianist, and Alfred E. Wallenstein, a cellist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, it was said by the bride's father, Alonzo E. Wilson, former legislator and for years a nationally known figure in Anti-Saloon and prohibition circles.

Daddy's Quite Surprised.

"Well, well, bless my soul. It's certainly news to me!" exclaimed Mr. Wilson when told of the wedding at his Wheaton home.

"Now, Virginia called me up this morning, but she said not one word about what had happened. But she said she would be home tonight, and I guess it was her plan to break it gently."

So Young, You Know.

Mr. Wilson said he was well acquainted with young Mr. Wallenstein and thought "most highly" of him, but had no idea such plans of the young people were afoot. He said the elopement was "not at all necessary," that the only possible objection to the match was the youth of his daughter.

Wallenstein is also a member of the Gordon String quartette and is well known in music circles.

YOUTH SHOT BY COP IN CHASE AFTER HOLDUP

Frank Covelli, 19 years old, was shot in the back and probably fatally wounded yesterday by Policeman Peter J. Snyder of the Des Plaines street station as he and three companions were fleeing the scene of an attempted holdup.

The trio, one of whom carried a gun, attempted to rob Rudolph Weibel, 2226 Blue Island avenue, at Van Buren and Des Plaines streets. Weibel, who had $1.08 and didn't want to lose it, started running and was struck in the head with a piece of brick by one of the men.

TRAIL WOMEN FROM BANK TO GET THEIR CASH

South side police last night sought two well dressed young men who, after trailing them from a nearby bank, held up and robbed Mrs. Rose Wanamaker, 22, and her sister, Mrs. Lillian Woodridge, 24, of cash and jewelry valued at several hundred dollars in the vestibule of Mrs. Wanamaker's home at 1120 East 47th street.

"Lillian and I did not see the young fellows until just as we were opening the apartment door," explained Mrs. Wanamaker, who is the wife of William Wanamaker, an advertising man at 431 South Dearborn street.

"They both had guns, which they thrust toward us, at the same time one of them grabbing our handbags. After compelling me to give up my seal skin coat, they forced us into the bathroom and slammed the door. Then they fled."

Mrs. Wanamaker lost a platinum engagement ring set with three diamonds valued at $400, and $200 in money, in addition to her coat. Her sister, who lives in the village of Midlothian, lost $100 in money. The sisters had a few moments before drawn the money from the South Side Trust and Savings bank at 47th and Cottage Grove avenue.

Twelve year old Peter Radakovich, who slipped while trying to "flip" a Baltimore and Ohio freight train near his home, at 9735 Avenue M, died late last night in South Chicago hospital. He fell under the wheels, losing his right leg and left foot.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—An admission that deficiencies in the American navy at present place it on a basis of 5-4-3 in relation to Great Britain and Japan, instead of the 5-5-3 authorized by the Washington treaty, was made in a report submitted today by Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, as acting secretary of the navy, to Chairman Butler of the house naval affairs committee.

In the 5-4-3 ratio cited the British navy is figured at 5 and the Japanese navy at 3.

The equality between the American and British navies in capital ships was authorized in the Washington agreement on limitation of naval armaments and Japan was to have three-fifths the strength of the two leading nations.

Reply to Criticism.

Col. Roosevelt's report was in reply to criticisms on the condition of our navy, published in the New York Times on April 28 by W. D. Shearer, a naval expert.

The acting secretary of the navy admits much of Mr. Shearer's criticism—probably half of it—was well founded, and the report urges that congress should provide appropriations to restore the fleet to parity with that of Great Britain and gave it the lead over Japan agreed upon.

Mr. Shearer's article said the present relative strength of the British, Japanese and American navies was "5-2-1, with our navy 1."

Answering this statement, Col. Roosevelt's report says:

"It is difficult to definitely state our exact strength, due to the varying ratio in the different types. A fair comparison of the present fighting strength in ships of Great Britain, America and Japan would appear to be 5-4-3.

Not Counting Naval Bases.

"This ratio does not take into consideration strategically located and well equipped naval bases, which add greatly to the sea power of a nation, nor does it take into consideration the relative strength of the various merchant marines.

"The navy is in good shape, and the morale of the personnel, both commissioned and enlisted, is high. The appropriations furnished by congress are being applied in such a manner as to obtain the very best results."

ARTIST FLAGG AND HIS MODEL WED AFTER ALL

New York, May 10.—[Special.]—James Montgomery Flagg, artist, and Mrs. Dorothy Virginia Wadman, a widow who has been his model several years, were married this morning in the Little Church Around the Corner. Their engagement, announced Jan. 1, was reported broken last week.

Mr. Flagg gave his age as 46 and his address as 136 West 75th street. Mrs. Wadman said she was 25. Her husband died in 1918.

Mrs. Charles Bondies attended the bride at the church and afterward went with the couple and the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Flagg, for a wedding breakfast at the Plaza hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Flagg left at once for Mondory, his home in Mamaroneck. They plan to motor to the Pacific coast.

Mr. Flagg's first wife, who was Miss Nellie McCormick of St. Louis, died a year ago. They had no children.

Rogers Pays Count $100,000 to Quit $40,000,000 Bride

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, May 10.—A $40,000,000 international romance was smashed this morning when Col. H. H. Rogers of New York and his daughter, Millicent, sailed for New York aboard the steamship France and Count Salm von Hoogstraeten left Paris for Vienna.

The Salm family is reported to be richer today by $100,000—7,500,000,000 Austrian crowns—as a result of the sudden marriage of Millicent Rogers in New York on Jan. 9. The deal was negotiated by Count Salm's father, who was summoned to Paris from the family estate at Mienta on Tuesday, and Col. Rogers, who arrived from New York City a week ago. Col. Rogers went to Cannes, where Count Salm and his bride were staying, playing tennis chiefly, and they came to Paris immediately.

Parents Battle for Week.

The first indication of trouble was seen when Col. Rogers reserved two adjoining bedrooms in a small hotel on the Rue de Rivoli, which is not a luxurious hostelry. Millicent occupied one and Count Salm the other. Employés and guests of the hotel were struck by the sad visages and worried looks of the couple, and Count Salm was seen constantly apparently pleading with his bride.

The battle between the parents and Count Salm lasted all week, with Count Salm's father urging him to give up the girl and replenish the family's empty coffers, and Col. Rogers asking his daughter to quit her titled husband and return home.

Daily Count Salm and Millicent attended the conference at Champs Elysee hotel, where Col. Rogers was staying, and Count Salm's father was frequently present. On Thursday and Friday Col. Rogers and Count Salm's father had private conversations.

Orders Her Trunks Packed.

Count Salm and Millicent appeared in evening clothes at the little bar of their hotel last night and had a cocktail each and then went out to dinner, returning at midnight. Before leaving Millicent asked the hotel maid to pack her trunks, as they were leaving early in the morning.

"No, I am remaining," replied Count Salm when the floor valet asked if he wanted his baggage packed also.

"Call madame at 6 o'clock and call me at noon," said Count Salm when they returned to the hotel.

Millicent arose at 6 o'clock, completed her packing, and a limousine containing her father called for her shortly after 7 o'clock, and the couple caught the boat train for Havre. The steamship France sailed at 1 o'clock.

Rogers Refuses to Talk.

Col. Rogers shouldered angrily past all intruders, declining to say a word, and Millicent, her eyes filled with tears and with head bowed, swathed in a heavy veil, paid no attention to any questions.

At noon Count Salm ordered his valet to pack his trunks. He telegraphed friends to the Italian customs agent at Milan to pay duty on certain baggage which had been held there and ordered it shipped to Vienna. Then he left the hotel bya side entrance to catch his train.

Driver Whose Truck Killed Man Faces 2 Year Term

Sheboygan, Wis., May 10.—August Fred Littman. Littman was run down or a fine of not more than $1,000 following his conviction by a jury here Saturday afternoon on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Fred Littmen. Littmen was run down and killed by a truck driven by Acker on April 6.

Hot Dog Stand Owner's Refectory Blazes Up

Residents in the vicinity of the South Shore Country club who have been trying to oust R. J. Siegel from his hot dog stand directly opposite the club entrance gathered hopefully last night when fire broke out in a refectory building he is building. It is claimed that Siegel garnered $40,000 in the last eighteen months from his concession, for which he pays the city $250 a year.

CONGRESS FIRM FOR JULY 1 BAN ON JAPANESE

Conferees Yield to House and Ignore Coolidge.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—Faced by the apparently unalterable opposition of the house to any delay in operation in the Japanese exclusion provisions of the immigration bill, conferees upon the measure today again agreed to make the exclusion section effective July 1, 1924.

The agreement has the effect of eliminating completely the proposal of President Coolidge that this government endeavor to negotiate the abrogation of the gentlemen's agreement prior to the effective date of exclusion.

House Wishes Respected.

As approved by the conference committee, the section prohibiting admission of "aliens ineligible to citizenship" stands as it came from the house. The senate version would have the section applicable on enactment of the bill.

The report of the conferees—the third to which they have affixed their signatures since the committee received the house and senate bills—probably will be laid before the house Monday. It will lie over a day under the rules and then will come up for adoption. Afterward it will go to the senate.

White House Is Silent.

There was no indication from the White House today that the President would take any further step to influence the senate and house conferees. Neither would White House officials forecast whether the bill would be approved by President Coolidge when finally submitted to him.

The only other important change made in the conference report was removal of the requirement that alien seamen entering ports of the United States must have identifying cards.

TRAIN KILLS 4 CITY EMPLOYES IN AUTOMOBILE

Struck by the St. Paul at Grade Crossing.

Four young men, city employés, bent on an inspection tour of city streets in a borrowed automobile, were killed yesterday when their car was struck and ground to pieces by a fast Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul passenger train at a grade crossing near Cicero and Sunnyside avenues.

All of the youths were precinct captains in the regular Democratic party, and were employés of the street cleaning department in the Forty-first ward. The dead:

JOSEPH MARINELLO, 5227 Argyle street.

PAUL ZIEBELL, 1934 North Halsted street.

Blinded by Rain.

The crossing was a temporary one, made difficult of passage by the work of track elevation at that point. The drizzling rain is believed to have affected the driver's vision and contributed materially to cause the accident.

Two of the men, Sullivan and Ziebell, were killed instantly, their bodies mangled beyond all recognition. They had tried to jump from the car when they saw their impending fate, fell to the ground and were cut to pieces by the engine's wheels.

By a strange coincidence, when firemen were summoned to help extricate the victims from the wreckage, it was Capt. Sullivan's company which responded. He was off duty, but even had he responded he could not have identified the mutilated body of his son.

The other two men, McNamara and Marinello, died a few minutes after they had been taken to the Montrose hospital. They had stayed in the car, and were hurled fifty feet from the point of impact. Neither recovered sufficiently to give any details concerning the crash.

Warnings Disregarded.

William Chenoweth, 1336 Fullerton avenue, the flagman at the crossing, said the driver of the car had disregarded his warning signals and sought to race the train across the crossing.

For over an hour the bodies were unidentified. Police traced ownership of the automobile to Benjamin Tvorah, 1700 North Rockwell streets. His mother said her son was in the Psychopathic hospital, and for a time police believed he had escaped and taken the car. Inquiry developed, however, that Tvorah still was in the hospital.

Mrs. Tvorah, when called by the police, first said the automobile was still in her garage, but she investigated and learned, she said, that the lock had been broken and the car taken. She believed the young men had borrowed it without telling her about it.

The train, known as No. 121, was crowded with passengers, and just swinging around a curve near the Mayfair station when the engineer spied the automobile. He ground on his brakes, but failed to stop in time to avert the tragedy.

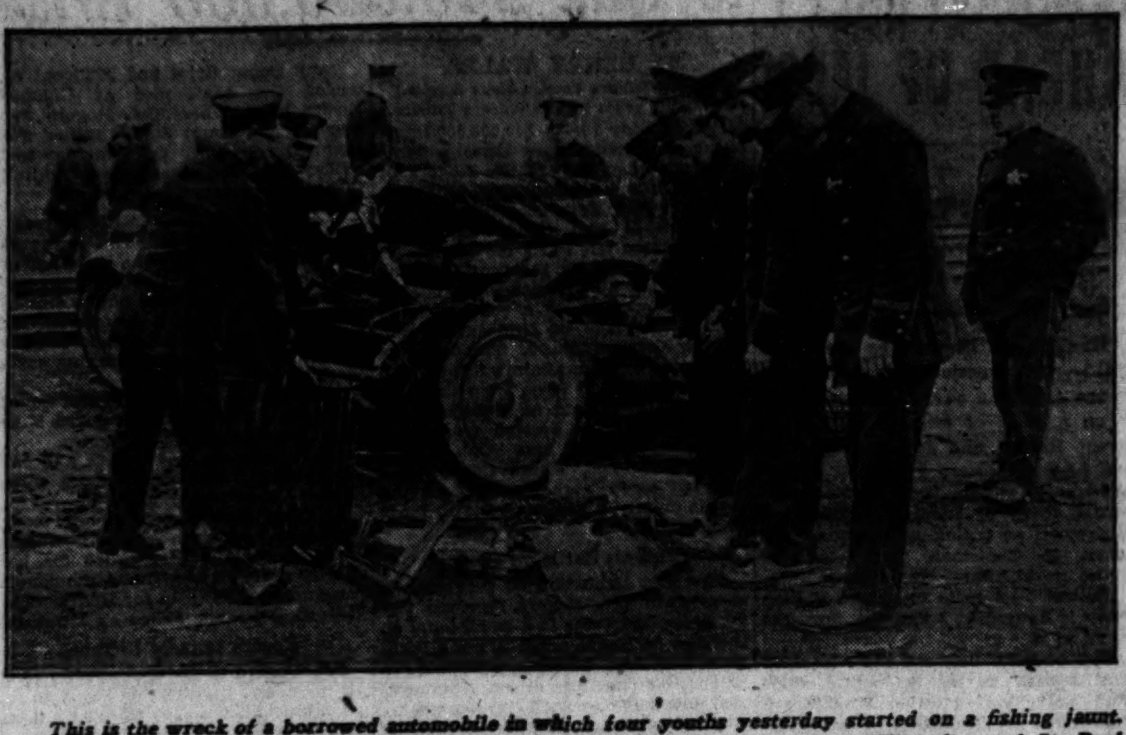
Ald. Thomas Bowler, in whose ward the men worked, said he had conferred with them early yesterday morning, and ordered them to inspect the streets, placing cinders where needed. When the crash occurred they were on the way to the Sunnyside avenue pumping station, just across the railroad tracks, to arrange for delivery of cinders.

The four deaths, and that also of Abraham Galinsky, 56, 1629 North California avenue, raised the motor death total in Cook county since Jan. 1 to a total of 192. Galinsky was struck in front of his home by an automobile driven by Matthew Peterson, 3030 Fulton street.

Mrs. J. L. Carnegie, 64, 832 East 90th street, died at Burnside hospital last night three hours after being struck by an automobile at 90th street and Cottage Grove avenue. The driver, John McGuire of 8954 Dauphin avenue, was arrested.

James Duffy, 4, 6829 St. Lawrence avenue, was probably fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by a motor truck driven by Frank Josalsky, 627 West 12th place. The boy was taken to the Washington Park hospital.

WHERE FOUR YOUTHS MET DEATH



This is the wreck of a borrowed automobile in which four youths yesterday started on a fishing jaunt. The car was struck at a grade crossing near Cicero and Sunnyside avenues by a Milwaukee and St. Paul passenger train.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Joseph Marinello, 5227 Argyle street, a third victim.

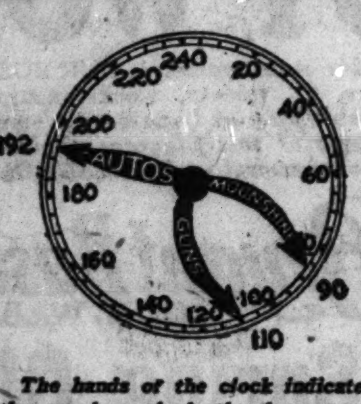
HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1 last.

3-GUN PREACHER LOSES ANOTHER CASE IN COURTS

"Sawed-Off" Freed by U. S. Judge.

The Rev. Elmer L. Williams, of the Better Government association, suffered further reversal in his efforts to supplement the work of the federal prohibition department, when United States Commissioner Henry C. Beitler yesterday threw another of his cases out of court.

Mr. Williams' recent record before the commissioner has resulted in the dismissal of defendants three times, while one was held to the grand jury.

Joseph "Sawed-off" Salzer was the last of Mr. Williams' quarry to be given his liberty by Commissioner Beitler. Salzer runs a restaurant at 708 South Dearborn street, and had been charged with selling a "shot of booze" to Harry Gartill, an investigator of Mr. Williams' staff.

Gartill, it was explained, represented himself as secretary to a Chicago police captain in prevailing upon Salzer to sell him a drink of whisky.

Gartill failed to show up at the hearing, so Mr. Williams sent in A. F. Bond, another investigator, to pinch hit for the absent sleuth.

Bond got all mixed up in his identifications, causing Commissioner Beitler to declare the reformer had no worthy evidence. He then threw out the case.

HEATLESS FLAT CASE HEADED TO SUPREME COURT

Landlords' responsibility for the health of their tenants is a matter of so great importance that the legal questions involved should be decided by the highest court in the state, it was ruled yesterday by Superior Judge Joseph B. David.

The judge overruled a motion for a retrial of a suit which a month ago brought a jury's verdict of $10,000 for Mrs. Helen F. Bornholdt, whose husband, Karl, died of pneumonia, supposedly from the effects of living in a cold flat. It is expected the case will be appealed to the Illinois Supreme court.

IKE BLOOM OUT OF FREIBERG'S FAMOUS HALL

Retires to Sell Cigars in the Loop.

Ike Bloom, these many years a patron of the dance, the song, and viands that please the early morning palate, ceased last night to be the impresario of Chicago's midnight revels and genial host at Freiberg's dance hall, at 18 East 22d street.

In the near future he hopes to emerge from French Lick Springs, where he is recuperating from an illness, as Isaac Gitelson, loop cigar merchant.

Won Pre-Volstead Fame.

Ike Bloom—Freiberg's; Freiberg's—Ike Bloom. For twenty-two years the names have been synonymous to those Chicagoans who seek diversion in the after theater hours and to thousands of travelers who speak of Freiberg's as one does of the Moulin Rouge of Montmartre, or did of Tait's in Frisco, or of Bustanoby's in New York, before prohibition swept those places into limbo.

The place, however, weathered prohibition's blight while other cabarets withered and died, and it still is to go on under the management of "Jakey" Adler, well known Chicago sportsman, though perhaps under another name.

Was Old German Hall.

Originally it was started as a German dance hall and weinstube in the old days by "Fritz" Freiberg, whose fiddling tunes made the reel and square dance and waltz popular long before syncopation brought the fox trot and the toddle.

Later the old levee swept southward and engulfed it. Freiberg sold out to Gitelson, known only to his thousands of acquaintances as Ike Bloom, and his brother, Sam.

Times Changed, Hall, Too.

It was Ike, however, who was the major domo, the real manager, the ever smiling host who greeted his patrons at the door and saw that they were assigned to their favorite places, either in the famous old balcony or on the fringe of the polished floor worn to a pefect smoothness through years of shuffling feet.

Bloom maintained an outward air of respectability about Freiberg's.

On Edge of Two Worlds.

There the respectable could dance on the same floor with the not so respectable. There politicians, actors, actresses, society slumming parties, bejeweled queens of many a First ward ball, and kings of the old levee were wont to gather nightly.

Reformers have arisen many times to put Freiberg's out of business, but it has held on. Bloom has been asked to sell out many times, but always when it came to closing the deal he backed down.

GUNS DRAWN AS THIRSTY CROWD FIGHTS FOR RUM

Villagers Real Mad at Dry Agents.

Prohibition agents from Chicago, under Group Chief Hamlet C. Ridgway, yesterday were forced to hold off at the point of guns residents of Thornton, Ill., while they poured out ten barrels of beer and a large quantity of wine seized in the roadhouse of Joseph Strajon, on the outskirts of the town.

On Friday Deputy U. S. Marshal John J. Cros and a crew went to Thornton and on court orders allowed 700 barrels of amber to gurgle down the creek—the last of the stores of the Beifeldt brewery.

Angers the Villagers.

This ceremony incensed the villagers. They had not got over their anger when the twenty dry agents dashed into town yesterday afternoon.

The raiders had no difficulty in locating the contraband. But when Major Ridgway pulled the bung on the first of the barrels, it was too much for a group of dry-throated spectators, who had observed the destruction of the day before.

A number of men organized and the crowd increased until the streets were jammed. Then the agents were "rushed" and the citizens sought to tote away the remaining liquor.

Crowd Is Dispersed.

While some of the agents covered the band with revolvers, Agents Johnson, Sandberg, and Daugherty dashed for shotguns they had concealed in their car. The crowd was rapidly dispersed.

After all of Mr. Strajon's booze had been destroyed, the raiders went to the Forest Garden roadhouse at Western avenue and 95th street. They got wine and two prisoners, Francis Johnson and Peter Miller.

COLLINS PLANS DRASTIC WAR ON BOMB GANGSTERS

Aroused by Increase of Blast Outrages.

Bombings have increased at such an alarming rate in Chicago during the last fortnight that Chief of Police Collins was reported last night to be contemplating forming special details of police to end the explosion terror.

More than a score of bombs have been touched off in the city since the first of the year. In the last two weeks there has been a steady increase, with one or two bombs being set off daily. Some have been set off for vengeance, others are said to have been "labor bombs," still others are ascribed to racial feuds.

Blast Shakes Buildings.

The latest bombing occurred early yesterday on the south side when two buildings were partly demolished and windows of homes in the surrounding three block radius were shattered.

The first bomb wrecked the Landerman Auto Supply company at 1912 Wabash avenue; the second wrecked a poolroom owned by Charles Strech at 5040 South Halsted street. In wrecking the supply house the police believe the bombers placed the explosive there by mistake. Just south of the auto supply company is located the painting and decorating concern of J. Bobbe & Co. The paint firm operates under the Landis award, which provides employment for union and nonunion painters. The struggle to maintain closed shop conditions for painters is believed by the police to be responsible for the bombing.

Another Labor Bomb.

The bomb which wrecked the poolroom was placed on the roof and had a fuse attachment with an electric socket in an adjoining building. Work on the building has been recently completed by Landis award mechanics.

As a result of warfare between two factions of Greek gamblers on the west side, the first bombing of 1924 occurred in front of a coffee house at 722-24 Blue Island avenue on Jan. 8.

On Jan. 17 a bomb exploded in a restaurant at 2003 West Division street. Miss Pearl Barkan was killed. According to the police version, the bombing resulted from warfare between the Chauffeurs' union, drivers of Checker cabs and officials of the Checker Cab company for control of the business end of the livery.

Curiosity Thwarts Bombers.

Curiosity on the part of Albert Freireich, nephew of Louis Freireich, owner of the Victory Manufacturing company, on Feb. 17 frustrated an attempt to blow up the establishment at 329 West Monroe street. He had been handed a satchel by a stranger. He pried it open and found a bomb timed to explode within a few hours. Election Commissioner Anthony Czarnecki's home was bombed two days later. Investigation of alleged election frauds was blamed.

With the exploding of alleged labor bombs and other missiles an occasional black hand bomb is touched off. On Feb. 23, Fiore Lamontagna's grocery store was wrecked by a bomb after he had ignored black hand letters. The same night the home of Joseph Moselli was partly demolished.

Labor disputes were blamed by the police for the bombing of a twenty-one flat building at 1146 East 45th street on Feb. 24. Police blamed a feud between gamblers as the cause. Last St. Patrick's day was ushered in by the bombing of Brice Armstrong's home at 2018 Mohawk street. Mr. Armstrong, a prohibition agent, said his activities in enforcing the eighteenth amendment was responsible for the outrage.

Blame Price War.

The dry cleaning establishment of "Hershie" Miller at 3832-36 North Clark street was bombed on March 14. Price cutting was held responsible.

Four Wounded as Gang Battles in Drink Parlor

A battle with knives yesterday in the soft drink parlor of Ulrich Vogt, 138 South Aberdeen street, which was supposed to have been closed by police order, resulted in the arrest of four men, including the proprietor. All of the combatants were wounded. A report that two men had been killed brought the police to the scene. Besides Vogt, those arrested were Philip Randolph, 1006 West Monroe street; Frank Cosgrove, 225 Racine avenue, and Thomas McGlinn, 2115 Roosevelt road.

TEN DAY LOVE HEGIRA ENDS IN PROSAIC COURT

A love hegira lasting ten days during which Stanley Pokorski, 4243 Archer avenue, owner of a shoe store, admitted he spent over $1,000 for clothes for his attractive first cousin, Mrs. Antoinette Kruszyski, 5206 South Wood street, ended yesterday in Judge Morgan's court when both were arraigned on serious charges. Mrs. Kruszyski took her two small children with her when she deserted her husband, Joseph, a clerk in the People's Stockyards bank. Kruszyski announced he would sue for a divorce but Mrs. Pokorski told the court she would take her husband back if he would promise not to see Mrs. Kruszyski again.

ADVENTURE ONCE MORE BECKONS—AS RUM CHASER

Dry Navy to Grow; Calls for Restless Youths.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Plans for the enlargement of the United States coast guard service in accordance with President Coolidge's plan for law enforcement and increasing the offensive against rum runners and smugglers were announced today by S. S. Yeandle, aid to the commandant.

It is pointed out that this service offers a new opportunity for adventurous young men who feel the call of the high seas and the trade winds, the midnight chase along the coast after the dark rum fleet, cruises in the arctic seas or in Pacific and West Indain waters, helping the army aviators in their flight around the world, or engaging in other activities of the service.

An Eye on Other Things.

The increase in the fleet is intended as a measure against smuggling of intoxicating liquors, narcotics and aliens in the United States. Under the act of April 21, last, 149 temporary commissioned officers, 400 temporary warrant officers and 2,245 enlisted men will be added to the service. An examination will be held June 16.

The coast guard service objects to the term "dry navy." It is, however, a naval service, trained, uniformed, and disciplined in a manner similar to that of the United States navy. The vessels are armed and in many cases are destroyers.

Opportunities Pointed Out.

"There are exceptional opportunites," Mr. Yeandler said, "for advancement for men enlisting in the coast guard, as there will be numerous ratings in all branches to be filled and men having previous navy service will have exceptional advantages. The rates of pay in the coast guard are the same as in the navy and all previous service in the navy or coast guard may be counted for pay purposes.

"Clothing and enlistment allowances will be paid ex-navy men enlisting in the coast guard. The appointment or enlistment in the coast guard of any member of the naval reserve force will not prejudice his status in the naval reserve force when his service in the coast guard shall have terminated, and such coast guard service may be counted as service in the naval reserve force."

"Fight to the Finish" in Teachers' War on Platoons

While the majority of the members of the board of education are preparing to back Superintendent of Schools William McAndrew in a "finish fight" to reorganize the teachers' councils, the Chicago Teachers' federation is mobilizing its forces for the real battle over what the teachers say is the underlying issue of the superintendent's first move.

The issue of the hour, the teachers say, is whether the platoon system shall be established in Chicago's schools. Supt. McAndrew is familiar with the system, and its supporters, who say it is a progressive educational movement as well as an economical measure, look to him to establish the system here. The move to abolish teachers' councils meeting during school hours was "an effort to choke off discussion of this subject," they assert.

Cuts Off Council Talk.

The school plan commission, which was appointed shortly after the arrival of the new superintendent to report on the platoon system and junior high schools, will not do so until June 1. This will not give the councils an opportunity to discuss the report.

Six weeks ago the thirty-nine group councils passed resolutions opposing the platoon system and gave eleven reasons for their stand against it. In the event the school plan commission recommends the system, which it is predicted they will, the teachers will fight it.

Briefly, the platoon system in the elementary schools is this:

Half of the pupil's time is spent with one teacher and devoted to fundamental subjects, viz.: reading, writing and arithmetic, called the "tool" subjects. The remainder of the day is devoted to special subjects under other teachers, including science, nature study, music, and play. For these the pupil goes from room to room, where the special subjects are taught. Thus a pupil may have instruction from three to five teachers each day.

Advocates of the system declare it to be a relief from the cast in the mold plan which is the product of the traditional school. They also contend it is an economical move, pointing out that a building which now accommodates eighteen classes can be converted under the platoon plan so as to take care of twenty-four classes. The plan calls for special buildings designed to include auditoriums, gymnasiums, and playgrounds, as well as class and special rooms.

Now in Sixty-three Cities.

The system is in operation in sixty-three cities in twenty-three states.

The teachers say that the lower grades are under too much of a strain, due to confusion and disorder. The acquisition of knowledge rather than the development of mind is another of the principal objections voiced by the teachers. The long day, short noon hour, physical fatigue from frequent changes from one room to another, loss of personal contact with one teacher, and too much clerical work are some of the charges on which the teachers will base their fight.

McANDREW SAFE IN COUNCIL ACT; BOARD O. K.'S HIM

Poll of Trustees Shows It May Not Hear Charges.

If the board of education hears the charges of violation of the board rules against Supt. William McAndrew in not calling teachers' council meetings, he will be acquitted, it was indicated from a poll of the trustees yesterday.

The charges were brought by Miss Margaret Haley of the Chicago Teachers' federation on April 30. They demanded that the superintendent be dismissed.

"There are no grounds for the charges, as Mr. McAndrew was acting on legal advice in not calling meetings," Miss Grace E. Temple, trustee and vice president of the board, said. "Later, when the school attorneys reversed their opinon that he was compelled to call the meetings, he complied."

Miss Temple expressed confidence that every member of the board would vote to dismiss the charges.

It was even indicated that the charges might not be presented to the board for formal action, but would merely be placed on file. Miss Haley then, it was pointed out, would have to carry her case to the courts.

Efforts to push the reorganization of the teachers' councils, which were to be considered at the board meeting this week, may be deferred for some time, President Moderwell said. At present six trustees are lined up for the proposition. This is a majority.

The terms of four board members expired May 1. Two of them are in favor of the reorganization, and Mayor Dever said he would reappoint them. They are William K. Fellows and Julius F. Smietanka.

William Makepeace Thackeray

Because he looked at people, saw what they were, and found it enjoyable "occasionally to step down from the platform to talk about them"—to love them, to laugh at them, or to abuse them; because with what good he found he also boldly revealed their wickedness, stupidity or hypocrisy, many have believed that William Makepeace Thackeray, like so many of his characters, was a confirmed cynic.

Yet one cannot study a book like Vanity Fair and not realize that here stand typical men and women, real people displaying characteristic traits and weaknesses that are not Thackeray's—but theirs.

A mind like Thackeray's—intensely active, observant and penetrating—is able perforce to accomplish an amazing degree of work. Yet there is a peculiar drawback when eyes that are weak accompany an intellect so remarkably strong. So it was that Thackeray felt the constant need of eyeglasses.

If he were with us now he would enjoy a degree of eyeglass efficiency and comfort then unknown. Today glasses are obtainable in the Almer Coe Stores that represent the ultimate in scientific accuracy—the best that optical science has produced.

U. S. FLYERS AT ATTU; WILL HOP NEXT TO JAPAN

Tune Planes for Flight of 878 Miles.

Bremerton, Wash., May 10.—[By Associated Press.]—On Attu island, farthest west bit of land belonging to North America, three pilots of the United States army air service rested tonight awaiting the moment when they can take the longest jump of their flight around the world.

Prepare for Next Jump.

It was believed here that the flyers at Attu, commanded now by Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, would use several days preparing for their flight of 878 miles to the Kurile islands of Japan. Well rested by hunting, fishing, hiking and sailing on Atka island, they yesterday did the 530 miles to Attu in ten hours and fifteen minutes.

For the leap to Japan, the stopping point of which is on Paramashiru island, one of the Kuriles, at the very north of the empire, elaborate preparations have been in progress for months. Two United States navy destroyers and two Japanese have been hovering in the Kuriles waiting for the American aviators. The United States fisheries boat Eider received the flyers at Attu, and the United States coast guard cutter Haida saw them off at Atka.

D'Oisy Reaches Siam.

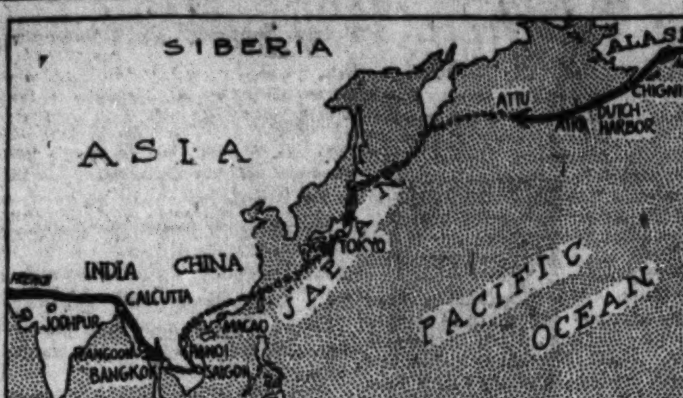
BANGKOK, Siam, May 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Another successful jump on his flight from Paris to Tokio was made today by Lieut. Pelletier D'Oisy, the French aviator. Setting out from Rangoon, whence he had flown from Calcutta yesterday after a brief delay in the latter city to make repairs, the flyer reached Bangkok safely at 5:10 this afternoon. Intense heat made today's flight difficult, as it evaporated the water and clogged the carburetor. Lieut. Doisy intends to take off for Hanoi tomorrow.

SEARCH FOR MAJ. MARTIN

BY LIEUT. B. J. BROWN JR.
[United States Army Air Service, Chairman, World Flight Committee.]

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—The search for Maj. Frederick L. Martin, the missing commander of the American world flight, and his mechanic, Sergt. Alva L. Harvey, from whom no word has been received since they left Chignik, Alaska, on April 30 in the airplane the Seattle, bound for Dutch Harbor, continues in the interior of Alaskan peninsula and on the northern side of the peninsula. An exhaustive search of the Pacific coast southwest of Chignik has failed to reveal any trace of the missing aviators.

ADVANCE OF GLOBE-GIRDLING FLYERS



Three U. S. planes are now in Chicagoff, Attu Island, one of the Aleutians, preparing for their next jump of 878 miles to Paramashiru Island, Japan. This flight will take them across the north end of the Pacific ocean. The flyers made the jump from Atka to Attu Friday.

The Paris to Tokio flyer reached Bangkok, Siam, yesterday. The Frenchman is encountering sever heat while the Americans are fighting subzero cold of the Arctics.

The United States coast guard cutter Algonquin has left Chignik and is now at Dutch Harbor refueling, after which it will search the Bering sea side of the peninsula. The search along the Bering sea coast has thus far only covered the territory in the vicinity of Port Moller and Herrendeen bay, as the bay sand inlets on the north side of the peninsula are still jammed with ice, and it has been impossible to make a thorough search in coastwise vessels. No word has yet been received from the dog sled expeditions making an inland search.

The North American Newspaper alliance has offered a reward of $1,000 to the first person to reach either Maj. Martin or Sergt. Harvey, or their airplane Seattle, or to the person or persons first to furnish definite information resulting in the discovery of the acual fate of the flyers. The special correspondent of the alliance on board the United States coast guard cutter Algonquin is broadcasting this message to all radio stations at canneries, to all ships, and to all trapping and trading posts, and is procuring Indian runners to spread the news among the Aleutian Indians in the interior. The same message is being broadcasted among other radio stations along the Alaskan coast.

The chief of air service has directed that an airplane be shipped to Chignik to make a complete reconnaissance of the barren and desolate interior, where it is felt that the aviators may be stranded. Hope for their rescue alive is still entertained, as there have been several notable cases where lost aviators, after wandering in uninhabited areas for weeks, have finally worked their way to safety.

Maj. Martin and his mechanic had emergency rations, fishing tackle, and firearms, as well as warm clothing with them, so it is quite possible that they are safe and well, but have been held up by deep snow and cold weather.

A Curtiss training type airplane, powered with a 180 horse power eight cylinder Wright engine, is the type selected for the search. This machine has a speed of about eighty miles an hour and was selected rather than a larger plane, because it can land and take off in comparatively small fields. A flying officer and a mechanic are leaving for Chignik with this airplane on May 12 on board the coast guard cutter Bear, sailing on that date from Seattle, Wash.

Attu, where the flyers are waiting to hop off for Japan, is the last of the Alutian islands and the westernmost bit of land connected with the North American continent. Technically this outpost is in the eastern hemisphere, as it lies west of the 180th degree of longitude, but the international date line has been bulged out to include all the Aleutians in the same system. The Aleutian islands are the crests of submerged peaks, forming part of the Alaskan mountain system. Many of these peaks are volcanic, but all are at present practicaly inactive.

Weather Is Changeable.

At this time of year the weather in the Aleutians is very changeable, so that within a few hours the wind direction may change 180 degrees and rain change to snow. High winds are frequent, and fogs are prevalent during the early morning. These, however, dissipate during the morning, and good flying conditions would normally occur late in the morning and during the afternoon.

Attu is farther west than Hawaii, and is in the same longitude as is New Zealand. In summer the sun is setting in Attu when it is rising in Maine. On their next hop the flyers will cross the international date line, so that as soon as they rise from the harbor they will lose a day and plunge directly into another day without the lapse of any time.

It was anticipated that fogs and cloudy weather would be encountered in the Aleutian islands and in the Kurile islands of Japan. The northernmost of the Kuriles are uninhabited, so that no assistance can be expected in case of misfortune. The aviators are taking no chances with the weather.

FEDERAL AGENTS GRILL CITY COPS IN BOOZE CASE

Public announcement that Lieut. Michael Grady of the detective bureau and his squad have been grilled concerning possible knowledge of the manner in which 8,000 cases of Sibley warehouse stolen booze was convoyed was made at the federal building yesterday.

Although Chief Special Agent A. F. Madden of the intelligence unit and his assistants, Pat Roche and C. W. Converse, have attempted to veil their operations in secrecy, their activities have been a matter of gossip in police and bootleg circles for more than two months, it is said.

It was made known that the government expects to eventually indict twenty-five persons for alleged complicity in the looting of the Sibley depot.

WIDOW DEDICATES $1,000,000 SCHOOL IN HONOR OF HARDING

Bridgeport, Conn., May 10.—Mrs. Florence Kling Harding, with a silver trowel, laid the cornerstone of the new $1,000,000 Warren Harding High school here this afternoon in the presence of a gathering of 5,000 parents, school children, and city officials. The trowel was presented to her by Vera Shaughnessey, daughter of William J. Shaughnessey Jr., president of the Eastern Engineering and Constructing company, general contractors for the school.

Mrs. Harding arrived here this morning at 11:24 and left shortly after the corner stone ceremonies for New York with George B. Christian, secretary to the late President.

Judge John S. Pullman, the principal speaker, advocated America's participation in a world court.

C. W. MIDDLEKAUF DARES LANDIS TO DEBATE WITH HIM

Former Federal Judge Kenesaw M. Landis was challenged by C. W. Middlekauf, assistant United States attorney general, yesterday to face him before the Chicago Bar association in a debate on the merits of the Grossman pardon case.

"The questions involved are questions which require persons with a knowledge of the law to understand," Mr. Middlekauf said. "I am willing to meet Judge Landis before the Chicago Bar association and let the records in the Grossman case be read, the record before the Brookhart committee by him and me, the telegrams exchanged between us and each of us given equal time in which to make a statement.

"This ought to please Judge Landis for his is a vaudevillian while I am only a plain lawyer."

TENANTS TELL OF NEW GRAFT BY LANDLORDS

A new system used by south side landlords came to light in Judge Samuel H. Trude's court yesterday when witnesses testified to making first rent payments only later to be informed their prospective flats had been leased to others. Several enterprising property owners have recently adopted the practice of accepting deposits from any number of applicants and of eventually selecting the tenants of their choice, it was charged.

An excited mob of tenants and landlords occupied the attention of Judge Trude until far into the afternoon. At times the court, by way of stemming the rising tide of indignation between various landlords and tenants, threatened to "lock up everybody concerned until you can come in here in a calmer mood."

INQUIRY SHOWS HOW ALMS HELP HOMES FOR AGED

Sunset Days of the Life Worn Made Calm.

Yearly Chicago gives thousands of dollars to charity. Too often the gifts are perfunctory and forgotten at once by the giver. Throughout the year, however, that money is building a treasury of happiness and comfort for unfortunates who without Chicago's hastily given alms would be facing want, misery, and tragedy. This story is to point to no aching needs, but is a little "behind the scenes" glimpse of the happiness Chicago's charity is bringing to obscure and suffering people—to show what huge returns in the spirit these perfunctory gifts are piling up for the givers. Several charities have been visited at random, so that the work done in each charity mentioned is only an example of the type of work all charities of that class are doing.

BY MAUREEN M'KERNAN.

In Chicago there are 2,200 old men and women who would be homeless were it not for the thirty-one homes for the aged and infirm. There are outside these homes at least 1,000 more, begging for even a cot in the corner, as refuge from illness, neglect, dark back room corners, and cold.

In all these homes the same sad tales are told—forgetful children, business reverses that have wiped away savings of a lifetime, old men worn out on meager paying jobs that at their best gave only a hand to mouth living and no provision for an old age.

There are old men and women at St. Joseph's Home for the Aged at 2649 North Hamlin avenue who offer typical cases that are duplicated a hundred times in the other Chicago homes—cases that show how by the chance donations of Chicago people, on tag day and by gifts, to these homes sunshine and happiness, peace and comfort have been brought to old people who were broken and crushed by life.

All by a Little Effort.

Their gratitude is embarrassing—their happiness because they have a clean bed of their own, a corner in a cottage all their own, time to pray and time to sit in the sun and talk with cronies, good food and kindness instead of neglect and the vicarious charity of a neighborhood—it's most pathetic—especially when it is realized that all this has come by such little effort from the donators who make it possible.

One happy old man putters all day about a chicken yard, raising broilers to tempt feeble and aged appetites and gathering new laid eggs that will make a gala Sunday morning breakfast for every one. He was a janitor who worked for a lifetime with one establishment and was thrown out when he wore out, with the old furnace—and forgotten, just as the scrap iron was forgotten.

When Hearts Are Cold.

A whimpering at the vestibule door one cold, blustery night last winter brought the sisters to find a huddled old woman, ill, partially paralyzed, almost unable to explain that she had been dropped there by unfeeling relatives. The sisters traced the relatives, and made them pay for the old woman's care, but some one's forgotten alms gave that poor old creature a bed and warm food and kindness while the sisters righted her wrongs.

One day an old woman hobbled up the path and sallied with an air into the office. Toothless and quavering, she with difficulty explained that she had bonds to pay for her care the rest of her life. Some jokester had given her stage money and told her to go to the home. It had not been stage money which had been given by some Chicago man who made it possible for St. Joseph's to keep the poor old soul. The forgotten gifts of some Chicago man or woman has given this woman food and care and happiness the rest of her life.

LIFE'S AUTUMN TIME

Tomorrow sees the launching of a tag day drive for aged and adult charities. Here are flower gardens at St. Joseph's home, 2649 North Hamlin avenue, typical of the city's thirty-one institutions now caring for 2,200 old men and women who otherwise would be homeless.

BOOTLEGGERHELD WHEN A WOMAN CUSTOMER DIES

Fred Brill of 1554 South Keeler avenue was held to the grand jury on a manslaughter charge yesterday after a coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Frank Thomas, 1533 South Keeler avenue, was informed that she had been a moonshine customer of Brill's.

Mrs. Thomas committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid. Crying: "Well, this is my last drink!" she drank the poison when her husband scolded her for refusing to stop tippling moonshine.

The jury decided that the booze purchased from Brill was an indirect cause of the woman's death.

PRESIDENT OPENS BETTER HOME WEEK BY RADIO ADDRESS

Washington, D. C., May 10.—Nationwide celebration of "better homes week" was opened by President Coolidge tonight with an address broadcast by radio from the White House, in which he urged coöperation of women's clubs, civic and commercial associations, and of the pulpit and press in a movement to strengthen and improve the home.

Meetings and demonstrations will be held during the week in more than a thousand cities, towns and rural communities to educate the American people as to the homes which should be built and equipped.

"The American home is the source of our national well being," the President said. "In it our high traditions of service and integrity are fostered. From the true home there emerges respect for the rights of others, and the habit of coöperating for worthy ends. Through sharing its common enterprises and common sacrifices, the child develops that sturdiness of character which distinguishes the manhood and womanhood of our land."

THIS J. P. ISN'T AWED BY EVEN MR. FRED LUNDIN

Waukegan, Ill., May 10.—[Special.]—Fred Lundin, the "king maker" of Illinois, was given a severe bump by an ordinary justice of the peace in his own home county today.

Lundin stepped forward when the case of R. E. Osman, chauffeur for Mrs. William Barclay, his sister, was called before Justice M. S. Miller. Osman was charged with speeding through Lake Villa, where Lundin has his summer home.

"There's nothing to this case," said Lundin in effect. "You can't tell where the country ends and the village begins."

"That's enough of that," interrupted the court. "You've been having a pretty loose rope around here, but now I'm just going to tighten it up on you."

He then fixed the chauffeur's bail at $100 and continued the hearing until next Saturday.

"I'll fight this to the Supreme court!" was Lundin's parting protest.

WIFE NABBED WITH ANOTHER MAN.

Mrs. Chris Christiansen, 2637 Prairie avenue, and Alex Fredericks, 1240 West Jackson boulevard, were arrested yesterday on charges preferred by Christiansen.

TIME JUST RIGHT TO OBTAIN RARE LINCOLN RELICS

Move by the Public Is All It Needs.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Resolutions in both houses of congress for the purchase for $50,000 of the incomparable Oldroyd collection of 3,000 Lincoln relics, pictures and documents have reached that "ready to jell" stages where prompt action by citizens of the republic and the press will bring their immediate passage.

It is not likely that anything else will.

And if such action is not taken the nation's opportunity to secure the most intimate Lincoln memorabilia in existence will pass forever, and the Oldroyd collection will be removed from the house in which Abraham Lincoln died and pass into private ownersrip.

Lincoln Collector Since Boyhood.

Osborn H. Oldroyd has reached his 81st year. Since he was a newsagent 17 years old in Mount Vernon, O., he has been a Lincoln collector. Prints, books, photographs, furniture, wearing apparel, letters, medals, life masks, busts, sermons, funeral marches—everything by or about Abraham Lincoln that he could lay his hands on, this gentle, quiet-speaking Mr. Oldroyd has been bringing to the Washington house in 10th street, between E and F streets, where Lincoln died.

Here you may see the handwriting of Lincoln when he was a boy of 9 years, and the last lines that President Lincoln ever wrote—lines which, characteristically enough, conferred a favor and a kindly assurance to persons not known to him.

Two weeks ago a rich man from New York, who wishes to present the collection to his university, offered the owner $125,000 for it.

"No," said Mr. Oldroyd gently, "I'll wait a little longer and see whether Congressman Rathbone's resolution for purchase by the government passes the house this session. If it does not, I must consider one of the other offers. At 81 a man knows he has not many more days, and the family must be left comfortable.

Cherished for the Nation.

"But ever since this collection began to assume proportions and became important it has been my dream that the United States would ultimately own it. I wanted it to become the nation's possession. I don't want it to be broken up or removed from this house, where, of all places on earth, it ought to be.

"You know, it was in that back room yonder that Stanton said, 'Now he belongs to the ages,' when Surgeon Taft looked up and said that Mr. Lincoln's pulse had stopped. It was in that room that Robert Lincoln fell a-weeping on Charles Sumner's shoulder when he heard those words. The floor of the room is the same as it was on that April night fifty-nine years ago. The wall paper is the same, the old steel engraving of the village smithy that hung above the bed on which Mr. Lincoln died still hangs on the wall.

Look to Illinois for Aid.

I saw Congressman Rathbone about the matter today. He said:

"I wish THE TRIBUNE would rouse the interest of the state that gave Lincoln to the nation for the great task of keeping us a nation.

"The urgent thing is to secure for the government, and so for all the people for all time, these treasures so intimately associated with great days and a supreme personality.

"If THE TRIBUNE can give me news of developments in Illinois relative to this project it will be a satisfaction to me to bring any movement that may be launched among Lincoln's home folks to the attention of the library committee of the house of representatives."

May Restore Death Bed.

If either the Rathbone or the Willis bill passes there is an excellent prospect that the bed on which Mr. Lincoln died will be returned to the room in which he died.

That piece of furniture, around which the members of the cabinet stood during nine hours of perhaps the most woeful night in American annals, and at which Mrs. Lincoln knelt, passed by purchase to the late Charles Gunther of Chicago. A few months before his death he promised Mr. Oldroyd he would restore the bed to the death room, but he died before he could fulfill the promise. Nor did his heirs fulfill it.

The bed went, with other Gunther treasures, to the Chicago Historical society.

The historical society, it is understood in Chicago, now very handsomely undertakes to restore the bed to the death chamber if the Rathbone bill assuring the permanency of the whole Oldroyd collection passes.

In the rooms of the Historical society the bed is only an object for curious glances; in the death room it would complete a solemn and historic picture. That it ought to be here is obvious.

House in Which He Died.

The government owns the house in which Abraham Lincoln died. Without the Oldroyd collection it will be an empty shell; with it the house is a poignant and eloquent chapter in the history of our country.

If every subscriber to THE TRIBUNE who senses the value of the Oldroyd collection wrote or wired the library committee of the house of representatives an expression of his wish that these treasures be made a national possession you can bet the Rathbone bill would pass before congress adjourns for the June conventions.

Henry Ford could not get away with this collection. He sat at Osborn Oldroyd's desk in the front room of the historic house a year ago and waggled a check book at the venerable man and said, "I'll give you $50,000."

"And take the collection away?" quavered Mr. Oldroyd.

"Yes," said Ford.

"No," said Oldroyd, not quavering any more.

CONRAD SUNDMACHER. [Gentzel Photo.]

Conrad Sundmacher, 5154 Foster avenue, a pioneer draftsman who designed the first cars used by the Illinois Central railroad in 1860, will celebrate his 91st birthday on Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Glade, 2119 Giddings street. Mr. Sundmacher was born in Hanover, Germany, and has been a resident of Chicago since 1854. A son, August Sundmacher, five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren will attend the reunion.

40,000 FASCISTI GATHER IN HALLE FOR GERMAN DAY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, May 10.—A great test of the monarchist reactionary strength will take place at Halle tomorrow when Gen. von Ludendorff, Admiral von Tirpitz, and other leaders of the former kaiser's Germany will review 40,000 Fascisti, celebrating German day.

The official object of the fascisti gathering is the restoration of the monument to Gen. von Moltke, alleged to have been destroyed by the communists when they controlled the town.

The government has forbidden the communists from holding a demonstration on the same day to avoid a clash. The communist leaders, however, are urging their followers to come by the thousands and are hinting that they bring arms. The fascisti likewise are planning to bring arms.

A NEW SERVICE FOR CHICAGO

The YELLOW DRIVE-IT-YOURSELF SYSTEM offers a new motor car service to Chicago. A Service which places an automobile at your disposal without the expense or responsibility of ownership. Drive it when and where you wish, and stay as long as you want to.

The YELLOW DRIVE-IT-YOURSELF SYSTEM is a reliable, financially strong organization, backed by a group of successful, representative business men. It owns a fleet of new Ford and Willys-Knight cars and is equipped with ample facilities to give you prompt service at any time of the day or night.

How to Rent-A-Car

There is no red tape, bother or unnecessary delay to this service. Simply go to the YELLOW DRIVE-IT-YOURSELF station, tell them who you are and the car you want to drive—coupe, sedan or touring car.

In less than five minutes you will be on the road. You will be driving a brand new car, filled with gasoline and oil, equipped with a spare tire, and protected by insurance, resembling in every respect a privately owned automobile. OUR CARS ARE NOT PAINTED YELLOW.

An Economical Service

It costs you less to drive a YELLOW DRIVE-IT-YOURSELF car than to own one yourself. You have no depreciation on a heavy investment. You have no repair bills, storage, insurance or upkeep bills to pay.

Your only cost is a few cents per mile while you are actually using the car. We require no guarantee of mileage or length of time. Drive one mile or a thousand, as you wish.

Schedule of Rates

There is a flat mileage charge on all cars on week days up to 6:00 P. M. After that hour on week days and all day on Saturdays, Sundays and Holidays there is an additional charge of 25 cents per hour on Ford cars and 35 cents per hour on Willys-Knight cars.

When cars are used for more than one day, this per hour charge is reduced. The rates per mile are as follows—and INCLUDE GASOLINE, OIL AND INSURANCE.

Ford Cars

Touring and Roadster, per mile 12c
Sedan or Coupe, per mile... 15c

Willys Knight Cars

Open cars, per mile......... 17c
Closed cars, per mile....... 20c

A small deposit is required when a car is taken out. This amounts to $15.00 on new Ford cars and $25.00 on new Willys-Knight cars, for one-day service. Additional deposit required when cars are to be used more than one day.

This Service Is for You

No matter what your motor car needs may be, the YELLOW DRIVE-IT-YOURSELF SYSTEM can meet them. Here is a service that fits every purse and every demand.

Salesmen who call on customers or who carry samples need this service.

It is ideal for pleasure trips. Take your family or your friends for a drive.

It fits the needs of week-end and vacation trips to surrounding lakes, resorts, forest preserves and other places of interest.

Visitors in Chicago can see our city and suburbs in comfort and at small expense.

Doctors, lawyers, real estate, insurance and all business and professional men will find this service convenient.

Just the thing for hunting or fishing trips.

If your own car is being repaired or painted—rent-a-car from us.

Open day and night. Plenty of cars, prompt and courteous service.

THE ATTACK ON THE SUPREME COURT.

Many Americans who have a reasoned regard for the American system of government and a clear conception of the principles which inform it are concerned at the movement to restrict the powers of the Supreme court. So well informed and loyal a defender of our constitutional system as former Senator Beveridge is of the opinion that the attack upon the court is better organized and more formidable at this time than ever before. We confess lack of information as to this and are disposed, mistakenly, perhaps, to be more optimistic, for certainly there is no public man now engaged in the attack upon the court who is so influential as was Jefferson or Jackson, and the public discussion seems not as virulent as it has been on former occasions.

Nevertheless there is quite enough criticism to justify serious and vigorous defense. Several proposals for "curbing the court," as the phrase goes, are before the present congress. One proposes an amendment of the constitution to prohibit the court from holding any congressional act invalid for unconstitutionality. Another proposes that any act held unconstitutional by the court shall be valid if passed a second time by congress. Another proposes that no act shall be held unconstitutional by fewer than seven votes of the nine. Some of the most influential men of congress, judges, legal writers, and public men, and notably labor organizations, support some form of restriction.

It is therefore plain that a defense of the court is called for, and, as Mr. Beveridge remarks in his new volume of essays, "The State of the Nation," it must or should be led by the American bar. But the press, too, has a grave responsibility in this controversy, and we trust will give it fullest consideration and discussion. We have every confidence that if the part played by the court in our history is fairly reviewed and its service in the protection of American principles of liberty be impartially, not superficially, examined, the prestige of the court will be renewed and its full powers retained.

And we think the threshold of any discussion should be swept clear of the inference that the court is constantly declaring legislation invalid. Laymen would naturally gather from most attacks upon the court that it has spent virtually all of its time since it was founded in thwarting the will of congress. The arguments for restriction are full of phrases like usurpation, defeating the will of the people, autocratic, undemocratic, curb the powers of the court, all of which give false inferences and fill the mind of the uninformed layman with the picture of a mythical tyrant, enemy of freedom, ruthlessly undoing the beneficent efforts of the legislature and working day and night declaring laws unconstitutional and void.

There is no foundation for such a conception of the court. Its duty to declare acts of congress contrary to the constitution when in its opinion they are so has been exercised with great restraint and infrequency. For example, take the outcry against five to four decisions. Examination of the reports has disclosed the fact that the court has given a decision on a constitutional point by a five to four decision just nine times in all its life of over a century and a quarter. Several of these decisions were made contrary to a strong body of public opinion at the time and offended highly organized groups. But unless the court is independent and courageous enough to resist what happens at the moment to be popular it ceases to be of any value as a defender of our American principles, of our fundamental law, and of the individual rights declared thereby.

The court, being made up of human beings, is not infallible nor are its decisions above criticism. None of its defenders would assert that. But the impression given by its critics that it is a persistent obstructor of the reasoned will of the public, a bulwark of unjust privilege, and an oppressor of the weak is a grotesque distortion of the facts. Yet if the facts were permitted to offset the emotional appeal of critics of the court the effort to restrict its beneficent powers would collapse like a punctured balloon. Therefore we have a good deal of rhetoric and comparatively few facts, with a concentration on the cases in which the court has expressed views held "reactionary."

This is good tactics from the viewpoint of the advocates of restriction, but it does not present a truthful picture. It leaves out of consideration the many cases in which the court protected weakness against strength and conserved principles of vital moment to American liberty and progress. We shall discuss the attack on the court as an unpopular institution another day. Our purpose at this time is merely to point out that the advantage to the restriction movement derived from wrong inferences as to the use of its powers actually made by the court during its life should be exploded by the facts. Lawyers' defenses of the court are too technical. The public should first be shown how little support there is to be found in the long record of the court for the solemn indictment of its critics.

Next we think it should be clear in simplest terms that restriction of the power of the court to pass upon the constitutionality of an act means opening the way to a complete disintegration of our constitutional system and to the establishment of unrestricted rule by the legislative branch of government. We shall go into that another time, but in the meanwhile we say that the critics of the court should not be allowed to impress upon the lay public, as they are doing to some extent, the fallacy that the constitution does not represent the will of the American people. Advocates of restriction are always asserting that a rejection of an act passed by the legislative branch of government is a defeat of the will of the people, and we are asked to assume that it is only the legislature that expresses the people's will. That is a theory that our forefathers who created and adopted the American system of ordered liberty repudiated, being well aware from their own experience that a legislature could be tyrannical, unwise, and unresponsive to the people's will or interest.

Many Americans of this generation do not seem to have learned what the American system is. What is not understood cannot be valued, and is not therefore likely to be preserved. The attack upon the Supreme court is an attack not merely upon one of our institutions, but upon the central defense of that system. If it succeeds, not merely the court goes, but the American system goes.

WE VIEW WITHOUT TOO MUCH ALARM.

We think that Mr. Hearst and other gentlemen of great incomes are unduly alarmed over the tax bills passed by the senate. A reduction of the surtax maximum to twenty-five per cent would have encouraged industry. It will be written into the law when experience has taught the legislators the laws of economics. We can agree with the critics of the tax ideas of congress, but at the same time it is vain to deny that a reduction is a reduction. Any amelioration in taxes is helpful to industry as well as pleasant to the individual and the bill makes a reduction. Inasmuch as it does it is good.

Violent exception cannot be taken to the tax on undivided profits. The provision as drawn is crude. The establishment of a line penalizing the retention of more than thirty per cent of the annual profits is a mistake. If the penalty line were moved up to fifty per cent it could be justified. The penalty as it stands is on conservative management. It will encourage wildcatting. It will promote bankruptcies and unemployment. But the provision is right in theory and can be made right in effect.

As the law now stands an individual owning 100 per cent of the stock of a company can withhold dividends from himself, thereby putting himself in a favored class and escaping with the payment of a much smaller percentage of taxes than should be collected from him. It so happens that the richest man in America, Henry Ford, occupies this favored position in the automobile industry.

Of the publicity feature of the bill we have spoken before. Insofar as it is intended to concentrate attention on large fortunes and prevent the evasion of taxation it will prove futile. It is unnecessary. Wealth does not hide, as some blind or nearsighted senators seem to think. It is always ostentatious in automobiles, yachts, brown stone fronts, and diamonds, much more striking to the imagination in these forms than in treasury statistics. Public attention cannot be long held by government publications. We doubt that there is any more dishonesty in the administration of the tax laws than there is in any other branch of government, including the congressional, where everything is supposed to be done in public. As for exposure, when the present senatorial committee is adjourned the public will be surfeited with muckraking for another decade.

Two excellent provisions have found their way into the bill. The one was offered by Senator Walsh, Democrat of Massachusetts, changing the taxes on estates to taxes on inheritances, thereby equalizing them as between beneficiaries. Again real statesmanship is found in the provision of Senator Moses of New Hampshire partially exempting from income taxation the money spent in reforestation.

Relief is offered the country in the provision that twenty-five per cent of the taxes now being collected shall be remitted. The new tax bill may not be ideal, but it is a relief from present taxes and relief should not fail because men cannot adjust their differences or because they do not want to adjust them. There must be compromises. The President may not think congress has acted in full wisdom. Congress may not think that the President and Mr. Mellon advise well, but this conflict of opinion ought not to lead to a veto and a deadlock which stops all relief.

That will be the worst thing and it is avoidable. Congress should recede somewhat on its surtaxes and on taxing undivided profits and Mr. Coolidge should meet it half way.

WHAT THE RAILROADS MEAN TO THE WEST.

When the Union Pacific railroad was projected after the civil war, virtually every one doubted that it would ever pay. The project was primarily supported by political and military considerations. The former was based on the recognized need of binding the Pacific coast states to the eastern United States. Between the west coast and the inhabited middle west lay a vast region known as the Great American desert. Communication with California and Oregon through this wilderness of alkali plain and towering mountain ranges was arduous and dangerous. The favored route was by sea around the Horn or to Panama, across the isthmus, and again by sea to one's destination in the north.

These were very unsatisfactory paths of communication, and it was generally realized that if the rich and fertile region which lay between the mountains and the Pacific was to be kept within the Union and made a part of the American community, and if it was to be defended by the nation from attack, there must be a bridging of the Great American desert.

Hence the project for a railroad to unite east and west. Hence congressional aid and public grants. Without them no one would have dared to undertake such an enterprise or invest in it, for how could a profitable traffic be expected from the leagues of desert to be crossed?

Yet that desert is now a rich and prosperous and well populated region, where agriculture thrives, cities and towns are established, great railway systems run, and wealth and well being exist. We have forgotten the nightmare of the Great American desert and are proud of Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Colorado, the Dakotas, and Montana, to say nothing of the more western states in the heart of the mountain ranges. In fact, hardly had the Union Pacific been laid when the hardy American began to swarm along its right of way, turning the plains into farm lands and homesteads and forming thriving townlets to be the cities of today.

We have forgotten the Great American desert and we take the thriving and growing west, as we know it, for granted. We have forgotten the lesson it taught. We have a vague and unpleasant memory of the Credit Mobilier scandals, and our politicians who thrive for a time on prejudice and discontent have nothing to say of what the railroad meant to the west, or means today.

But our people should remember and consider. There would never have been what we know of the west had it not been for the railroads, which made possible one of the swiftest conquests and settlement of a region in all history. We ought to remember that, because it emphasizes a truth of vital importance in our own day—namely: that the great west was not only founded on railroading, but exists by it now. The cities and regions of the coasts, with their frequent waterways and access to the sea, might maintain a good deal of their prosperity, though sadly reduced, without rail transportation. But the agricultural west would descend to the level of Russia without it. The west, as we know it and which fills us with pride, would fade. The western farmer would turn back to the primitive status of past centuries and live the life of a peasant. For western agriculture is far from its markets and far from its sources of supply. Transportation is the life blood of its existence.

These are, or ought to be, obvious truths, and they should be the foundation and starting point of the farmer's thought upon railroad policy. That there have been evils and mistakes in the evolution of the railroads no one will deny. But, demagogues to the contrary notwithstanding, they are largely of the past. What is of real and vital moment to the west and to the whole country is that we shall maintain a policy toward the railroads which shall keep them efficient for our service and insure their extension and improvement step by step with the growth of our population, our enterprise and our wants.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Thomas Marshall of Indiana, who as Vice President knew that the great need of the country was a good 5 cent cigar, says that no man consulting his own happiness would seek to be President of the United States. The man who enters the White House is head of a government and head of a party. As head of the government he is supported by nearly all of the people. As head of a party he is opposed by nearly half of them. He is respected and denounced. He may be powerful and successful, but he cannot be happy.

If a man sought the happiness which goes with slippers, fireside, leisure for observation and reflection, the enjoyment of a competence, and his own syringa bushes he would not be President, emperor, or king. He would prefer cabbages to palaces, and Candide was not the last person to know that happiness is in a garden, nor was Diocletian the first.

Fortunately many people like struggle. They are the people who make it possible for the other man to sit in his garden and contemplate a wall against which hollyhocks grow. This is a highly sensible procedure, and when human struggle is seemingly without end and its consequences seemingly unsatisfactory there is refuge in the exquisite flush of the larkspur and in the stately, colored domain where the summer phlox stands against the hawthorne.

This felicity is the increment of struggle, and even the garden man must get the worms off his cabbages if he wants cabbages and must keep down the weeds if he wants anything but weeds.

HELP REGROW THE FORESTS.

At THE TRIBUNE's masthead is nailed "Regrow Our Vanished Forests." It presents a hard problem. Even the forestry schools and the government department of forestry know none too much about it. The right way to regrow forests in one state may be the wrong way in another state. It differs according to the locality.

Fire is an outstanding part of the question. But the best way to control fire in Illinois may not be the best way in Oregon. More timber is burned annually than is consumed by all industry. Most fires are from human carelessness. Carelessness is not peculiar to any one locality.

Police power is necessary to stop fires. Permits to build fires should be required. Slash, lopped branches and débris from lumbering should be piled. Some experts say that the woodsmen should burn this slash.

Taxation is another factor in regrowing forests. Many private owners cannot afford to raise forests because there is no income from growing timber. Land suitable only for timber growing should be exempt from taxation during the growing period. Rocky lands, lands too poor to cultivate, steep hillsides, swamps might thus be brought into cultivation. Cutover lands might become suitable investments for life insurance companies and others willing to wait a long time for a new crop to grow.

This tendency in taxation finds an expression in the Moses amendment recently adopted by the senate. Under this provision expenditures for the planting and culture of trees may be capitalized and deductions made from the net income in any one year not to exceed $15,000, or 15 per cent of the net income of the taxpayer. It is a financial measure that should do much to encourage forest plantation.

The farm woodlot can help regrow the forests. Farmers should be taught the value of a timber crop. Trees may be set out before plowing season and late in the fall. Cutting furnishes winter work. Trees will protect the farmer's hillsides from erosion. They make windbreaks. They soften the winter's edge and the summer heat.

It is a state problem, too. Reserves for public parks, watershed protection, municipal water sites can make a revenue from timber as a by-product. For the state to enter the timber growing business commercially is a different matter, probably unwise.

Farm ownership and forest ownership are not unlike in principle. If the state will avoid harassing private timber growers, if it will make private timber raising worth while, it will do great service. For in forests there is no such thing as overproduction.

DEFENSES IN THE AIR.

[Aurora Beacon-News.]

America is lagging behind all leading European countries in flying, according to speakers at an aviation banquet.

Maj. Hensley, commandant at Mitchell field, says: "According to present indications, before 1927 we will have nothing to fly with."

If this is so, it's a dangerous blunder. A nation's first line of defense in future wars will be in the air.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitations and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

MOSQUITO SEASON.

ABOUT this season of the year mosquitoes left over from last year emerge from their winter quarters. On emerging, extreme hunger causes them to take unusual chances to get food. As soon as they have fed once they take up a more normal routine. Within a short while the everyday life of a mosquito will be predestined by habit and he will be no more a free agent that a disciple of John Knox.

The behavior of mosquitoes has been more closely studied than has that of any other insect. Pitiless publicity beats in on them in a way that presidents and publicans, eagles and lice know nothing of—more's the pity—at least, more's the pity as regards fleas, bedbugs, and lice and such. In spite of our intimate knowledge of the conduct, behavior and personality of mosquitoes, every little while some student submits new data.

It was thought for a while that malaria mosquitoes like the blood of animals better than that of man, and therefore one way to fight malaria would be to pasture cattle in pastures located on the edge of the swamps—a kind of cow smoke-screen taking the place of the eucalyptus tree screens which were in vogue twenty-five years ago. It is found that the idea does not work. Mosquitoes like the flavor of humans about as well as they do that of four footed animals.

The malaria mosquitoes in a house will fly away to another resting place within a day. Of those within a given house, say, today, over half will be elsewhere, and six days from now the last of the lot will have moved on. In fact, if malaria mosquitoes cannot move on they speedily die. They are born with wanderlust. Even if the house were filled with horses of a flavor liked by these same mosquitoes, the lure would not hold them.

Mosquitoes live about twenty-five days in midsummer. In cooler weather they live longer. In fact, when dormant in winter they live several months.

The notion that one feeding in a lifetime is all a mosquito cares for is entirely wrong. If it were true, mosquitoes could not be malaria carriers. It is the mosquito that has been infected by feeding on an infected man, which has lived long enough thereafter to mature her parasites and which then goes forth to feed it, is that mosquito that spreads malaria. One such mosquito may infect many people.

One of the fascinating stories in Gen. Gorgas' "Sanitation in Panama" is that of a venerable and honored lady mosquito that was used to inoculate many people with yellow fever. A malarial mosquito, once infected, can infect many people. Being a tramp and without home ties, she wanders into a town and infects as she goes. As a rule she travels somewhere about one mile.

In a town surrounded by mosquito breeding grounds, the outside row of houses are the worst infested. As one goes towards the center of the town the infestation rate of the houses decreases.

Another conclusion of this investigation is that poor screening is better than no screening at all. If a mosquito gets through a poor screen into a house she will die of a broken heart if she does not find a way to get out.

HAS RUNNING EAR.

Mrs. J. G. writes: I have a 5 months old baby, 15½ pounds; weighed 6 pounds at birth.

The last few mornings I have noticed that his ear has been running during the night and the pus has a strong odor. He had a bad cold and I called the doctor. Since then he is much better but still has a cold in his nose.

Do you think this might have something to do with his ear?

REPLY.

It is the cause.

Suppuration of the ear follows a cold.

It causes deafness and other harmful effects.

It should not be neglected.

HIVES FROM STRAWBERRIES.

L. P. writes: Could a person eating rotten or overripe strawberries develop a red, swollen ear?

REPLY.

Yes—or lip.

A form of hives.

STREET SHOULD BE PAVED.

Chicago, May 5.—[Friend of the People.]—Melrose street between Sheridan road and Broadway is badly in need of repairs; in fact, I do not know of any street on the north side that is in any worse condition. Will you please see if something cannot be done towards repairing this?
E. D. S.

The superintendent of the 46th ward reports that as complainant states Melrose street between Sheridan road and Broadway is in bad condition; he reports that in fact it is beyond repair. Property on this street is valuable enough to warrant a new pavement.
THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

KEEP YOUR RECEIPTS.

Chicago, May 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—One year ago I borrowed $300 for one year at 4 per cent interest. Six months later I paid in cash $150, plus the interest. A few days later at his request, I paid the balance by check and he sent me the note, which was destroyed.

A few days ago I heard from him, saying that I owed him money. I have nothing in writing, only the canceled check for the $150 balance. Is there any way he could collect the money the second time?
J. H. M.

The fact that he does not have the note would seem to bear out your claim of payment. If the matter comes to suit the result will depend on which of you is believed.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A FAMILY OF ALIENS.

Chicago, May 5.—[Friend of the People.]—A man has lived in the United States for forty years. He has never applied for citizenship. He now wants to take out his first papers. Will he have to take out citizenship like any alien who has just come to this country? His daughters were children when they came to this country. Must they also file for citizenship? They are not married but are over 21.
D. C.

The persons referred to in this letter are aliens and should file declaration of intention. Two years thereafter they will be in a position to apply for naturalization.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 11, 1864.

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of War Stanton announced: Dispatches from Gen. Grant dated 1 p. m., May 9, state that Gen. Lee's army, retreating from the Wilderness, has made a stand at Spotsylvania Court House. Gen. Wright has been placed in command of the corps of Gen. Sedgwick, who was killed in a skirmish near Spotsylvania. In the three days fighting the Union army took 3,500 prisoners and lost about 12,000 killed, wounded and prisoners. Only twenty men and five officers of the fourth Vermont regiment remain.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Sherman reported on the campaign in Georgia. He is fighting for possession of Rocky Face Ridge. Gen. McPherson took Snaky Creek Gap and was within seven miles of Resaca yesterday morning. Gen. Thomas drove the rebels from Tunnel Hill and took his position at Buzzards Roost near Dalton. It is believed no big battle will be fought until the armies are near Atlanta.

NASHVILLE. — Dalton, Ga., has been evacuated by the rebels.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. B. F. Butler reported that with 1,700 cavalry he forded the Chickahominy and entrenched at Bermuda Hundred, Va. Gen. Kautz with 3,000 cavalry burned the railroad bridge at Stony Creek below Petersburg, thus cutting Beauregard's army in two. The part of Beauregard's army that reached Petersburg "I whipped with heavy losses," Gen. Butler said.

WASHINGTON.—Our wounded are reported at 15,000, most of whom are at Fredericksburg and so thick they are lying on the streets and sidewalks.

CHICAGO.—It was extensively rumored that Mr. Hertel of the firm of Marc & Hertel, bankers, has absconded leaving debts of $15,000.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 11, 1899.

WASHINGTON. — Representative Boutell secured from the secretary of the navy several guns, mortars, and projectiles, which will be used for ornamental purposes in Lincoln park, Chicago.

WASHINGTON. — Sensational disclosures were made concerning photographic counterfeit $1, $5, and $10 bills that have been passed in Cuba. It was discovered the counterfeits were made in the photograph gallery of the patent office here.

NEW YORK.—The Ford bill, taxing public franchises, is expected to mark the parting of the ways between Gov. Roosevelt and his party. Roosevelt intends to sign it despite protests of T. C. Platt and other Republican leaders.

NOTRE DAME, Ind.—Mgr. Martinelli, delegate apostolic of the holy see, is the guest of Notre Dame university. He has come to study the plans and method of the big Catholic institution.

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Thousands of confederate veterans met in the most enthusiastic reunion of their history. Gen. John B. Gordon publicly hugged Mrs. Stonewall Jackson in his joy over the occasion.

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—Michigan defeated Illinois by 2 to 1 in a ten inning hard fought pitchers' contest between Miller and McCollum.

CHICAGO.—Samuel Kay Wood and Miss Marion Louise Knickerbocker, 4045 Ellis avenue, were married by Bishop Charles E. Cheney.

CHICAGO.—William Blair, pioneer hardware merchant, died of pneumonia at his residence, 230 Michigan avenue, said to be the oldest house in Chicago. He was 80 years old and had lived here since 1836.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MAY 11, 1914.

WASHINGTON.—Lobos island, between Tampico and Vera Cruz, has been seized by the American naval forces, and Huerta declares this is another violation of the agreement to suspend hostilities.

VERA CRUZ.—Reports that Tampico has been captured by the rebels were received by wireless on a battleship in the harbor here. The federals are said to have sustained heavy losses from the bombardment. Part of the city is afire.

BATAVIA, Java.—Mme. Lillian Nordica, noted American opera singer, died here from pneumonia. Nervous prostration caused by the steamer Tasman, on which she was a passenger, going ashore on Bramble Cay, in the Gulf of Patua, on Dec. 28 last, resulted in pneumonia.

WASHINGTON.—The state department was notified that Medill McCormick and Richard Harding Davis, newspaper correspondents, had been freed from jail in Mexico City and are on their way to Vera Cruz on a refugee train.

CHICAGO.—Dr. John Timothy Stone, preaching the sermon at the dedication of the new Fourth Presbyterian church, vigorously denounced Sunday golf playing.

CHICAGO.—The Anti-Saloon league opened a campaign to obtain support of Chicago congressmen and members of the legislature for the proposed constitutional amendment for national prohibition.

WARNING FROM NAMEKAWA.

Chicago, April 27.—I am a Jap in nationality. Cook is my trade. Quite often I like to talk about politics. So they call me political cook, but I am not political crook, like some them politicians are.

Anyway, very few Americans are understand Japs from moral standpoint. Of course east and west have different moral standard, and I myself don't know exactly which is higher.

Japs put the honor higher than anything else. Money, love, and happiness are least things they care for. "Rather die with honor than live without." This is the way they taught in school, raised in home, and the way they feel. Consequently, if their honor is lost, they look for revenge, and they used to encourage this idea from centuries ago. The man got his revenge for his ancestor, his family, or his lord's sake. Always admired from public.

In internationally, history shows China, Russia, and Germany all got their own shares of revenge. Japs are dependable friend but dreadful enemy!

U. S. congress might done right kind of things to bar Japs, but they don't know how to do it. I think good diplomacy are far better than selfish vote, and you could bring good or better result without hurting the feeling of friendly nation and without facing "grave consequence."

Senators may know about how to settle domestic troubles, but what do they know about international problems, except very few? I hope they leave it the persons who know how to settle them. Because I am afraid this nearsighted action of congress are might will cost heavy tax for poor working man at present and thousands of good young American lives in very near future, that I can't stand even dream of it.
EUGENE M. NAMEKAWA.

AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Chicago, May 5.—It has been proven to me that the City of Chicago is on the job. If you want something done and you notify the correct department you can rest assured that what you want will be done.

Eighteen years ago, while our street was being prepared, a large portion of the curbing in front of my property was damaged, and as the result there was practically no curbing left. I reported it immediately after it had been put in this condition. Some of my friends laughed at me and said that I was wasting my time to demand the city to repair the curbing. I let the matter drop. This past week, without any further urging on my part, the curbing was repaired.

It took eighteen years to do it, but the city repaired the damage. The trouble is that a great many people would have died before their request had been taken care of. I'm glad I lived long enough to prove to my friends that the City of Chicago is on the job.
EWALD F. REICH.

ELECTION DOPE BY O'DEA.

Chicago, May 2.—If Cal is dry, as Arthur Sears Henning intimates, then I'll repeat, it will all depend on whom the Democrats nominate. Cal insists on retaining such pro-British Americans as Hughes, Hoover, Taft, etc., continuing the policy of the administration, and, in the concrete, relying on the slate. McAdoo hasn't a chance, whether or not he receives the Democratic nomination, to become President.

If Coolidge and McAdoo are nominated then I look for a third party, headed by some real American like La Follette, Johnson, Borah, or Jim Reed. There will be real American money to offset the Wall street stuff, and time enough to form an American organization. Organization counts, as you should know.

You have a great sheet, and, in my opinion, you were greater in defeat in re Len Small than if you had nominated Essington.
JOHN FRANCIS O'DEA.

WE'LL TELL DICK LITTLE.

Chicago, May 3.—Whoever wrote the Major Martin editorial, a poem, ought at least to give it a pen name. There is something in it—the absolute or the beautiful—and that it may not be lost or forgotten, ask Mr. Little to place it at the top of his column.

Tell Dick, too, not only to pan the "New Lady in Bronze," but that poor distortion of human nature at the south end of Lincoln park.

It affrights and it repulses. I remember how it affected me the first time I saw it, and then I was the father of children.

If inanimate things could move it should be mine, to see our beautiful lion sisters by the Art institute vacate their place in resentment of the presence of our bronze lady. I may not have made the point I want to make—but as a matter of civic pride should submit to the Inquiring Reporter—the question to be asked in the vicinage of the Art institute, "What is your opinion of the new Lady in Bronze?"

Referring again to the editorial, please don't forget.

FRANCE ORDERS WAR SUPPLIES; FOR ROUMANIA?

Mobilizes the Balkans to Oppose Russia.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, Austria, May 10.—Large quantities of munitions, to be manufactured with the greatest speed, have been ordered by the French government from the Skoda works in Czecho-Slovakia. While it is openly declared that these munitions are destined for French troops in Syria, no credence is given this report here. It is believed they will be turned over to the Roumanian army. They include large numbers of airplane bombs, gas bombs, and gas shells.

Meanwhile, the French diplomacy in the Balkans and Turkey is being concentrated on securing the strongest possible front against the Russians in the event of Roumania being attacked. THE TRIBUNE is informed from a reliable source that the French have made some concessions to the Turks in Syria for which it is hoped to obtain Turkish support against Russia.

A diplomatic conflict between Turkey and Russia has broken out over the question of indemnification of Turkish nationals for losses in Russia and over the expulsion of Mohammedans from the Caucasus.

Bulgaria Is Isolated.

Unable to obtain Bulgarian support on the question of Bessarabia, the Franco-Roumania diplomacy probably has isolated this power, making an alliance with the soviets in an attack on Roumania unlikely. France now is lined up with Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, and probably Turkey, as well as Roumania, while the Roumanians themselves have received assurances of Greek support. The Turks have sent a military attaché to Bucharest. France has received assurances of neutrality from Hungary. With this lineup it is ready to talk business wtih the soviets.

It is reported here that an attack on Bessarabia will result in a general Balkan mobilization, with England and France giving Roumania all possible assistance. Whether this threat will force the Russians to adopt a new attitude remains uncertain.

Greece Wants to Dodge War.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, May 10. — The Roumanian minister here today assured the Greek government of the entirely peaceful intentions of the Roumanian government, adding that the alarmist rumors regarding the warlike activities of Roumania were the outgrowth of the mobilization of three classes in connection with the regular army spring maneuvers this year, resumed for the first time since 1914.

It is certain, however, according to advices here, that the Greek government will make no move even in the event of Roumania being attacked by the bolsheviks. In case Bulgaria attacks Roumania, Greece may intervene, but even this is doubtful.

The Bulgarian minister this afternoon called on the foreign minister and reiterated Bulgaria's desire to maintain peace with Greece.

SAFEBLOWERS GET $1,000.

Safeblowers obtained $1,000 yesterday morning in the office of the Prudential Life Insurance company, 4750 West Washington boulevard. The yeggs drilled through two heavy doors of the vault and blew open the safe with nitroglycerin.

ADVENTUROUS

Frank Elwell, 10 years old, tied up his belongings in a sheet, buckled on his roller skates, and started from his home at 3438 Pierce avenue to his grandfather's farm in Michigan. His skates had carried him to the link bridge when a curious policeman stopped him. The trip's off.

FINAL CURTAIN FOR ACTRESS OF 50 YEARS AGO

Katie Putnam Emery Is Dead.

The death yesterday of Mrs. Katie Putnam Emery recalls to those who knew Chicago fifty years ago the glories of the old McVicker stock company, when eastern stars were invited to come to Chicago, where, supported by the McVicker stock company, they gave all the plays that were popular in the east.

In those days Katie Putnam was a favorite leading lady. She was ten years old when she made her debut at the McVicker theater in about 1864. She appeared as Little Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," then at the height of its wartime popularity.

Appeared with Booth.

When Katie Putnam was older she took leads with the same company. Her family had been a theatrical one. When Edwin Booth came to Chicago to play with the support of the McVicker stock company she played opposite him.

The popularity she gained in Chicago built up for her a following in the south and the southwest, where she traveled with her own company, often acting in plays she wrote.

Descended from General.

Mrs. Emery traced her descent from Israel Putnam of the American revolution. She was a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution and during the world war was an active worker.

She was the widow of Harry B. Emery and lived for a time in Utah. She toured the world and about twenty years ago retired from the stage and went to Benton Harbor, Mich. Ten years ago she made a final tour in William A. Brady's first road company of "Mother," in which she played the leading rôle.

Mrs. Emery would have been 70 on Sept. 2. She left no relatives, but one of those closest to her was Harold B. Kennicott of The Grove, Glen View, son of the late Flint Kennicott, who once was in the same company with Katie Putnam.

Mrs. Emery died at the Knight Flanders home, 6601 Cottage Grove avenue, where she had been ill with pneumonia for five days.

The funeral services will be Tuesday in a chapel, 1820 Michigan avenue at 2 p.m. The body will be taken to Oakwoods cemetery.

Samuel M. Evans, Former Chicagoan, Dies in East

Word was received by Chicago friends yesterday of the death in Essex Falls, N. J., on Friday of Samuel Marshall Evans, president of the Evans Lead company of Charleston, W. Va., and formerly vice president of the Eagle-Picher Lead company of Chicago. Mr. Evans, who formerly resided in Highland Park, was president of the National Paint, Oil and Varnish association in 1921.

Police Enjoined from Interfering with 'Cytherea'

After he had viewed the motion picture, "Cytherea," adapted from Joseph Hergesheimer's novel, Circuit Judge Hugo M. Friend yesterday granted an injunction restraining the police from interfering with its presentation at the Chicago theater next week.

"Hursen" Funerals Lead in Chicago

Supreme elegance, and low cost—these are two of the many features which have made "Hursen's" what it is today, the largest and the most remarkable institution of its kind in America.

The charges made for Hursen funerals are from one-third to one-half the charges which are usually exacted elsewhere. This sounds amazing to those who have been subjected to an enormous outlay of money for funerals not conducted by Hursen.

Yet, another amazing fact is this, that in spite of this vast reduction in cost to you, the elegance of all Hursen materials and Hursen equipment so generously furnished to you cannot even be equaled anywhere else in America.

500 people at one time can attend a funeral at any one of Hursen's 3 funeral-homes in Chicago, without ever being crowded for room. Each establishment is built like a mansion. Each has great chapels, spacious meeting and ritual rooms for lodges and societies, and smaller presence-chambers and family sanctums secluded from all the rest.

Compo-Board

Practical Material For Store Uses

COMPO-BOARD is just the material for the busy storekeeper to use when he needs to make quick repairs or alterations.

It is light, strong, clean and easy to cut and use. For building window backgrounds, booths, cabinets, display stands, closets, bins, show cases, shelves, partitions and things of similar nature it is better to use than lumber or ordinary types of fibre board because it will not warp, shrink or crack under the effects of heat and moisture.

Takes Any Decoration

Compo-Board may be decorated in any manner desired. When you need material for building or repairing in your store, home, office or factory, be sure you specify Compo-Board, the real wood core board. It will give you lasting service and satisfaction.

Write us for free sample, prices and full information.

Compo-Board is composed of three parts: The specially prepared covering, Nos. 1 and 5, the wood core, No. 3, the cement, Nos. 2 and 4. Compo-Board will not warp, buckle, shrink or crack. It is moisture-proof. For wall lining, partitions and hundreds of other uses it has no equal. Compo-Board is handled by lumber dealers everywhere.

CHICAGO WOMAN ADDS VOICE TO SHOALS PROTEST

Says Ford Would Obtain Aluminum Deposits.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—A Chicago school teacher, who maintains that Henry Ford's influence defeated her for congress, breezed into the senatorial Muscle Shoals hearing today and said, "The sale or the leasing of Muscle Shoals to Ford—or to anybody else—at this time would be nothing less than criminal."

She is Miss Evangeline C. Hursen, representing the Illinois Public Ownership league and the Cook County Business and Professional Woman's league, and she comes fresh from a survey of the treasures of Muscle Shoals, which she undertook at her own expense, paying also the expenses of her Washington trip.

And she says that a vast area of hills of bauxite, a hydrate largely used in the preparation of aluminum, is the joker in Ford's Muscle Shoals offer. Into possession of those hills Ford will come if his offer is accepted, and he could then make aluminum bodies for automobiles at a price defying competition.

Would Get Aluminum.

"Hills of bauxite—solid bauxite clay, the basis of aluminum—Ford would get," Miss Hursen told the senators of the committee of agriculture and forestry.

The senators were impressed, all of them, and one of them, the redoubtable Magnus Johnson [Farmer-Labor, Minn.], followed her from the committee room when she had finished, and said, "My name is Johnson, and I am with you on that public ownership and government operation part of your statement to the committee."

Miss Hursen allowed that she had heard of the senator.

The bauxite area starts, Miss Hursen found, at Savannah, Tenn., and extends way beyond Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals. "That's the joker in the Ford offer," the witness tartly remarked. Gee, she was at once fluent and concrete!

People Should Benefit.

"Ford's agent," she said, pointing a menacious finger at the silent senators, "tells you that not one kilowatt of power from Muscle Shoals would be sold by them. What, then, are they going to do with it? We do not know, but the organizations I represent believe this power should be used for and by the people. The people's money created that property and the people should get the benefit. By Muscle Shoals' power the railroads down there could be electrified. Transportation by truck is also a growing factor in economies, and with highways illuminated at night by Muscle Shoals power an immense movement could be carried on by night, thus relieving the day's congestion."

The witness said that the people she represents do not oppose any one offer for Muscle Shoals. "We oppose them all," she added. "There is $190,000,000 of taxpayers' money invested down there and you should not even dream of giving it away for five millions, plus some joking leases.

Fertilizer a Smoke Screen.

"But, if you are going to give it away you might as well give it to either Ford or the Carbide company, for one of them can do the people as easily as the other. In so far as the electricity at Muscle Shoals is concerned, it's the same old story as the oil trust and the coal trust, and the issue of that story is 'Baer and his divine right.' Don't put the people at the mercy of any more profiteers. What we advocate is a governmental commission to operate the properties. The fertilizer stuff of Ford looks like merely a smoke screen. As to the local situation at Muscle Shoals, there are lots of people there waiting for Ford to come down and make them millionaires."

LEGION NOTES

No speeches will mark the gala luncheon of Advertising Men's post No. 38, American Legion, Monday, May 12, at Hotel Sherman, celebrating the post's supremacy as first in membership in Chicago.

The program will be one of entertainment only, the headliners being Misses Ruth Oswald and Claire Elgin, and Messrs. L. Burton Evans, Frank Biyler, John Byam, and Sam Herman, all from Earl Carroll's "Vanities," now playing at the Colonial.

Stories of his experiences as a "Y" secretary in France were told members of Voiture post, American Legion, at Hotel Sherman yesterday by Richard Henry Little, conductor of THE TRIBUNE'S "Line-o'-Type-or-Two" column.

Celebrate Their 65th Marriage Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Garrigus, 1018 Ferdinand street, Forest Park, will celebrate their sixty-fifth marriage anniversary today at the home of their grandson, Edward Davies, 640 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park. Mr. and Mrs. Garrigus came to Chicago in 1859 and have lived here since. Mr. Garrigus is 89 years old and his wife 86. There are two children, four grandchildren, and six great grandchildren.

Civil War in Albania Over Site of National Capital

BELGRADE, May 10.—[By the Associated Press.]—Armed strife is reported to have broken out in consequence of a conflict between the Albanian government in Tirana and a number of deputies who demand that the capital of the country be transferred to another town. Dispatches from the Albanian frontier say the deputies have occupied the town of Krown.

POSTMEN APPEAL TO PUBLIC FOR WAGE FIGHT AID

All pressure possible will be brought to bear on congress to insure the passage of the bill granting wage increases to mail employés, it was declared yesterday by Ira Ferguson, district president of the Railway Mail association.

That other influences are at work to defeat the bill was indicated by Mr. Ferguson. He cited a telegram received from W. N. Collins, national president of the association, which urged members to ask business men, civic agencies, and clubs to indorse passage of the bill.

"It is necessary," the telegram stated, "to take drastic action to save the postal service and to restore its former efficiency. It is absolutely imperative that favorable consideration be requested of congress and the President."

BOARD OF TRADE SELLS WDAP TO THE DRAKE HOTEL

Announcement was made yesterday that WDAP, the radiophone broadcasting station, had been sold by the Chicago Board of Trade to the Drake hotel, where the station is located. There will be no interruption in the broadcasting of Board of Trade market quotations. They will be given out at half hour intervals during the business day.

Possession will be given the new owners before the first of June.

Henry A. Rumsey, a director of the Chicago Board of Trade, who has had charge of the station, said that the reason for selling WDAP to the Drake hotel was because of its development to a stage where it was difficult to furnish the amusement program desired in addition to the market news that has been sent out.

CLEMENCY FOR HALF OF 223 WAR CONVICTS

Leavenworth, Kas., May 10.—The final report on recommendations made by Maj. James Stansfield and Maj. F. K. Ross, appointed to review the cases of military prisoners in the federal prison here, was received by Warden W. I. Biddle today.

It reveals that out of 223 cases reviewed, clemency was extended only to 50 per cent of the prisoners.

Only one prisoner received a full pardon. He was Bennie Thomas, serving a life sentence for attacking a French woman. Seven others were released on commutations of sentence.

One hundred and seven prisoners were given reductions, and 108 were denied reduction.

Of those serving life sentence, twenty-eight were reduced to twenty-three years and six months, two were reduced to twenty-two years, two to twenty-six years and six months, two to twenty-one years and nine months, and twenty to twenty years.

All of the Houston rioters received reductions from life sentences with the exception of William Hudson. At the time the cases were reviewed Hudson was in an asylum at Washington. He has since been returned to Leavenworth. Other reductions were given prisoners serving sentences ranging from fifteen to forty years.

CRUSHED BY CARPET BALE.

Patrick Daly, 49, 2113 Freemont street, was severely injured yesterday in the yards of the Grand Trunk railway at Plymouth court and Taylor streets. A bale of carpet material fell on him.

AUTOS TRAPPED IN TUBE; FUMES PERIL HUNDREDS

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 10.—More than forty persons were overcome by carbon monoxide gas and almost a hundred others were made ill when they were trapped in a traffic jam in the east tube of the Liberty tunnel here today.

Several of the victims were taken to hospitals, where their conditions were reported as critical. Others were revived by first aid treatment.

The traffic jam was caused by an unusual number of motorists using the tunnel to get into downtown Pittsburgh because of the street car strike. It was first reported that two automobiles crashed 200 yards from the north entrance and jammed traffic for a mile and a quarter to the south entrance.

The Liberty tunnel is a foot and vehicle traffic tube and thousands were walking through the passage to work.

When the two machines crashed other motor cars in the tunnel jammed the passageways. Motorists failed to turn off their engines, believing the wreckage would soon be cleared up, and carbon monoxide gas filled the air.

Pedestrians and persons in automobiles were overcome. Ambulances and police patrols were ordered to the tunnel. A mine rescue squad from the bureau of mines headquarters here was summoned to carry out the victims.

Mayor Magee late today made a formal demand on the company to restore street car service at once "with whatever forces are available." The company announced an effort would be made on Monday to restore service with 500 men from outside cities.

60 YEARS ON HAPPINESS TRAIL

Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Hawkins of Highland Park entertained their family and friends at an informal reception yesterday which marked their sixtieth wedding anniversary. They have lived at 389 Laurel avenue, Highland Park, for fifty-five years.

COUNCIL TO GET MEASURES FOR WIDER STREETS

Ordinances providing for the widening of Stony Island avenue between 69th and 79th streets at an ultimate cost of approximately $268,000, to be assessed against adjacent property owners, will be introduced in the city council at its next meeting by John J. Sloan, president of the board of local improvements.

The improvement, which will increase the combined width of the north and south traffic lanes to ninety feet, is to be accomplished by cutting twenty-five feet from each side of the center parkway in the street. Ten foot parkways will be left on each side of the surface lines tracks.

To push plans for widening and boulevarding of Clark street from North avenue to Diversey parkway and renaming the thoroughfare "Clark boulevard," interested property owners have organized the Greater Clark Boulevard association, headed by Lynden Evans, an attorney at 35 North Dearborn street.

"North Clark street is and has been since the time of the founding of the city the principal north and south artery from the main business district to the residential as well as commercial section to the north," declared Paul Gerhardt, an architect and secretary of the new organization, in a letter to Mayor Dever and John J. Sloan.

"This street was originally used by comparatively few people and vehicles due to the small population of our city, but while Chicago has so vastly grown and expanded, this artery, unfortunately, has not grown in proportion. In fact, it now remains in the exact state it was at that time, a rather crooked passage but sixty-six feet wide, the width of an ordinary side street.

"It appears most important and vital for the development of a greater Chicago to widen this thoroughfare, now an essential and overburdened artery serving the main business district of Chicago and a steadily increasing population to the north, to make it meet the present and future demands."

Attorneys for the board of local improvements and the Lincoln park board are preparing agreements under which the park officials will surrender to the city the twenty-two feet of the east parkway needed to widen Clark street between North avenue and Lincoln Park West.

President Sloan of the improvement board has suggested that thirty-four feet be taken from the east side of Clark street between Lincoln Park West and Diversey parkway. Property owners have suggested that seventeen feet be taken from each side of the street north of Wrightwood avenue and Mr. Gerhardt in other plans would take thirty-four feet from east side south of Wrightwood avenue and thirty-four feet from the west side north of that point.

ULSTER PREMIER OFFERS PIPE OF PEACE TO SOUTH

Would Help Cosgrave to End Friction.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BELFAST, May 10.—"We are the two leaders of Ireland. Somehow or other we have reached that position. For God's sake, let us lead. I am willing to go out of public life tomorrow if I, by so doing, can bring peace to Ireland. I am sure President Cosgrave is no less willing than I to do the same. Why not let us get together and settle this boundary question regardless of the extremists on either side?"

This appeal was made today by Sir James Craig, premier of Ulster, in an interview granted THE TRIBUNE. He received the correspondent in what was the drawing room of Stormont castle, a magnificent country residence a few miles outside of Belfast, which has become the seat of the Ulster government.

Both Typical Irishmen.

Here let it be said that although Sir James and Mr. Cosgrave are as opposite in their views as the poles they are both typical Irishmen. Mr. Cosgrave is small and nervous, with a twinkling eye and humor always on top, but with an essential seriousness behind the typical Irishman of the south. Sir James is big, slow of speech, careful of utterance, and apparently deadly serious, a typical Irishman of the north.

THE TRIBUNE asked him for a reply to Mr. Cosgrave's suggestion that Ulster would legally become a part of the Irish Free State by its failure to appoint a boundary commissioner under the Anglo-Irish treaty. He brushed the question aside.

"I am not a lawyer," he said. "My legal advisers tell me that Mr. Cosgrave is wrong, but I am not much interested. I don't like the idea of two sets of Irishmen using slim legal tactics against each other. But please don't represent me as saying that Mr. Cosgrave is doing so. I mean that I prefer fair dealing to legal arguments. I am convinced that if Mr. Cosgrave and I get together man to man, with freedom to act, we could soon arrive at an agreement.

Would Resign for Peace.

"It is said that I have my extremists and he has his, whom we must ignore. Very well, then, let us ignore them. I am willing to go out of public life tomorrow if, before I go, I can assure peace in Ireland. I am sure Mr. Cosgrave is equally as willing. Let us get together man to man and settle this question of boundaries. It would not be hard. I am not unreasonable. There are substantial areas on the Ulster side of the boundaries inhabited by people who rather belong to the Free State. I do not want to keep them if they express a desire to go, but I will not turn them out if they desire to stay. There are other areas now in the Free State which I think wish to join Ulster. I do not think Mr. Cosgrave wishes to keep them.

"Then there are places along the border where the boundary needs straightening out. That can be done by two men who want a fair settlement better than by any formula of a commission."

Sir James was asked whether, in case Mr. Cosgrave consented to such a meeting, he would be willing to abandon his demand that clause 12 of the treaty, which provides for the boundary commission, be scrapped in advance.

Suggests Getting Together.

"You mean, would I say to Mr. Cosgrave, 'Let us try and agree, and if we fail you still retain your rights under clause twelve'? I should like time to think that proposition over before answering. What I do suggest is that we get together and settle this matter and then together approach the British government and secure the abrogation of that clause of the treaty which calls on southern Ireland to assume a part of the imperial debt charges. If we both demand this it will be easy to secure the necessary British legislation.

"The whole present trouble is due to the vagueness of the terms of the treaty and the promises made both sides by third parties. Let us Irishmen in Ireland settle the matter between ourselves, even if it involves the sacrifice of our political careers."

AWARD CUP TO EDITOR.

A trophy cup was awarded yesterday to the "B" Weekly of the Englewood High school, Joseph Brunswick, editor, at a conference of the Chicago and Cook county editors of high school publications.

TRAITOR TROOPS KILLED MEXICO'S "BEST GOVERNOR"

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A mock trial before a mock court martial, then a fleeting moment before a gray wall at dawn with twelve companions, and Felipe Carillo, Socialist governor of the state of Yucatan, Mexico, paid the price for giving his people perhaps the most efficient government any state in Mexico ever had.

How this noted radical leader died, betrayed by men sworn to uphold him, is told for the first time by Fernando F. Quesada, a Cuban, who was the personal friend of Gov. Carillo and who was in Merida when the governor was executed.

The events which transformed Gov. Carillo from the idol of his people into a crumpled heap in the dust began with the abruptness peculiar to Mexico. In the early days of December last year the De la Huerta revolution began. Gov. Carillo, from his office at Merida, immediately pledged his loyalty to the Obregon government. Then he called the officers of the 18th battalion of the regular army and asked them where they stood.

Flees from Traitorous Troops.

"We are for Obregon," was the answer.

"Then you will entrain for Campeche in the morning to fight the enemies of our country," the governor told them.

But that same night, Dec. 9, Gov. Carillo was told that the troops intended to betray the Obregon government—for loot. And he was advised, if he valued his life, that he must leave town quickly. So early the next morning, with his three brothers, Manuel, Wilfrido, and Edesio; Mayor Manuel Berzunza of Merida, a number of state officials and loyal army officers and friends—thirteen in all—the governor caught a train for the interior.

A half an hour later the troops left, ostensibly for Campeche. They had been gone only a little while, when they shouted "Down with Obregon," and returned to Merida.

The people of Merida were opposed to the revolutionists, but were powerless against the strongly armed and disciplined troops, who for four years had formed the federal garrison in the city.

Governor's Party Captured.

In the meantime, Gov. Carillo and his party made their way to a seaport from where they hoped to escape to Cuba in a small motorboat. Heavy seas prevented their leaving. Then, eleven days after their departure from Merida, they were arrested by a detachment from the 18th battalion and brought back to the state capital.

The governor and his party were thrown into prison on orders of Gen. Broca, who had set up a provisional government.

On Jan. 2 a court martial consisting of officers of the 18th battalion was assembled. It did not even have authority from the De la Huerta general headquarters.

Only one bit of evidence was introduced against the prisoners—a dispatch alleged to have been written by Gov. Carillo after his temporary escape into the interior. The dispatch read:

"This government learns that the enemies of the national government are trying with intrigues to help the De la Huerta and Sanchez rebellion. This document advises you that any person opposing the government shall be killed at once, since all enemies must be treated in this manner."

But sentence had been passed even before the prisoners had arrived in court. The next morning the thirteen were taken to the general cemetery of Merida and in groups of two or three were shot down.

ARREST YOUTH AS ROBBER.

Carlyle Denne, 19, 2344 West Superior street, was arrested yesterday, charged with stealing $140 from William Parker, 4937 West Congress street.

MARS JARS CUPID IN ROMANCES OF YANKS IN FRANCE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 10.—While accurate statistics are not available, because no figures have been compiled, most marriages of American doughboys and French girls during the war have turned out to be most disastrous failures.

It is estimated that 75 per cent of the war brides were abandoned in France when their husbands were repatriated with their regiments, and when demobilized the jobless doughboys could not afford to send for their wives. Then later they gradually forgot them.

It is said here that the French and American authorities in New York City could give startling figures on the numbers of visas granted French brides who went to the United States and returned home to France because they could not adapt themselves to American life.

GROWING LIBERTY OF WOMEN HELD DIVORCE CAUSE

Jackson, Mich., May 10.—[United Press.]—Divorces are increasing because the American woman "has been driven out of the home" by economic and social forces, Miss Maria Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois, told the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs here last night.

Dean Leonard pointed out that women are becoming socially and economically independent. Over 8,500,000 American women are employed in gainful occupations, she said.

The American woman, she said, "has been driven out of the home by the high cost of living, by invention of labor saving devices which give her more leisure, by public schools, where her children are taken off her hands during the day, and by motor cars, country clubs, and other outside entertainments."

Oil Burners for the Smallest Bungalow to the Tallest Skyscraper

Now—Oil heat for smaller homes

At new low prices. Pay with what you save from coal burning. Clean, dependable, efficient—no coal-stoking, no fear of fire-failure. Get the book—learn the terms. Send the coupon!

This is a message to the small home owners who annually struggle with unsatisfactory coal furnaces. Expensive, wasteful, dirty—giving inadequate heat and requiring constant attention.

THIS offers a famous new type oil-burner, proved successful in thousands of large homes, now for the first time available for owners of 6 and 8-room houses, bungalows, 2-apartment houses. At a price and terms within the means of every purse.

For years oil heating of homes has been acknowledged the simplest, cleanest, most economical way to heat through the winter. But oil-burners had always been expensive to install. They were not adapted to small homes.

You asked us to make an oil-burner for your home. We did, and this tells the facts about it.

Of course you know of Kleen-Heet, the famous oil-burner that is in thousands of larger homes throughout the land today. Our engineers perfected that after years of experiment. They made 24 different types of burners before they were satisfied. We began to study oil-burning 10 years ago.

Then came another type of Kleen-Heet, for large buildings. And it too, was an instant success. But the big demand was for a low-priced, efficient burner for small houses. So now we have developed this new burner, and offer it at new low prices, at terms that all can afford. It fits in any furnace, and the prices quoted include its installation.

Set once for all winter

With this new oil-burner all worry over your heat is banished. When cold weather starts, set the thermostat in the living room. The burner, in the basement, automatically delivers all the heat you want, all over the house, without further attention.

Fits Your Present Furnace
Install this new oil-burner NOW—Prices include installation.
Moderate Prices
Convenient, Liberal Terms

Constant, controlled heat 24 hours a day! No early rising to start the furnace. No fear of fires dying with your wife alone in the house.

The flow of oil is automatically controlled in just the required quantity. No waste. If the thermometer drops, the thermostat opens the oil valve, the house remains uniformly heated despite the outside cold. Now even heat at all times—a great health factor, doctors say.

Now on liberal terms

This new oil-burner is moderately priced, and may be bought on terms which make it false economy not to own it. The lowest priced completely automatic oil-burner.

Suppose you now pay a furnace man $15 a month to attend your fires; and $3 a month to remove the ashes. That's $18 a month. If you do this work yourself surely your own time is worth what you would have to pay.

This new oil-burner will be installed for a small down payment, and as low as $25 a month. Only $7 a month more than you actually save on the elimination of coal. Less than 25 cents a day!—and no upkeep or maintenance whatever.

See now, while coal bin is empty

Now that the coal-bin is empty, learn about fuel-oil heating. See this wonderful new system for small homes. See the enthusiastic testimonials of thousands of home owners.

Then instead of buying costly coal, put that money into installing this burner in your home. Know a new comfort of body and mind.

A SAVING OPPORTUNITY

Rare Oriental Rugs

We intend to make this the most important event of the year. We are determined to reduce our stock of Oriental Rugs

Our thirty-eight years' experience, and sales running into the millions, have made our store one of the leading Oriental establishments in the world. No bazaar in the Orient shows such a collection of antique and modern pieces, and our prices are lower than asked in Cairo, Smyrna or Constantinople. American travelers in the Orient appreciate this fact and make their purchases when they return from abroad.

The splendid bargains we give our customers are secured for us by our representatives in the Orient, who send native experts to the most remote parts of Persia, Turkey, and the Caucasus to find the rare pieces of Oriental weave which charm the visitor at our store.

The fame of our mammoth collection of rare and beautiful pieces has attracted to our establishment customers from all parts of America—and experts of international repute always took delight in our display and have chosen pieces therefrom, which now adorn the walls of museums and some of the most exclusive and artistically furnished homes in America. Owing to limited space we list only a few of the many rugs included in this sale.

In order to give all of our customers an opportunity to secure some of these great bargains, we advise early selection to obtain some of these unusual values.

500 Persian Rugs, 37.50

Sizes average 2.9x4.6 and 4.3x7 feet

Comprising Mossouls, Kurdistans, Dozars. This is as fine a collection of silky effects and semi-antique rugs as we have had the good fortune to offer. All are in splendid condition, with a natural luster, quaint old designs.

ORIENTAL HALL RUGS

AIM TO REDUCE INFANT DEATHS BY INSTRUCTION

Health Commissioner Is Alarmed at Figures.

Nearly 5,000 babes, about one out of every nine born in Chicago last year, died before their first birthday, according to a bulletin issued yesterday by Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen. One-third of the deaths occurred during the first seven days of life, from causes largely avoidable by the proper care of the mothers before the babies were born.

Does infant welfare work pay?

"I'll say it does," declared Commissioner Bundesen. "For every 1,000 babies born in Chicago 105 die. However, of those babies who come under the observation and care of our infant welfare stations, less than four die. This means a saving of 101 babies out of every thousand born.

More Attention to Mothers.

"Being a baby is a dangerous occupation and to make it less dangerous it is necessary that prospective mothers receive more attention. To that end during the last year the department of health has been endeavoring to correlate all the agencies in safeguarding the mother and unborn child so that this large death toll of infants during the first week of life may be reduced.

"In coöperation with the Infant Welfare society, the Chicago Lying-In hospital, the central free dispensary and leading physicians of the city, arrangements have been perfected whereby pre-natal stations are available for prospective mothers for physical examination, observation and advice. Those who are in a position to know are agreed that this is the solution of our high baby death rate during the first weeks of life.

Urges Frequent Examination.

"I would like to impress upon parents the importance of regular periodic medical examination of their babies. The importance of breast feeding cannot be overestimated. Our studies show that a large percentage of the deaths from diarrheal diseases are among babies that are not breast fed. You owe it to your baby to see that it is breast fed, if that is possible."

UNIDENTIFIED MAN DROWNS.

The body of an unidentified man, about 40 years old, was found in the river at Kinzie street yesterday. No marks of identification were found and the body was taken to Shapiro's morgue, 708 North Wells street.

Here's the Way the New Tax Bill Will Effect You and Your Business

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—The tax bill as passed by the senate provides reductions in all individual income taxes, both in future years and on income of the calendar year 1923, payable this year. The senate bill retains the 25 per cent retroactive reduction applying to last year's income, the language being exactly the same as in the house bill, which means that this provision cannot be eliminated in conference.

The senate bill gives a reduction of 25 per cent on earned income up to $10,000, the house bill permitting this reduction on earned income up to $20,000. In both bills the first $5,000 of income is considered earned income, whether or not it consists of salaries or wages.

Normal Income Taxes.

The senate bill fixes the normal tax rates at 2 per cent on incomes up to $4,000, 4 per cent between $4,000 and $8,000, and 6 per cent above $8,000. In the house bill the 2 and 6 per cent rates are the same, but the middle rate is 5 per cent. Under the present law the normal tax is 4 per cent up to $5,000 and 8 per cent above that.

The Simmons surtax rates as embodied in the senate bill range from 1 per cent on that portion of income between $10,000 and $14,000, up to 40 per cent on that portion in excess of $500,000. Under the house bill the surtaxes run from 1½ per cent between $10,000 and $12,000 to 37½ per cent above $200,000. Under the present law a rate of 1 per cent applies between $6,000 and $10,000, while the maximum of 50 per cent applies above $200,000.

Personal Exemption Unchanged.

Personal exemptions are not changed either in the senate or house bills, except that under the Simmons amendment adopted in the senate the exemption for all heads of families is made $2,500, this exemption now applying only when income is below $5,000. Single persons continue to have an exemption of $1,000 in both bills.

The corporation tax in the senate bill is one of the radical departures from the present law. The house bill retained the flat tax of 12½ per cent on corporation earnings, as provided in the present law, and also retained the tax of $1 per $1,000 on capital stock of corporations.

The senate bill repeals the capital stock tax and substitutes for that tax and the 12½ per cent tax on earnings a normal tax of 9 per cent on corporation earnings supplemented by surtaxes on percentages of undistributed earnings. These surtaxes apply when more than 10 per cent of what is described as surtax income is retained by a corporation and is not distributed in dividends to stockholders.

Fifty Different Brackets.

The surtaxes include fifty different brackets, the lowest being one-fourth of 1 per cent, which applies on undistributed earnings in excess of 10 per cent and not in excess of 11 per cent of surtax income. The maximum surtax is 40 per cent, which applies on undistributed earnings equal or greater than 60 per cent of surtax income.

It is estimated that corporations which retain less than 30 per cent of their income will pay a somewhat smaller tax than if a flat tax of 14 per cent had been imposed as originally recommended by the finance committee, while those retaining more than 30 per cent will pay a larger tax.

The senate bill establishes a system of inheritance taxes applying on beneficiaries of an estate as a substitute for the estate tax of the present law which applies directly on the estate.

How Upper House Levies.

The rates in the senate bill range from 1 to 36 per cent, which appear somewhat higher than the rates of from 1 to 25 per cent in the present law, but are actually lower in the case of an estate of which there are several beneficiaries. Under the senate bill, husband, wife, children, or grandchildren pay the rates from 1 to 36 per cent, while a brother, sister, nephew, or niece pays a 25 per cent greater tax and others a 50 per cent greater tax.

Under the house bill the estate tax system of the present law is retained, but the rates are boosted to a maximum of 40 per cent.

The senate bill imposes a gift tax with the same rates as under the senate inheritance tax. The house bill also imposes a gift tax with the house estate tax rates.

It Costs to Play Mah Jongg.

The only new excise tax in either the senate or house bill is a tax of 10 per cent on mah jongg sets, which is in the senate bill. The proposed new radio tax was knocked out. Miscellaneous excise taxes affecting a score or more of industries, including those on candy, soft drinks, trunks, valises, and fans, are repealed in both bills. Both bills repeal the tax on telegraph and telephone messages, although the senate finance committee recommended its restoration. The stamp tax on produce exchange transactions is cut in two in both bills.

Both bills repeal the tax on admissions of 50 cents and less, but retain the tax of 10 per cent on larger admissions.

Auto Taxes Reduced.

The senate bill goes further than the house bill in reducing automobile taxes. The senate bill repeals the tax on automobile parts entirely, while the house reduces the 5 per cent tax to 2½ per cent. Both bills reduce the tax on tires from 5 to 2½ per cent, and both eliminate the 3 per cent tax on trucks selling at wholesale for $1,000 or less. The senate bill also exempts truck bodies selling for $200 or less. Both bills retain the present 5 per cent manufacturers' tax on automobiles.

The treasury recommendation for partially reaching the tax exempt security situation through a limitation on deductions from net income was eliminated from the bill as passed by the senate, but is in the house bill. The senate struck it out after twice reversing itself on the proposition. Under this provision deductions for non-business losses and for interest on indebtedness would be limited to the amount by which the total exceeds income received from tax exempt securities.

The senate bill eliminates the tax of 5 per cent on jewelry valued at less than $25, while the house bill repeals the tax up to $40.

Both bills create a board of tax appeals, consisting of not less than seven nor more than twenty-eight members, at salaries of $7,500. Under the senate bill the maximum number shall be seven after two years.

Under the senate bill tax returns, claims for refunds, and decisions on refund cases are opened to public inspection. It also is provided that proceedings in contested tax cases shall be public. The house bill provides that the house ways and means committee or the senate finance committee may obtain access to specified tax returns upon request, and if considered desirable may submit the information obtained to congress, but does not provide for full publicity.

Worker Found Smothered Held Suicide by Jury

A verdict of suicide while insane was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury investigating the death of John Arendt, millwright, 11456 Indiana avenue, whose body was found strangled on the roof of the Sherwin-Williams Paint company's plant in Kensington.

of tax appeals created under the bill, house bill limiting publicity to inspection by certain congressional committees.

Mellon Plan Jettisoned.

The senate bill is more radical than the bill as passed by the house, which also is much different from the Mellon plan supported by the administration. The measure now goes to conference where differences may be adjusted in such a manner that President Coolidge will feel obliged to sign it as representing an improvement over the present law. There is no doubt but that strong pressure would be brought to bear upon him to veto it if it reached him exactly as passed by the senate.

Those Republicans who voted against the bill on final passage were Senators Ball [Del.], Cameron [Ariz.], Colt [R. I.], Cummins [Ia.], Edge [N. J.], Fess [O.], Lodge [Mass.], McKinley [Ill.], Moses [N. H.], Norbeck [S. D.], Pepper [Pa.], Phipps [Col.], Reed [Pa.], Wadsworth [N. Y.], and Watson [Ind.].

Smoot Warns of Deficit.

Prior to the passage of the bill Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the finance committee, over whose protest many changes had been made on the floor, informed the senate that a large deficit is in prospect under the bill.

It was indicated by Mr. Smoot's figures that the deficit during the fiscal year 1925, would be considerably in excess of $120,000,000 instead of a deficit of $50,000,000 as threatened by the bill in the form reported from the finance committee.

Enumerating items changed on the floor which will increase the deficit threatened by the finance committee bill, the Utah senator cited the elimination of the tax on telephone and telegraph messages, which will mean a loss of $34,000,000 in revenue; the elimination of the radio tax, estimated to yield $10,000,000; a further reduction in automobile taxes, meaning a loss of $5,000,000; the elimination of the tax on drafts and checks, meaning a loss of $2,150,000, and the increased personal exemption with a loss of $15,000,000.

"Tax Exempt" Situation.

He referred also to the elimination of the treasury tax exempt security provision, which was estimated to raise $35,000,000 in additional revenue, this provision, however, having also been stricken out in the committee bill.

Senator Smoot also referred to possible expenditures outside of budget estimates, including $135,000,000 for the first year's expenditures under the soldiers' bonus bill, $58,000,000 under the Bursum pension bill, vetoed by the President, $10,000,000 for reclassification of government employés, $10,000,000 for deficiency appropriations, $65,000,000 for salary increases for postal clerks, $32,000,000 for the veterans' bureau bill, and $5,000,000 for the District of Columbia surplus bill.

"It is all well enough to pass a bill facing these conditions, but I want the country to know what it means," Mr. Smoot said. "I am in hopes that in conferences some changes can be made in the bill."

Senators Moses and Brandegee both took occasion to express the dissatisfaction of conservative Republicans with the bill.

"This measure bears no resemblance to the scientific tax reduction measure which came from the treasury," Mr. Moses said. "It does not take out any of the unjust inquisitorial features of the present law and adds a new one under which any busybody or Paul Pry can find out what a person earns."

Mr. Brandegee said he would vote for the bill just to send it to conference, but he would vote against the conference report unless it is materially improved. He said he regarded the senate bill as a radical departure from the Mellon plan.

Senator Walsh [Dem., Mass.], in a final word from the Democrats, who have been in charge of the minority program, said that congress has been unanimous for tax reduction, the only dispute being as to method. He said that the Mellon plan gave greatest reductions to those with large incomes and that the senate bill gives the largest reductions to those with small incomes.

Radicals Demand New Rate.

The senate reconsidered its action of yesterday with respect to the treasury recommendation in connection with tax exempt securities. The reconsideration was sought by radicals who voted yesterday in favor of the proposition under a misapprehension. Today the treasury provision was struck out by a vote of 45 to 37, yesterday's vote having been 45 to 40 in its favor.

Under this provision deductions from net income for nonbusiness losses such as in speculation in the stock market and for interest paid on indebtedness, other than incurred in carrying on a trade or business, would be limited to the amount in excess of income from tax exempt securities.

The senate rejected a number of amendments, including one by Senator Harris [Dem., Ga.] to impose a tax of 1,000 per cent on campaign contributions in excess of $1,000.

The threatened fight over the McNary-Haugen agricultural corporation bill was averted.

Senator Norbeck said he also had received assurances from Senate Republican leaders that the McNary-Haugen bill would be given the right of way in the senate as soon as it comes over from the house. He predicted its passage in both houses.

GUN PERMITS FOR GUNMEN HELD ILLEGAL

LIEUT. SCHOEMAKER.

Refusal of Capt. William Schoemaker of the detective bureau to return a revolver found in possession of Sanford "Gimp" Rosenbaum, gunman and ex-convict, despite a gun toting permit held by Rosenbaum, started yesterday plans for a general investigation of wholesale distribution of such permits by justices of the peace.

The investigation will begin next week by Chief Justice Caverly of the Criminal court and Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman.

Chief Justice Caverly announced intention of organizing a committee of merchants and professional men to bring pressure on the legislature to have the gun permit clause of the Sadler act repealed. He also ordered that Justice Fisher be brought before him tomorrow to explain why he issued a permit to "a man so notorious a criminal as is this Rosenbaum."

Mr. Gorman without hesitation upheld Capt. Schoemaker and suggested the gun be turned over to the city custodian.

Schoemaker had found the gun when Rosenbaum was arrested last Tuesday on confidence game charges. Rosenbaum produced a permit, stating he was a "man of known good character," and signed by Emil Fischer, a justice of the peace at Cicero.

"But this can't mean you," exclaimed Schoemaker. "The permit reads, 'for a person of known good character.'"

QUEEN OF U. S. TENNIS OFF FOR BRITISH COURTS

Miss Wills' Mother Tells of School Honors.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Helen Wills, America's 18 year old woman tennis champion, would rather smash a fifty cent ball than a royal heart; rather swing a mean tennis racket than wear a British crown.

Rather beat Suzanne Lenglen, the French champion of the world, than dance with the Prince of Wales!

She admitted as much yesterday as she stopped off in Chicago for a few hours, en route from Berkeley, Cal., and her freshman year at the Golden state university, to Wimbledon, England, the international tournament, and Suzanne.

Plays Better Game.

Slimmer, more the "young lady" than when she passed through the city last August, fresh from her triumph over Molla Mallory, California's wizard of the nets plays a "fifty per cent better game" this year than last, according to local tennis officials who were her hosts yesterday.

Helen Wills doesn't say much about the coming contest with Suzanne, but she does admit that she studied French "awfully hard" all this year. She must have studied other things too, for she won a scholarship prize at the university, without knowing it.

"Helen treated college just like a game," explained Mrs. Clarence A. Wills, the star's mother, who is traveling with her. Then she went on to show that in this case, treating studies like a game meant serious hard work, practice, industry.

"She has no patience," Mrs. Wills went on, "with so-called celebrities who forget everything else but the one sport or pursuit in which they are most interested. So she can toss down a school book for a tennis racket and an afternoon of practice on the courts. But she always remembers to pick up the book again."

Gets $50 Prize.

As a result one morning last winter Miss Wills found a letter from the university telling her she had won a $50 prize for excellence in scholarship. "And I didn't even know there was such a prize."

But Miss Wills herself didn't talk of her successes in the schoolroom or on the asphalt court (which she likes better than clay or grass). She spoke of the Prince of Wales, the dancer and horseman; she chatted of rouge and the king of Norway; French irregular verbs and the Art institute; internationalism and ice water.

And occasionally, when it was unavoidable, she did mention the game of lawn tennis.

Uses No Foibles.

Speaking of rouge, and they were, Mrs. Wills recalls the time the usually unperturbed Helen lost her temper. It was when a fellow freshman murmered, "Helen, you've got your rouge on crooked."

The declaration, it seems, was not only exceedingly personal, but actually impossible. For the star doesn't use rouge or lip stick. She gets her color, she explains, "from the courts, and not the drug stores." High heels she wears for evening and afternoon dress, for "the less fuss you make over your feet and arms the better game you'll play," is her philosophy. She hasn't any hobby unless it's her aversion to ice water. She has no favorite good luck token, no pet superstition.

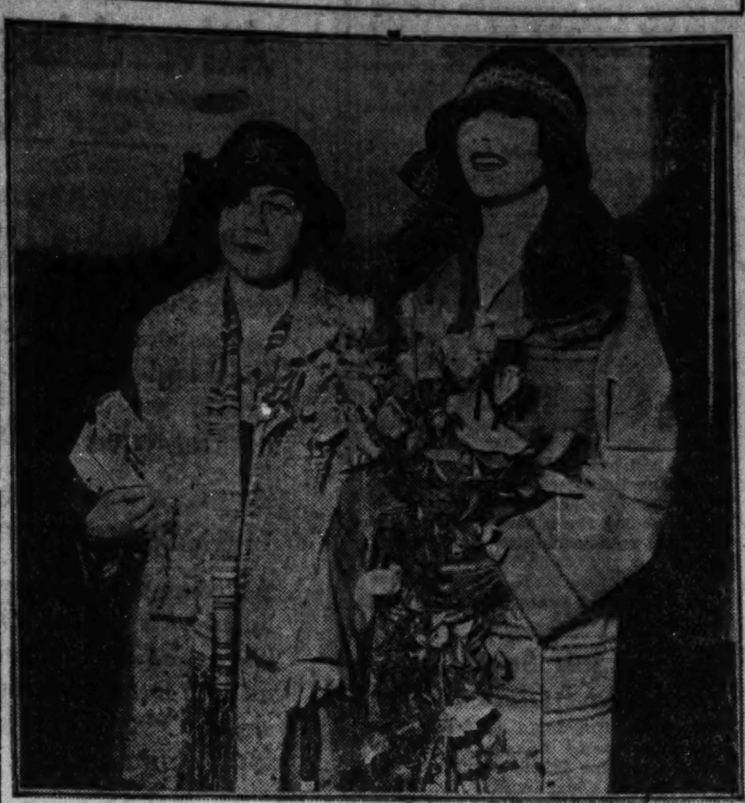
Carries Mystery Package.

"I'm hopelesly normal, I guess," the girl confessed. O, no, I forgot, I always carry the 'mysterious package' they talk about in detective stories," and she reached for an octagonal bundle done up in brown paper.

The package contains ten special rackets, each weighing thirteen and one-half ounces, and Miss Wills carried it about through the city to the Art institute and over to the luncheon given in her honor by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Miller of the Skokie club. She did drop it long enough to pose for a picture with J. C. Stewart of the Western Tennis association which sent over an offering of American Beauty roses to "the next international woman's tennis champion."

Miss Wills will sail on the Berengaria, May 14. The steamship officials have erected a special backboard on an upper deck so Miss Wills may practice tennis.

Tennis Princess Comes to Town



Helen Wills, America's 18 year old woman tennis champion, visited in Chicago yesterday en route to New York, from where she will sail for England to play at Wimbledon in the international tournament. Elizabeth Atkinson, a school chum of the tennis star, is at the left, Miss Wills at the right.

DEACON JURY'S LET GO AFTER LONG WRANGLE

A jury which argued for twenty-four hours without determining whether Mayor Henry M. Deacon of North Chicago is guilty of malfeasance, extortion and taking illegal fees was dismissed late yesterday by Judge Claire C. Edwards of Waukegan.

Reports reached the courtroom that two of the jurors rushed angrily at each other during the deliberations, and fisticuffs were averted only by strong arm tactics of fellow jurymen. One man held out for acquittal, it was said.

Mayor Deacon will go on trial a second time on June 2. State's Attorney A. V. Smith announced that an additional count of bribery will be included in the charges.

THRILLS APLENTY AT 65TH CAVALRY HORSE EXHIBIT

Amphitheater Packed as Stunts Are Shown.

Lessons in preparedness and exhibitions of horsemanship thrilled thousands of Chicagoans yesterday who attended the afternoon and evening performances of the 65th Cavalry Division association horse show and military tournament held in the International amphitheater. The show and tournament ended with last night's exhibitions.

Chicago society folk again were out in numbers last night. The boxes were filled, the women beautifully gowned, and the men dressed in semi-formal clothes.

Thrill After Thrill.

The program gave thrill after thrill. The artillery drills won the majority of the applause, with the hunters and jumps ranking next. Cheers filled the huge amphitheater. It was a gay evening. The 132d Infantry band furnished melody as the high school, gaited, and military horses did their stunts.

Chicago's crack troop of mounted policemen won much applause during their exhibition of fancy riding. The artillery rolled at a furious pace around the arena. Excitement also came with the hunters, some of them crashing into the hurdles, others clearing the bars easily. One rider staged a "Prince of Wales," but got up unhurt and rode his mount again around the ring amid applause.

The Winners Were:

Winners in last night's competitions follow, the owners' names appearing in brackets:

Three gaits for stallions, mares, or geldings—Dude [Myles Camaven], first; Lady Mary [Fred J. Hisgen Jr.], second; Wildflower [J. M. Harris], third; Glittering Glory [W. R. Mahan], fourth.

Performance class [jumping]—The Grey Parson [Capt. W. D. Van Ingen], first; Wee McGregor [O. W. Lehmann], second; Landsdown [O. W. Lehmann], third; Great Scott [O. W. Lehmann], fourth.

Combination saddle and harness horses—Blue Grass [Mrs. Roger Pemberton], first; Dude [Myles Camaven], second; Lady Mary [Fred J. Hisgen Jr.], third; The Actress [F. M. and M. J. Flynn], fourth.

Ladies' hunters—Under Fire [O. W. Lehmann], first; Gaelic [Dr. Walter Venn], second; Doctor Bruckner [Capt. W. D. Van Ingen], third.

Artillery section—Battery A, 14th F. A., Fort Sheridan, first; Battery B, 14th F. A., Fort Sheridan, second; section of 122d F. A., National Guard, third; section 124, F. A., National Guard, fourth.

Seek $25,000 to Endow Room in New Hospital

The Alumnae Association of St. Luke's Hospital Training school has opened a drive for an endowment fund of $25,000 to endow a room to be called the Margaret Edith Johnstone memorial for the care of sick nurses. It will be placed in the new hospital now in the course of construction on Indiana avenue.

2 FIREMEN HURT, GUESTS ROUTED BY WALDORF FIRE

New York, May 10.—[Special.]—A score of guests of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel were routed today and two firemen were injured when flames in the basement carpenter shop and laundry sent smoke through ventilators into rooms of the Old Colony annex at 33d street and Astor court.

The fire, never of a threatening nature, was extinguished quickly and for the most part guests, except in the annex and lobby, did not even know of the trouble until smoke drifted through Peacock alley after the fire was under control.

None of the guests was injured, although the smoke caused a short epidemic of coughing. Those in the annex were warned to vacate their rooms.

No Equal for this Value Offered Elsewhere

Scan the market closely. Look where you like. You'll see nowhere a match for this Four-Door Coupe—in beauty, in performance, in value—at a similar price.

It owns a rich distinction in body design. It is finished and fitted throughout with consummate good taste.

There are four broad doors. Windows are wide, too, and built weather-snug and rattle-free.

All steel used is tested for exact chemical content and hardness by scientific laboratory methods. So, exceptional endurance is assured.

Especially devised machines, so sensitive they register a human breath blown upon them, balance the crankshaft to positive perfection.

That gives you far smoother power-flow and at the same time results in greatly reduced bearing pressure.

Pistons, likewise, are tested by machines that instantly expose a variation in size of as little as a tenth of a thousandth of an inch.

It is this close precision, this conscientious and scientific shop practice, that gives this Nash model its superb quality and value-leadership. Come view it!

"DEPORT THE DRY LAW VIOLATORS," SAY METHODISTS

Conferees Also Would Ban All Tobacco.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Springfield, Mass., May 10.—[Special.]—A direct appeal by committees appointed for the purpose will be made to the national party platform makers at Cleveland and New York that all semblance of alliance with the wets be avoided, according to resolutions today at the Methodist general conference. The resolutions, however, did not urge the insertion of a dry plank.

Discrimination against aliens with specific mention of the refusal of the United States to grant citizenship to the natives of India was denounced as undemocratic and unChristian.

The resolution demanding that prohibition enforcement be put on the civil service list and that aliens twice convicted of liquor law violations be deported and that American born citizens convicted three times be disfranchised was passed today over protests on some points by the biggest prohibition leaders.

Says Aliens Come to Bootleg.

The Rev. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the commission on temperance, prohibition, and public morals, advocated the deportation of aliens on the plea that some foreigners came to this country with the understanding that we are only loosely enforcing the prohibition law and with the expectation that they would "coin money."

On the question of disfranchisement of American born violators Dr. Wilson declared the conference would be a laughing stock in Washington if the recommendation passed.

The Rev. Wilbur E. Hammeter, Youngstown, O., attempted to get the provision to put prohibition enforcement under civil service tabled. He said this provision was a two edged sword, which would cut both ways.

"Under civil service," he said, "any one smooth and crooked enough could establish himself in office."

Cigaret Ban Causes Stir.

The resolutions aimed at abolishing the cigaret, introduced by the Rev. J. C. Craig, St. Paul district superintendent, caused some excitement when a delegate moved that all tobacco be added to the taboo list.

Many of the lay delegates are known to indulge in cigars and the pipe. The resolution was referred to the committee on temperance, prohibition, and public morals.

The bishops were instructed to make a study of the Dyer anti-lynching law and report on their findings.

In supporting the resolution regarding the race problem and the attitude of Christian governments toward non-Christian governments, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, a missionary to the high caste Hindus of India, said the people of India were willing to meet any test as to standards for becoming citizens of the United States.

"They would not be offended," he said, "if only one Indian was admitted. They simply do not like to be humiliated as a nation."

The convention of Methodist men opened in the Auditorium at 2 o'clock today. There are 2,000 delegates. The conference was organized by the Rev. Bert E. Smith of Chicago.

FACTS PROVE SANITARY CANAL USES LESS THAN OTHER WORKS IN LAKES

The dispute over the sanitary district's withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan for the drainage canal has centered for years about the contention as to lake levels.

Districts both in this country and in Canada that are in opposition to the Chicago needs have contended that the withdrawal of water is lowering the level of Lake Michigan and other lakes, and thus interfering with navigation, etc.

The sanitary district has begun the presentation of its case before the rivers and harbors committee in Washington. It is probable that among the data submitted will be a table showing the mean lake level at Chicago for each year from 1860 to date.

The figures, beginning 582.68 opposite the year 1860 and running on through to figure 579.33 opposite the year 1923, indicate the number of feet the lake at this point is above sea level.

It may be pointed out that the height of the lake in 1896, for example, was only .14 foot, or less than an inch, higher than the mean lake level in 1923.

Engineer Wisner of the sanitary district affirms that Chicago's withdrawal from the lake during the years that the sanitary canal has been in operation amounts to only about five and a half inches, while the works damming Lake Superior and some work in the St. Clair flats has been responsible for the lowering of the other lake levels in the amount of one foot each.

The sanitary canal was opened in 1900. In 1901, for example, the lake level was slightly higher than in 1899, just before the opening. Here are the figures for years:

DEVER SETS OUT CITY'S CASE IN WATER DISPUTE

Canada Already Has Her Rights, He Declares.

corporation for self-gain. Its requests are not to be confused with those of power interests. The natural fall at Lockport, Ill., is used to make power, but Chicago is not interested in that, for if all the water were used to make power we would still be able to buy our power from private interests at no increase in price.

Predicts Great Waterway.

"The Chicago sanitary district is the preservative of the best interests of the middle west. Through its canal and on its water a great waterway to the gulf of Mexico will come into being.

"Every state up and down the Mississippi from head to mouth will benefit—how much can be guessed from the fact that Chicago firms now can ship certain commodities to the Pacific coast cheaper by using rail to New York and boat through the Panama canal than by direct rail to the coast.

"I don't know why our neighbors are so vicious against us"—and he turned to congressmen from Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Ohio—"I don't know why their people have become so misled ,but I ask them to forget sectional and civic jealousies, to realize that our gain is their greater gain and to place their problems alongside of ours and let us settle them amicably in a fashion fair to all.

Refers to Paid "Ads."

"It has been charged here that the sanitary district wastes money; that it should not buy advertisements in out of town papers to set forth its claims. It has had to do that to bring the truth before its neighbors. Is it wrong to tell the truth? Is it wrong to spend money to help our neighbors learn the truth? Unwise at the time, perhaps, but not wrong.

"We have been surrounded by prejudices created by I don't know what, and we are trying to disillusion the people who hold those prejudices. The prejudices became so strong that newspapers in our neighboring states would not print our side unless we paid for it—so we spent money to get our side known, and the result is that some of our neighbors try to make it appear that we are buying influence and friendship.

Problem Must Be Met.

"Now, Chicago is a great, rapid growing city. In twenty-five years we will have 6,000,000 population—not to mention thousands down in the Illinois valley who are affected by the sanitary district. I don't want to be throwing scares, but this is a serious problem that must be met. It is no cry of wolf to say that thousands of our people will die from typhoid epidemics if our water is cut off. There would be a tremendous loss of life, and I know that no member of this committee wants to have any of the blame on his shoulders.

"Chicago stands before you ready to do as much—probably more than any city in the country, to spend more money, to build more plants, to do everything to protect ourselves and our neighbors and to help ourselves and our neighbors. We have already rebuilt our sewer system several times—we had to because of our fast growth.

Will Damage No One.

"We must have water to protect our lives; we should have it to build a great inland waterway; we will damage no one in taking it. We come before you with this statement:

"'Chicago will do anything and everything to protect every American interest in any way affected by our withdrawals of 10,000 cubic feet of water per second.'"

Mayor Dever left for Chicago this afternoon. He had no opportunity to appear before the Brookhart committee to explain about the beer situation in Chicago as the committee will not be in session until Tuesday.

George F. Barrett, general counsel for the Sanitary district, outlined the situation and cited government records to show that the United States owns about 64 per cent of the great lakes, including all of Lake Michigan, which is not a boundary water. Also it controls 59 per cent of the great lakes drainage area. Thus, he argued, it obviously is entitled to more water than Canada, although Canada now gets nearly twice as much as the United States.

FRIENDS OF RINI, HANGED FRIDAY, PLAN FUNERAL

"Little Italy" Gets Ready for Ceremony.

Plans for a pretentious funeral for Joseph Rini, one of the six men hanged Friday in Louisiana for the murder of Dallas Calmes of Independence, La., who frustrated their attempted robbery of a bank there, were made yesterday by his friends and associates, who gathered at his home, 1150 Milton avenue, the heart of "Little Italy."

They awaited word from elder Rini, and Joe's brother William, who left for New Orleans, La., to bring the body to Chicago. It is expected to arrive tonight at the Illinois Central station.

Money Couldn't Save.

Thousands of Chicago and New York dollars failed to save Rini and his pals from the hangman's noose. It was estimated that approximately $200,000 was collected. Several business men of repute, and two municipal judges, are said to have contributed several thousand dollars, to enable friends of Rini to have the case brought to a higher court.

At the home of Mrs. Mary La Paglia, a sister of the dead man, who occupies the apartment below that of her father, several friends gathered. They were discussing plans for the burial. Suddenly their conversation changed. Who was responsible for Joe's sudden trip to Louisiana, somebody asked? Was it a girl? Some said it was. Others said he had intended visiting an uncle in New Orleans. There he met the gang.

As They Account for It.

"Why, Joe was disgusted. He fell in love with some Clark street dame. He heard that she was 'wrong.' That broke his heart and he didn't care what happened," was the version of one of his close friends.

Another said probably Joe had run out of "ready dough" and had taken a "flyer" in hopes of getting some.

According to one of his friends, who had made a trip south several months ago to see him, Joe had told him that he was in his room when the bank was robbed.

Rini had been, at one time, proprietor of the Belvedere café, a notorious North Clark street cabaret. Previous to purchasing the cabaret he had been employed as a machinist. He was employed by the Cuneo Book Binding company, and the R. R. Donnelly company for several years before entering the cabaret life.

Damage Suit Sequel to Ground Glass Charge

Dr. I. Val Freedman, 5816 Kenmore avenue, yesterday was named defendant in a suit for $25,000 damages, filed in the Circuit court by Miss Ella Radich, 4310 Crystal street, who charged false arrest and imprisonment.

Her attorney, Anton Zeman, declared Dr. Freedman had falsely accused the young woman, who worked as a domestic in the Freedman household, of having placed ground glass in their food with an intent of causing their deaths.

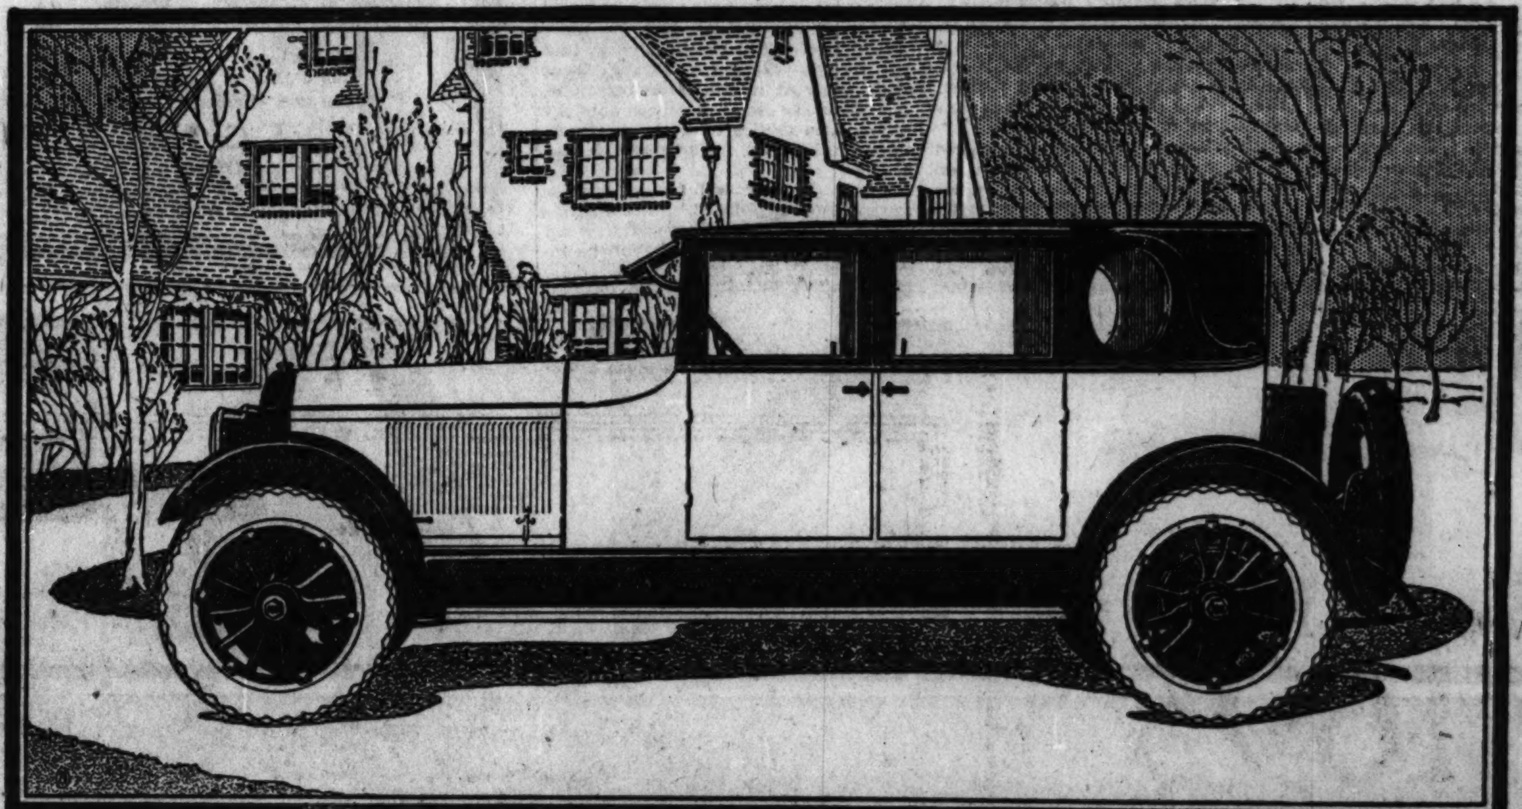
A New Creation by Paige!



The 4-Door Brougham—$2175

[Standard Open Models Now $1795]

HERE'S the latest Paige creation—the 4-Door Brougham. Think of an enclosed Paige at less than you must pay for enclosed models of smaller, cheaper cars—$2175! And what a car! You'll agree its appearance is smarter than any car you've ever seen—with its close-coupled lines and striking finish. The lower half of the body is finished in maroon, contrasting with black fenders and black fine-grain leather finish on the upper rear quarter of the body.

Smartly Finished

Interior finish matches the outside in fineness—gray mohair upholstery; silvered fixtures; silk shades. Equipment includes sun visor; windshield wiper; heater; gasoline gauge and clock on the dash. Door pockets carry travel comforts. In the rear a commodious trunk—leather finished to match the top—for luggage.

There's all the chumminess of a coupe in this smart New Paige with ample room for five—and the convenience of four doors. And such riding comfort—with rear springs more than five feet long, snubbers front and rear, 131-inch wheelbase!

Paige Performance

And remember—this striking Brougham has all the famous performance of the New Paige. For here's the smooth, silent, big 70 h.p. Paige motor—its long-lived performance assured by high-pressure oiling. Drive from two miles an hour in high to as fast as you'll want to go—smoothly and silently. Pass most any cars on the road or up hills.

Steering is easy with the ball-bearing steering spindles in the New Paige. Jerking or stalling is forbidden by the gently engaging Paige clutch. Gear shifting is easy and quiet.

Think of this New Paige 4-Door Brougham with all its smartness of appearance, its comfort, its marvelous performance—at the astonishing price of $2175! Remember, too, the New Paige is still the same big quality car, improved throughout, that last year sold for hundreds of dollars more. For example, the Paige Phaeton formerly sold for $2450. The New Paige sells for only $1795.

Big Plant Lowers Price

Our plant capacity has been increased 300% for this year. Increased production means lowered overhead—savings in purchasing. The hundreds of dollars in lowered cost on each car comes to you in the many improvements of the New Paige—and its low price. See this New Paige 4-Door Brougham. Drive it. Call us for a demonstration at your convenience. (SB-5-X)

SMACK LIPS IN MINNESOTA OVER SMITH AND BEER

Both Parties Cock Eyes at N. Y. Convention.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Mankato, Minn., May 10.—[Special.]—Gov. Al Smith of New York seems to have many ardent friends in the midwest among Republicans who are wishing him "happy days," at the Democratic national convention in New York. Dryness is supposed to be inherent in the agricultural states, but out in the wide open spaces where men are men, a thirst seems to be a thirst, and wherever one wanders he finds members of the G. O. P. saying Smith on an oasis issue would trundle up a lot of votes.

In northern Iowa and southern Minnesota, which are considerably alike, one finds Republicans just now more interested in the New York convention than in the one at Cleveland. President Coolidge on the first ballot, a cut and dried program, makes them regard the Republican convention as a tame and rather perfunctory show and advance interest is rather languid.

How About Al Smith.

The minute one sounds the natives on national politics, he gets a counter question, "Who are the Democrats going to nominate? What about Gov. Smith?" From all indications the midwest esophagus is far dustier than some of the eastern politicians believe. It may sound strange, but this pilgrim in the last 800 miles has met a procession of Republicans, both leaders and rank and filers, who have almost smacked their lips as they have discussed the possibility of Smith's nomination.

And apart from light wines and beeriness, they have been remarking that he must have real stuff in him to gather the support he has from highbrows and lowbrows in the state of New York. As local Republican leaders have been expressing it, William G. McAdoo would be a setup in the bowling alley for Coolidge and the President would knock the pins through the back wall. But with Smith as Democratic nominee Coolidge would have something on his hands in states like Minnesota, where the "German vote" is strong.

A Damp Belt.

As old timers view it, a progressive, liberal Democrat on a Volstead modification plank would have a good chance to get the electoral votes of Indiana, Wisconsin and perhaps Minnesota, which would be a sizeable chunk in the electoral college.

And if La Follette should head a third party, states with narrow margins, like Nebraska and the Dakotas, although dry, would be squeezed out of the Republican column. Across Indiana, Illinois and central Iowa, Democrats seem to regard Senator Ralston of Indiana, who looks like Grover Cleveland, in highest favor, but in southern Minnesota and northern Iowa, Smith is by all odds the favorite among the Democrats, while Republicans are hoping he gets on the Democratic ticket.

They'd Get a Kick.

They may stick to Coolidge, but at any rate a wet issue would give them something worth more careful consideration than the world court or some other academic question. That's quite a well defined view in a large section. We heard much to this effect on the pike from Cedar Rapids, through Mason City, Estherville and Spirit Lake, Ia., and in southern Minnesota on the road through Jackson, Fairmont, Blue Earth into Mankato.

A sentiment is quite pronounced that the political attitude in large farming areas this year will depend upon the status of prosperity among the farmers. If the Democrats pick a strong man to run against Coolidge and La Follette runs as a third candidate, the middle west will be the real fighting ground of the campaign.

Southern Minnesota is in good shape. Agriculture here suffered less than in many other sections last summer when wheat slumped off. Farming is diversified. The little red hen and the dairy cow, corn and alfalfa crowded wheat out years ago as the revenue producer.

In the peak period there was less speculation in farm lands than in the spots in Iowa where the land boom was craziest, so that fewer farmers are left holding the bag at the bank since land prices sagged. Land values are from $50 to $75 an acre lower than in Iowa and overhead is thus somewhat lower.

But taxes are still a heavy weight. Farmers and business men say the greatest of the newer burdens is the consolidated school.

Three Women Shoplifters Fined and Sent to Jail

Three women shoplifters were arraigned in the South Clark street court yesterday. Miss Cal Pierce of Sulphur Springs, Ky., was charged with stealing a $50 coat from a State street store. She was given a fine of $1 and sentenced to one day in jail. Mrs. Marie Evans, an actress, who lives at the St. Regis hotel, was fined $25 and costs. She had stolen a dress. Mrs. Catherine McGee, 3435 Fulton street, was given one year of probation. She had stolen some towels.

ARREST COLORED BANDIT.

Richard Davis, colored, was arrested yesterday after he had attempted to hold up a store owned by Max Morris, 515 West 47th street. The bandit fired a bullet through Morris' leg.

GOTHAM CRIME EXPERT MAY GET W. J. BURNS' POST

Washington, D. C., May 10.—Inspector Faurot, noted criminologist of the New York police force, today was the man most prominently mentioned as probable successor to William J. Burns, who resigned as head of the bureau of investigation, department of justice. Fourot is understood to have the support of Senator Wadsworth, and his name has been suggested to President Coolidge and Attorney General Stone.

W. H. Moran, head of the secret service, also is mentioned as Burns' successor.

An appointment will be made promptly to fill Burns' place, it was indicated. Burns asked to be relieved at once on the grounds of poor health.

French Find Process to Rid Tobacco of Nicotine

PARIS, May 10. — [By the Associated Press.]—The state tobacco factory laboratory has discovered a process for removing all the nicotine from tobacco without, it is claimed, affecting its flavor. A plant now is being erected for the manufacture of the new brand on a large scale, and it is hoped to place it on sale within two months.

STUART PORTRAIT MAY BELONG TO CITY IN A WEEK

With the raising of $10,000 the Gilbert Stuart painting of George Washington will become the property of Chicago and the fund being raised by the Art institute, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and the Herald and Examiner and Mayor Dever's committee of seventy-five will reach the goal, $75,000.

The campaign has been going on since the last week of February. During the week just past $20,000 was raised. It is hoped that the necessary $10,000 will be obtained before another Sunday dawns.

What would you give for a chair that had stood in the beautiful mansion at Mount Vernon during Washington's day? What would be the value of his dining room table, his saddle, his saber, his snuff box, his easy chair, his bed? Now Chicago is offered a painting which was in the living presence of our nation's father, a painting that was made by one of America's greatest artists, Gilbert Stuart. It is a painting of rich historic value. Art collectors have valued it at various amounts ranging from $100,000 to $150,000.

The picture was offered to Chicago for $100,000, and its owner, hoping that it would become our property by public subscription, made a personal donation of $25,000, leaving it to our 3,000,000 citizens to raise the remaining $75,000.

Is it within the possibilities that big hearted Chicagoans will step forward this week and give the necessary money? That is the aim to finish the campaign this week.

The official list of contributions received yesterday by the Art institute totaled $1,651.54, but of that amount $1,559.25 had already been credited to the fund. The benefit given last Monday night at the Auditorium theater, where the moving picture "America" was exhibited for the first time, was successful. Part of the proceeds of that exhibition amounted to $1,559.25.

Other donations of yesterday:

Asbestos Workers' union.	$25.
Eugene Field school, Elmhurst.	$13.53.
Chicago Delphian Forum club.	$8.
Theodore Roosevelt school.	$7.76.
A. S. Munell.	$5.

A total of $33 was received from contributors who sent less than $5 each.

THE NEW MOON SERIES A, TWO-DOOR SEDAN

MOON Announces Another Big Value

HERE is the new MOON Series A, two-door Sedan—just out. Right up to the minute. The last word in closed car luxury and comfort.

You must see this car to appreciate what a big value the MOON people are delivering for such a low price.

We hardly need to call your attention to the fact that this is an extremely smart looking car. The MOON has for several years been admitted to be one of the smartest cars in the country. And this model conforms to the style that has given MOON this reputation.

It has a Duco finish—the neatest, snappiest and most durable finish on the market.

But the thing that will particularly appeal to you about this Sedan is its comfort and roominess—room such as you never dreamed possible in a car of this type.

There is plenty of room for three large people to sit in comfort in the back seat.

Nothing we can say can convey the comfort in the driver's seat, but you'll get it the minute you slide in behind the wheel. Plenty of room in the seat and room to spare for your elbows and arms.

The interior is finished in a beautiful wear-resisting gray broadcloth.

Ample room on the back for picnic basket, luggage or a golf outfit makes the car ideal for all-around use.

You will find this new Sedan so far ahead of the times that you wouldn't blame us if we called it a 1925 Model. By all means come in and look it over.

RICHARDSON Product

From the makers of Flex-a-tile Housetops, Viskalt Membrane Roofs, Viskote and similar products

The home of Mr. G. Wilshire Runck, 3974 Clifton Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. Warren E. Richards & Co., architects and builders

Many choose their roofing color from this Cincinnati home

The striking beauty of color which Mr. G. Wilshire Runck of Cincinnati, Ohio, has obtained for his roof by the use of weathered brown, slate surfaced shingles has been greatly admired.

Indeed, not a few of those who saw this roof decided to add to the beauty of their homes in the same way.

This new color, weathered brown, gives to your roof the rich, mellow tones of harvested fields in autumn, permanently fixed in gems of slate. Weathering only enriches and deepens its rare beauty.

Weathered brown is found only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia, permanently fixed in slate. Such exclusive color in millions of tiny slate flakes not only gives a roof new beauty but also seals each shingle securely against weather and fire hazards.

If weathered brown is not suited to the color scheme of your home, you can get the Richardson Super-Giant in other beautiful colors—jade green, tile red, and black pearl.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof

This, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in the Richardson Multicrome Roof. Many other effects are possible—one to harmonize with each color scheme and sure to please your taste. Weathered brown, for instance, has also proved popular when applied in combination with other Richardson shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl. And the new opal roof, built from the new Richardson opal shingles, is greatly admired by both architects and home owners.

The new colors, opal and weathered brown, are used only on the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle—famous for its beauty and economy.

With its inner foundation of Richardson felt, for fifty years recognized as the best; coated and saturated with Viskalt, the vacuum-processed waterproofing, 99.8% pure bitumen, the Super-Giant assures lasting beauty for your roof.

The Super-Giant Shingle—50% thicker, 100% more rigid, and 35% more economical in cost of laying

Go to the nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, whose name is listed below, or to your contractor, and ask to see the color combinations in Richardson Multicrome Roofs.

Prove the facts yourself

See the Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown and opal. Note the rare color and larger size. Then compare it with other shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our beautiful new booklet, Roofs of Distinction, showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing, and containing valuable roofing facts. Or, ask for our booklet Roofing on the Farm. Write Dept. 1-L, Lockland.

CHILHOWEE BOBS UP AS DERBY HOPE

IOWA'S 13 FIRSTS SWAMP MAROON RUNNERS, 98-37

BROOKINS COPS A RECORD AND SCORING HONORS

University of Chicago's track and field team was swamped by Iowa, 98 to 37, in a dual meet at the Midway yesterday. The Hawks scored firsts in thirteen of the fifteen events, made slams in the hammer throw and century dash, equaled a Chicago track record when Crawford hurdled the 120 yard high barriers in :15 2-5 and broke another when Charley Brookins took the low hurdles in :24. Bruce MacFarlane, a Maroon, also equaled a record by stepping the 220 yard dash in :22 2-5.

Brookins, Iowa captain, was high point man with ten counters and was one of the most spectacular performers. He copped the 100 yard dash in :10 and in winning the 220 yard low hurdles went 3-5 of a second faster than the Chicago record of :24 3-5, set by F. T. Ward in 1915.

Harry Frida, Chicago's versatile athlete, placed in three events to garner nine tallies. In a special event, Walter Bowers, former Maroon runner, beat Ray Watson of the Illinois Athletic club, running a mile in 4:29 3-5 and came from behind to win. Crawford of Iowa upset the dope by beating Capt. Jake Brickman of Chicago in both the low and high hurdles.

Chilly weather and the damp track slowed the times. Summaries:

FIELD EVENTS.

Shotput—Won by Dauber [I.]; Daine [I.], second; Hobscheid [C.], third. Distance, 41 feet 8 inches. Pole vault—Won by Meder [I.]; Boyles [I.], second; Frida [C.], third. Height, 11 feet 6 inches. High jump—Dobson and Klindt [I.] tied for first and second; Rittenhouse [C.], third. Height, 6 feet. Discus throw—Won by Hancock [I.]; Frida [C.], second; Daine [I.], third. Distance, 135 feet 4 inches. Hammer throw—Won by Fritz [I.]; Hancock [I.], second; Handy [I.], third. Distance, 124 feet 11 inches. Broad jump—Won by Jones [I.]; Brickman [C.], second; Harvey [C.], third. Distance, 21 feet 4¾ inches. Javelin throw—Won by Frida [C.]; Berne [I.], second; Caruso [C.], third. Distance, 187 feet.

TRACK EVENTS.

100 yard dash—Won by Brookins [I.]; Coulter [I.], second; Roberts [I.], third. Time, :10. One mile run—Won by Goodrich [I.]; Bourke [C.], second; Van Ness [I.], third. Time, 4:33 3-5. 220 yard dash—Won by MacFarlane [C.]; Kennwein [C.], second; Roberts [I.], third. Time, :22 3-5. 120 yard high hurdles—Won by Crawford [I.]; Brickman [C.], second; Jones [C.], third. Time, :15 2-5. 440 yard run—Won by Coulter [I.]; Kohl [I.], second; Jones [C.], third. Time, :52. Two mile run—Won by Phelps [I.]; Bourke [C.], second; Bender [I.], third. Time, 9:53. 220 yard low hurdles—Won by Brookins [I.]; Crawford [I.], second; Brickman [C.], third. Time, :24. Half mile run—Morrow [I.] and Otte [I.] tied for first and second; A. Edler [C.], third. Time, 2:03. Special race, mile run—Walter Bowers defeated Ray Watson. Time, 4:29 3-5.

M'GRAW TARGET OF BITTER FLING BY PHILLY PREXY

Philadelphia, Pa., May 10.—President William F. Baker of the Philadelphia Nationals in a statement tonight replying to a recently published article by Manager McGraw of the New York Giants criticizing the playing ability of the Phillies, said that it was "very bad taste for McGraw, vice president and manager of one club, to criticize publicly a club in his own league."

McGraw, in his criticism, said that if waivers were asked on the Phillies three-fourths of the players would not be claimed by other major league clubs.

"Let us look closely for his motive for his criticism of the Phillies," Mr. Baker's statement said, "and perhaps we may find something sinister behind it. Let the fans of Philadelphia remember the Meusel and Stengel episodes.

"Take also the case of Meadows, whose work for the Phillies was not up to his ability. It never has been made public, but it is true that at the end of July, 1922, one of the officials of the New York club called me up at night at my home and offered me $100,000 cash and two young players for Meadows, and I refused it.

"Who can tell," the statement further said, "if his criticism of the Phillies should create discontent among two or three of our players with the thought on his part that another shaking of the golden tree might cause one or two of them to fall into his lap."

TISKILWA BOY KILLED WHEN HIT BY BALL

Kewanee, Ill., May 10.—[Special.]—Harlan Kenney, age 14, son of M. A. Kenney of Tiskilwa, was struck by a batted ball while watching practice at Tiskilwa high school grounds yesterday. He was revived and was supposed to be out of danger, but was taken worse in the night and died. No blame was attached at the inquest.

TIGERS EASY FOR YALE TRACKMEN

New Haven, Conn., May 10.—Yale found Princeton an easy opponent in the annual dual games of the universities at Yale field today, winning 81 to 54. Yale was strong on the track, taking 52 points, and in the field its strength was quite unexpected, the Elis taking 29 points to 24 for Princeton. Three Yale-Princeton dual meet records fell and one was tied.

"HOLLY" COMES BACK TO CUBS ON 2 YEAR CONTRACT

Charles Hollocher, the balky shortstop, has returned to Bill Killefer's Cubs and inside of four or five days will be back at his old place of business.

Without any preliminary negotiations the athlete appeared at the Cubs' office in the Wrigley building yesterday morning and announced that he was ready to go to work provided an agreement could be reached on salary

Reinstated by Landis.

After recovering from the surprise occasioned by the unexpected appearance of the athlete, President William Veeck stated the club's best "bid" and Hollocher said it was satisfactory. Before signing, however, it was necessary to go through the formality of a reinstatement and this was accomplished in a flying trip to the office of Commissioner Landis.

Following the reinstatment Hollocher returned to the Cubs' office and affixed his signature to a contract, but the terms were not announced. It is said that the document covers two years at $12,000 but does not provide that the player receive the $4,200 he would have earned as salary had he remained with the club last season instead of going home Aug. 2.

Hollocher went home last year when he claimed he was too ill to do himself or the team justice. He departed without consulting either Manager Killefer or President Veeck. During the winter the club endeavored to line him up for the present season, but negotiations were halted when Hollocher demanded salary for the term of his absence.

Trade Talk Starts.

President Veeck offered to pay the back salary in two annual installments, provided Hollocher would sign a two year contract. The player refused to consider anything but a lump sum of $4,200 in advance, but the club refused to do business on that basis. No further effort was made to sign him.

As soon as Hollocher returned yesterday, stories were started about a pending trade that would send him to St. Louis by way of Brooklyn, but President Veeck denied that any such move was contemplated.

SAO PAULO, Brazil, May 10.—Erminio Spalla, who claims the heavyweight boxing championship of Europe, will fight the Brazilian heavyweight, Benedicto, here tomorrow. Spalla plans to leave for the United States soon.

WEISS BREAKS 100 YARD MARK

Omaha, Neb., May 10.—Johnny Weissmuller of the Illinois Athletic club clipped two-fifths of a second off his own world's record of :51 4-5 in the 100 yard free style swim here tonight.

Borg, Swedish Swimmer, Breaks Half Mile Mark

Stanford University, Cal., May 10.—Arne Borg, Swedish swimmer, broke the 10:42 2-5 world's record for the half mile, held by himself, in 10:28 3-5 in the Leland Stanford tank.

KICK UP MUD IN KENTUCKY DERBY WORKOUTS

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

TURF NOMENCLATURE.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10.—Persons with only a casual interest in the turf probably do not recognize the thought bestowed by many breeders and owners in the naming of their racers. Turf nomenclature always has been an interesting study to The Wake. We often find names of singular appropriateness or suggestion as related to the sire and dam.

Take Wise Counsellor, winter book favorite for the Kentucky Derby. He is by Mentor-Rustle, his name suggested by that of his sire. St. James, most favored of the easterners, is by Ambassador IV.-Bobolink II., the Ambassador undoubtedly bestowing the name. Sarazen, we are informed, was named in honor of the golf pro and we do not detect any significance in his ancestry, High Time-Rush Box.

Other Derby candidates whose names appear to have been derived in part from their breeding are:

Battle Creek, by Sweep On-Munition.
Spic and Span, by Whisk Broom II-Sub Rosa.
Sun Flag, by Sun Briar-Private Flag.
Nautical, by Sea King-Bambi.
Time Exposure, by High Time-Photo.
Altawood, by Master Robert-Crestwood Girl.
Black Gold, by Black Toney-Useeit.
Diogenes, by Ballot-Smoky Lamp.
Modest, by Colin-Shyness.
Cannon Shot, by War Shot-Purse.
Finn Lag, by The Finn-Oceana.
Mad Play, by Fair Play-Madcap.
Gonfalon, by Pennant-Bonnie Broom.
Pickpocket, by Whisk Broom II-Bakshesh.

Kind the fate to let one linger
Where a mother, true, doth reign;
One whose tasks, though plainly many,
Finds withal the time to gain
The confidence of all her children,
As she harkens to each tale,
Whether tale of woe or other,
Never letting stout heart quail.
Tenderly she guides small footsteps,
Chides with kind, well chosen word
Erring one who ventured rashly—
Shielding as a wounded bird.
Now she smoothes the brow of sick one
With a soft, God given stroke,
Then with years grown mother wisdom
Calms the word of sharp provoke.

None in life can equal "Mother,"
Standing strong for truth and right,
There's no word so full of music,
Nor one so beauteous to the sight.

Alex Slips but Cubs Bat Past Robins to Win, 7-5

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Although Mr. Grover C. Alexander stubbed his toe, figuratively speaking, in the first round yesterday, everything worked out satisfactorily. The wabbly start of the veteran let three Robins fly over the pan, but eventually the Cubs started to operate with their bats, and in two sucessive rounds they piled up enough runs to mark their homecoming with a 7 to 5 triumph.

To annex the attraction and make the day worth while for Alex, who was socked a-plenty, the Cubs had to hop on Burleigh Grimes. The latter was a mighty effective hurler in six of the Cub attacks, but in the other two—the fourth and fifth—he was soft picking, and the Cubs grabbed all their tallies in those two rounds on eight hits, a pass, and one error which was the sole defensive slip of the game.

Alex's Control Weakens.

Besides being hit harder than customary for him, Alex also slipped on control. When the going was hot in the first inning he handed a pass to Fournier, but this was due mainly to the fact that Alex didn't want to let the Frenchman get a swing at a good ball. Jack refused to nibble at the bad ones, so strolled to end Alex's walkless record at thirty-nine innings.

Speaking of Alex, it might be well to mention that there might have been a few more than eleven hits against him if some of his mates hadn't been traveling in high speed. Each of the outfielders flagged line drives that looked like bad money, and on three separate occasions Hartnett popped out from behind the plate to stab sneaky rollers.

Grigsby Glistens in Garden.

Possibly the most effective of Killefer's young bloods was Denver Grigsby, who is doing business in left field while Hack Miller is on a search for his batting eye. Grigsby's first contribution was a single that drove in two runs in the fifth, and those two runs carried the decision. His other notable contribution was on defense, consisting of a dandy running catch of Wheat's drive that ended the game.

Hits by Nels and Johnston put Alex in bad in the first inning. Wheat relieved the situation somewhat when he tapped to the pitcher for a force play at third. Then Alex uncorked a wild pitch and walked Fournier to load the sacks. Stock fouled out, but T. Griffith doubled to score a pair, and Hight beat out a scratch that scored another.

How Cubs Pulled Ahead.

When the Cub fourth pulled around, Ray Grimes poked a single to right with one gone and Friberg drew free transportation. Grigsby fanned. Heathcote drove a single to center and R. Grimes tallied. Hartnett did the same to score Friberg and when Wheat fumbled the ball Heathcote also crossed the plate and Hartnett went to second. He counted on a hit by Alex.

Adams and Grantham showed up with singles in the fifth, putting runners on third and first with none defunct. R. Grimes popped out but Friberg tore off a double to left and Adams tallied. Then Grigsby came through with his hit that let Grantham and Friberg reach home.

ROMERO GLUTTON FOR PUNISHMENT

New York, May 10.—Quintin Romero, Chilean heavyweight champion, who was badly beaten last night by Floyd Johnson, said today that he was going to train for six weeks at Summit, N. J., and would seek a return bout with Johnson.

He was so badly cut up last night that four stitches had to be taken over his left eye. He said that he would remain indoors for three or four days.

The contest drew approximately $32,000, of which Johnson got $6,300 and Romero $4,200.

WINS IMPRESSIVE VICTORY IN RACE AT LOUISVILLE

Western Enthusiasts Take Heart Again.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Louisville, Ky., May 10.—[Special.]—Kentucky has two more powerful candidates for the Golden Derby here next Saturday as a result of sensational victories scored during the opening day's card of the Churchill Downs spring season here today.

Chilhowee, a son of Ballot and Bourbon Lass, defeated the great Chacolet and a band of the best stake horses in the west to win the $10,000 Clark handicap.

Running the mile and an eighth over a track ankle deep in mud as a result of rains which were falling throughout the afternoon, the Derby colt, owned by Gallaher Brothers, led Chacolet, winner a week ago of the $25,000 Dixie handicap at Pimlico, by a length and a half at the finish. His time was 1:54 2-5, which is remarkable when the terrible condition of the track is taken into consideration.

Comes from Behind.

Chilhowee came from behind to win, racing Moonraker from Mrs. Payne Whitney's string, into submission at the head of the stretch and outstaying Chacolet in the desperate battle which took place in the last furlong. Hopeless, a stablemate of Chacolet, got up to third money.

Peter Coyne's King Gorin II. was the other Derby colt to win in such impressive fashion today that his price in the Derby winter books everywhere was sent tumbling. He won the Fall City handicap from a band made up mostly of Derby eligibles by four lengths from Dudley, a Derby colt owned by former Senator J. N. Camden. He ran the mile in 1:40 3-5, his victory, if anything, being a bit more startling to Kentucky folks than was the triumph of Chilhowee. Dazzler, a Mrs. Payne Whtiney Derby colt, was third. None of the rest that started, including Fretwell, Colonel Gilmore, and Bourbon Boy, looked good in the kind of going they were asked to run through this afternoon.

More than 20,000 people braved rains and otherwise unpleasant conditions to journey to Churchill Downs today as the new season was ushered in. And after the showing by Chilhowee and King Gorin II. most every one in the Blue Grass was convinced that Kentucky has the greatest chance in a decade this year to win the Derby.

Cannon Shot Is Beaten.

Cannon Shot, the Pacific coast dark horse, made his first Kentucky appearance in the third race against such noted mud demons as Glide, Pindar Peel and Great Jazz. The far west hope was five lengths back in fourth place at the end. He never did get going. Rain was sweeping the track while the race was run, and his race today counts for little. He did seem strong at the end of the six furlongs and might have improved his position had the distance been greater.

Track Superintendent Tom Young received word today from Carrol Shilling, trainer for G. A. Cochran, that he would ship his Derby candidates from Pimlico Monday night, arriving here in time to unload Wednesday morning.

Revenue Agent, Spic and Span, Sun Flag and Sunspero are the horses Shilling has eligible for the Derby.

Parke to Ride Wild Aster.

Scott Harlan of the eastern wing of the Greentree Stable also wired today that his Derby horses would leave Maryland Monday night. His wire indicated that Wild Aster will carry the chief hope of Mrs. Payne Whitney for the Derby. Ivan Parke will likely ride Wild Aster.

There was an interesting meet at the Downs this afternoon between Edward R. Bradley, master of Idle Hour farm, and C. Bruce Head, owner of Altawood. Bradley is not convinced that Altawood is a more dangerous Derby contender than his Beau Butler, and there were indications after the meeting that a bet of considerable size had been laid.

HEAVY TRACK TO THIN FIELD OF 21 HORSES IN PREAKNESS TOMORROW

BALTIMORE, Md., May 10.—The entry list for Monday's $50,000 Preakness, as announced this afternoon, shows a field of twenty-one thoroughbreds scheduled to face the barrier.

Wise Counsellor's work over a mile and a furlong, the Preakness distance, indicated that he either did not take to the heavy going, or that the route wasn't to his liking. The track undoubtedly will be heavy on Monday. The Rancocas entries, Mad Play and Bracadale, possesses dazzling speed, but their gameness is questioned by many.

Bud Fisher's Nellie Morse, the only filly entered, has performed brilliantly in two starts at Pimlico. G. W. Cochran's Revenue Agent ran a splendid race against older horses in the $25,000 Dixie handicap here a week ago. Rustic, which will carry the hopes of A. H. Morris, is a dangerous contender on this recent form. J. S. Cosden's Nautical, in a good workout today, turned a mile and an eighth in the mud easily in 1:58 2-5. Walter M. Jeffords's Diogenes worked the same distance yesterday in 1:58 4-5.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

New York, May 10.—[Special.]—Earl Combs, the Louisville rookie, reputed to have cost the Yankees some $50,000 in cash and players, completely spoiled Johnny Evers début in New York as an American league manager today.

Combs banged out a single in the tenth inning which scored Wallie Pipp from second base and gave the Yanks a 2 to 1 victory in the first game of the series.

For nine innings the contest was the keenest of pitchers duels. Hollis Thurston, whom the Sox grabbed last season, and Sam Jones, red undershirt and all, battled neck and neck, with honors, if any, going to Thurston by a slight shade.

Each Gives Five Hits.

For a flashy ball game it was one of the best staged in Col. Ruppert's big stadium this season. Despite cold weather and a soggy field, the rival players pulled fielding stunts that savored of games in August.

The rival hurlers were in their prettiest form. Five hits each were hung up by the Yanks and Sox, but the New Yorkers bunched their blows in two innings, while Jones held the Sox clouts to one to an inning.

In the initial round Babe Ruth, reputed to be ailing from chronic bronchitis, showed himself anything but a sick gent. The big bambino smacked the third ball pitched him by Thurston into the left field bleachers for his seventh home run of the season and a slender lead for old Sam.

Thurston Tightens Up.

From that point until the tenth inning the Yanks didn't get a hit. Thurston had his screw ball and fast curve breaking in close to the New York hitters and, while he walked two Yanks, he never was threatened.

Then, in the tenth, Willie Kamm pulled a fast throw which was too wide and Thurston was in a jam. Meusel started the session with a line single to left. Pipp laid down a sacrifice bunt, and Kamm threw too fast to French at second in an attempt to force Meusel, the peg pulling Ray off the bag.

Ward laid down a bunt and Thurston staved off defeat temporarily with a peg to third which forced Meusel but Earl Combs was called in to pinch hit for Scott and banged out his single to right, putting Pipp over with the winning run.

Sox Score in Sixth.

It was not until the sixth inning that the Sox scored their lone tally to tie up the score. Eddie Collins, who drove out two of the five Sox hits, slashed out his second double to right center. Sheely pushed Eddie down to third on a sacrifice bunt, and when Kamm boosted a fly to Witt in deep center Collins raced home.

There was only one more real chance for the Sox to score, and it might have won the game. That came in the tenth inning. After Schalk had fouled out, Thurston slashed a single to left. Wallie Schang let one of Jones' pitches go through and Thurston went to second, and when Jones uncorked a wild pitch he cantered to third. But Archdeacon and Hooper couldn't come through with better than easy rollers to Ward, and Hollis died standing on the hot corner.

SENATORS, 3; TIGERS, 2.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Detroit Tigers lost a hard game in their initial appearance here this season, 3 to 2. When Manager Cobb appeared at bat in the first inning he was met by a delegation of United States senators, representatives, and members of the Gridiron club, headed by Representative Bob Clancy of Michigan, who presented the Tiger pilot with a set of twenty-one books in commemoration of his twenty-one years in professional baseball. INDIANS SEND MACKS TO 10TH DEFEAT IN ROW

Philadelphia, Pa., May 10.—[Special.]—Cleveland, with a second assistant manager on duty and a team weakened by illness and accidents, today inflicted the tenth straight defeat on the skidding Macks and moreover kept them from scoring. The count was 6 to 0.

It was a pitching duel for seven innings, but in the eighth the Indians, who had scored one thin run in the seventh, jumped Rommel for five more markers. Southpaw Edwards kept the eight Mack swats well scattered. Frank Welch, with two singles and a double, led the local attackers. Score:

Our SANITARY Service Keeps Away that Bald Spot

When you have your hair cut, do you ever stop to think that the brush and comb which pass in quick succession from one head to another are bound to convey infection from an unhealthy scalp to a healthy one?

This shop is the most talked of Barber Shop in Chicago, because unusual precautions have been taken to protect YOU!

An individual comb, brush, etc., is taken from a SEALED PACKAGE right before your eyes; when you leave they go at once to a sterilizing machine, which holds them in a formaldehyde bath all night; the towels used on you are immediately after thrown into an automatically closed receptacle, so that there is absolutely no chance of using them again until WASHED AND STERILIZED; everywhere you look, you find the numerous electrical devices and special fixtures which have made this shop FAMOUS for the most perfect SANITARY equipment.

A Shave With a Pleasant After-Feeling

Here also SPECIAL devices are used to prevent disagreeable effects after shaving, such as soreness, itching and eruptions.

You see in front of EACH chair a boiling geyser of water, in which the razor is STERILIZED after stropping and before it touches your face; the Shaving Cream comes fresh and clean from a tube—there are no insanitary cups or germ-gathering cakes of soap; the shaving brush is as much YOURS as if you brought it with you; in fact, our STERILIZING process makes it SAFER than a brush at home.

Twenty picked experts are on hand all day, all evening, and Sundays and Holidays, to give you this prompt, sanitary and unusual service without a cent of additional charge.

Expert manicurists on duty at all times.

SQUARES CORRAL FIRST MIDWEST VICTORY, 11-7

Logan Square opened its home season yesterday by drubbing Beloit Fairies, 11 to 7, at Niesen park. Baude, with two homers that scored six runs, put the game on ice. It was the Squares' first victory of the Midwest league season.

Phillips fanned all three batters in the fourth inning. East, formerly of Washington, polled four hits in five times up for Beloit. Five double plays featured the game, which was played on a wet field. Baude and Mokate pulled several fine catches. Score:

Ford Owners

Have You Seen This Beautiful Master Body?

THE handsome Master Sedan Body has literally leaped into popularity among Ford owners. We announced it just a week ago and since then, great crowds have admired it—marveled at the beauty and comfort it adds to the wonderful Ford chassis.

You never saw such a difference as the Master Body makes—not only in lines, but in roominess and out-and-out comfort.

The Master Body—mounted on a Ford chassis, old or new—gives you a four-door sedan with every convenience and refinement that you find in costly closed cars. Seats are wide and low—laid back at the angle of a comfortable chair.

Nickeled radiator shell—higher hood—sun visor—cowl ventilator—ventilating windshield—vacuum system in combination with new gas tank and gauge at rear—linoleum-covered running boards. And body and hood are finished in satiny Master Blue with famous new Duco, the finest auto finish yet developed.

These same refinements also are included in the large, handsome Master Coupe. You will appreciate its width, its leg room and the broad spacious rear deck with removable lid.

With a Master Body on your Ford chassis you have a car of which you truly can be proud. And best of all the price is remarkably low. Time payments if you wish—and always a generous allowance on your Ford body. Come to the show room today.

Show room open evenings and Sundays

MASTER Bodies

The Master coupe has all the refinements of the larger sedan. You will appreciate the leg room, the wide seat, and the deep deck space under the broad lid, which is entirely removable for greatest capacity.

500 ST. JOHN'S CADETS TO CAMP ON MIDWAY DURING STAGG MEET

THE first entry in the academy division of Stagg's twentieth national interscholastic track and field meet, which will be held at the University of Chicago May 30 and 31, is that of St. John's Military academy of Delafield, Wis. The Badger preps have arranged for space for an encampment at the Midway which will accommodate 500 lads.

N. W. COLLEGE BEATS ARMOUR IN DUAL MEET

Naperville, Ill., May 10.—[Special.] —Northwestern college, Naperville, defeated Armour Tech in a dual track meet today, 85 to 46, scoring eight of the first fourteen first places and annexing most of the seconds and thirds. Spaid of Armour was high point man with firsts in the century, 220, and the high hurdles.

In the low hurdles, Spaid was leading, but fell, injuring his leg so badly that he was unable to finish the race. His time of :10 1-5 for the hundred was good for the soggy track, and he ran the 220 dash in :23.

Northwestern ran the mile relay in 3:42, considered exceptional time for the condition of the track. This team was composed of Wuertz, Craig, Haimbaugh and Harms.

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

Illinois Power and Light Company nine outslugged the Studebakers, 15 to 11, in an Industrial league game at Chicago avenue and the lake front yesterday. Score:

MAROONS LEAD 2 TO 1 IN EIGHTH; LOSE OUT, 9 TO 7

Chicago almost, but not quite, won a Big Ten baseball victory yesterday, losing to Iowa, 9 to 7, after leading the Hawkeyes, 2 to 1, at the end of the eighth frame.

The story centers around the ninth inning, in the first half of which Iowa, with the aid of Cunningham's wild peg to Forkel at first, and Weiss' muffed catch at third, sent eight runs across the plate. The Hawks had threatened to score in the eighth when, with the bases loaded, Coach Norgren sent Johnny Howell to the mound to save the day for Chicago. Howell squelched that rally, but the ninth round was something else.

The Maroons also came back in the ninth, but failed to count more than five markers. With two men down and men roosting on every sack in the final stanza, Johnny McGuire stalked up to the plate. But he left his bat on his shoulder while three strikes sizzled by. Score:

18 OF GOTHAM'S 25 NET RANKERS PROTEST PLAYER-WRITER RULE

NEW YORK, May 10.—The player-writer rule of the United States Lawn Tennis association was protested today and its reconsideration urged in a petition signed by eighteen of the twenty-five ranking men players in the metropolitan district. The list of signers includes Francis T. Hunter, now of Beckley, W. Va., member of the Olympic team; Sam Hardy, former Davis cup captain; Howard Voshell; Frank T. Anderson, and Herbert Bowman.

Of the seven players not on the list, two were said to be members of the board of governors of the West Side Tennis club, one a writer, two who are considering the question, and two who have not expressed an opinion.

OLYMPIC RUGBY PHOTO WAR HAS BEEN SETTLED

FRENCH ARE PEEVED

PARIS, May 10.—Attacks against the members of the American Olympic rugby team were continued today in the Paris press. Several newspapers criticized the roughness of the American game and recalled the row in the Pershing stadium in 1919.

"The Americans are ignorant about rugby," the Paris Midi commented, "but they know perfectly all about wrangling, street fighting, and individual and collective pugilism."

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, May 10.—The photograph war which threatened when officials of the French Olympic committee refused to allow American cameramen to take pictures of the Roumanian-American rugby football game tomorrow has been settled. The Olympic games officials have agreed to take five or six American cameramen on the committee which is entrusted with making pictures of the games upon the payment of 25,000 francs. This (about $1,600) is to be paid by the American photographers, not for the privilege of joining the committee, but to cover the price of the pictures they would have had to purchase if they were not members of the official staff and could not take them.

Papers to Participate.

Estimating that each of half a dozen big American newspapers would buy about 500 photographs at 10 francs (65 cents) each, the total of 25,000 francs was arrived at.

It is expected that the New York Times, New York American, New York Herald, New York Tribune, New York World, Philadelphia Public Ledger, United Press, and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be among those to subscribe to the fund.

Yanks in Good Condition.

PARIS, May 10.—[By Associated Press.]—Samuel Goodman, manager of the American Olympic rugby football team, said today that the team is prepared to do a little experimenting in the game with Roumania tomorrow, but will take no such chances in the match with France May 18. The Americans are in perfect physical condition. There has been a large advance sale of tickets.

CHEWS TOBACCO; SO HE'S PUT OFF OLYMPIC TEAM

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

FRANK HUGHES.

When the American trapshooting team sails for France the latter part of the month to compete in the Olympic games, this country may be deprived of one of its best shots because of politics and internal dissension in the ranks of the Amateur Trapshooting Association of America, and the jealousy which the east has for the west because of superiority generally shown by western shots.

It is an accepted fact that Frank Troeh of Portland, Ore., one of the best all around amateur shots who ever pulled a trigger in this country, will not be a member of the American team because his pictures appeared on advertisements for shotgun shells.

Hughes Is Dropped.

FRANK TROEH.

Without stating one specific reason, Frank Hughes of Mobridge, S. D., has been dropped from the American team by Manager Fawcett. Hughes was selected for the team by popular vote of shooters in the Prairie zone, composed of the states of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Texas. Last year he had an average of .9692, which rated him second highest amateur in the country. Phil Miller of Dallas, Tex., was high for the season with a grand average of .9828.

Hughes' dismissal from the team has aroused the ire not only of the Lincoln Park Gun club, of which he is a member, but of every club and individual in the Prairie and Great Lakes zones, where Hughes has done most of his shooting. Telegrams of protest have been sent to Gustavus Kirby, chairman of the American Olympic committee Manager Fawcett of the American team, and George S. McCarty, president of the Amateur Trapshooting association.

Is Not a Pro.

According to his friends and others closely identified with trapshooting, Hughes is not a professional. He does not represent a powder concern, nor does he receive pay for using a certain make of gun.

Hughes is determined to fight the suspension, and has demanded an immediate hearing. The following telegram was sent to Mr. Kirby, chairman of the American Olympic committee, by Hughes:

> "Wire received from Olympic team manager advising that I have been dropped from team by order of American Olympic committee. Cablegram from Paris states only Troeh was protested. I demand a hearing before further action is taken. If I am not an amateur I want every trapshooter in America to know it."

He Chews Tobacco.

According to Hughes, the only charge made against him was that he chews tobacco and certain eastern shots claim it would be quite humiliating to shoot before earls and lords and have them see Hughes chewing and spitting.

Fred R. Etchen, manager of the Prairie zone, is another who is shouldering Hughes' cause. In a telegram to O. H. Hassel of the Lincoln Park Gun club, he emphatically denied he had sanctioned Hughes' dismissal from the American Olympic team.

According to Hughes, the whole matter now is in the hands of Mr. Kirby, chairman of the American Olympic committee, who apparently has some grounds for advising Fawcett to drop Hughes from the American team.

Can Shoot for Money.

It is understood that some sort of pressure has been brought to bear upon Chairman Kirby by certain individuals in the game because Hughes uses a certain make of powder.

"Mr. Troeh and Mr. Hughes are well within their rights in shooting for money purses when they are authorized to do so by the Amateur Trapshooting association," Manager Fawcett stated in a letter to President McCarty of the A. T. A. "Any other insinuations by foreign committees or competitors are founded merely on hearsay, and unquestionably never could be proved.

"Therefore, to bar them on hearsay insinuations would be positively unfair and, as I said before, to bar them on any grounds would admit indictment against present policies as to what constitutes amateurism. Such a definition is too epochal and far reaching in effect to be left to any one individual to attempt solution alone."

HOPES TO REPEAT

"PRO BALL A WASTE OF TIME FOR COLLEGIANS," SAYS MICHIGAN COACH

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 10.—College men should resist the lure of professional baseball unless they are good enough for the big leagues, in the opinion of Ray Fisher, Michigan coach, himself a former collegian who graduated from Middlebury college into the majors via the Eastern league. Fisher came here as baseball mentor from the pitching staff of the Cincinnati Reds.

"There is no doubt but that a college graduate wastes his time by entering professional baseball unless he is good enough for a trial in the big leagues," Fisher said. "Professional baseball is a temporary proposition at best."

Fisher added that the major leagues do not offer any opportunity for the average ball player and that college training is not of a nature to train the player for the professional pastime.

33 TO DRIVE IN RACES AT HAWTHORNE TODAY

Thirty-three stars of the dirt track await the starter's flag in the opening auto race of the year today at Hawthorne. The first race is scheduled to be started at promptly 2:30 p. m. Nearly a score of new cars will be seen here for the first time, and rivalries of years' standing be settled.

The two racers who smashed De Palma's Hawthorne record are both entered. They are Cliff Woodbury and George Beck. Woodbury, picked by some critics as the most consistent driver on dirt tracks of the United States, has a strong field of contenders who hope to beat him.

Among the drivers and cars entered are:

Al Waters, Oldfield's Golden Egg; Esthan Wenneston, Nelson; George Beck, Bernbach's Special; George Lyons; Al Cotey, Elcar Special; Paul Clancy, Bets Special; Gus Schrader, Dodge; Leslie Allen, Frontenac; and Ed Hoeckler, Nelson.

Those winning first, second, third, and fourth places in the final race today will be graded. The driver winning the most points in races at this track this season will receive the Hawthorne cup. While this will not carry the national championship with it, the honor will give the winner great prestige, as Hawthorne is considered one of the finest one mile tracks in the United States.

The Illinois Central is running a special train from the Randolph street station today at 1:30, stopping at Van Buren, Twelfth, and Halsted streets.

The best auto route, owing to the fact that 52d avenue from Ogden avenue south is torn up, is as follows: Southwest on Ogden avenue to 51st avenue, south on 51st avenue to 32d place, west one block, and then south under viaduct to the track.

Pulaski Parks Take Volley Ball Matches

Two exciting championship volleyball games at Division Y. M. C. A., resulted in Pulaski Park's team defeating Association House, 15—5, 15—3, and the A. A. F. intermediates defeating McCormick Playground, 15—11, 15—9.

GLENDALE COURSE IS LATEST GOLF 'BABY'

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

MAURICE HILL, playing hole No. 13, on the Evanston community golf course, 135 yards long, bounced the ball into the cup in one. Louis Ehlewinstine and R. V. Martin were his partners in the threesome.

Add one more golf club to Chicago's list. This time the west side scores, with the Glendale Country club, located on Lake street, north of Glen Ellyn. The nearest railroad station is Glendale, formerly known as Swift, on the Illinois Central.

The club had its inception when a number of members of the Lions' club discussed the possibility of establishing a golf club for that organization. This original idea was not carried out, but these men, who are among West Town civic leaders, realized the need of more golf courses for their section and went ahead on slightly different lines.

On Historic Tract.

Elmer De Haven, being in the automobile business, was commissioned to look for a site and found approximately 150 acres, which were declared by Architect Tom Bendelow as being well fitted. A holding company was formed and the property purchased outright.

Mr. Bendelow now is designing the course on a historic site.

Back in 1833, when Bloomingdale was "Meacham's Grove," a tavern owned by Charles Cleaver and known as Cleaver's tavern, was situated on or near the spot now owned by the Glendale Country club.

Lake street in those days was an army trail.

Frank Alden Is President.

Frank A. Alden, the president of the club, is a presidential foursome in himself, being also the head of the Garfield Park State Savings bank, the West Town Bankers' club and the new Midwest Athletic club.

The other officers are:

OPAL MEET FOR BIKE AND ROLLER SPEEDERS TODAY

With a record breaking list of entries, the Opal A. A. will conduct its annual bicycle and street roller race today. The bike program, which consists of six events, will be held in Douglas park at 9 o'clock this morning, while the roller race will start at 22d street and California avenue.

Riders who will compete in the Olympic road race trials from Milwaukee to Chicago next Sunday and in THE TRIBUNE's Derby at Humboldt park on May 25 will start in the bicycle races, all of which will be scratch. This program will be featured by the six mile open, in addition to the class races and events for boys and girls.

In the five mile street roller race, Robert M. Reed of the Alverno A. A., E. Sorenson, Norwegian-American A. A.; Larry Quirk, Austin-Columbia A. A.; H. O'Connell, and A. News of the Opal A. A. will start from scratch.

JACKSON PARK TO CELEBRATE 25TH OPENING TODAY

OLYMPIC FUND MATCH

JOCK HUTCHISON, western open champion, and Laurie Ayton, Evanston, will play "Chick" Evans, western amateur champion, and Capt. E. F. Carter of Flossmoor, former Irish champion, at the Edgewater club at 2 o'clock today in aid of the Olympic fund. Admission fee is $1.

Edgewater can be reached by auto along Sheridan road to Ridge avenue to Pratt boulevard. By Northwestern L to Loyola station and thence by taxi. By surface cars, Clark street to Pratt boulevard and walk four blocks west.

BY JOE DAVIS.

Twenty-five years ago today the first golf course at Jackson park was opened and this afternoon the anniversary of that event will be celebrated by a few ceremonies followed by an exhibition match in which Ted Lloyd, the Illinois champion; Joe Finn, the city champion; George Hartman, former city champion, and Tom Frainey, former city champion, will compete at 2:30.

Joseph Donnersberger, president of the south parks system in 1899, Supt. J. Frank Foster, who has been superintendent for over a quarter of a century, Capt. Richards, President Edward J. Kelly, and other south parks commissioners have been asked to take part in the celebration.

Old Player on Hand.

Charles Esson, who was one of the players who opened the course, will whack another ball down the fairway. Others who were present at the opening were William Yeoman, Dr. H. W. Gentles, and J. G. Davis.

The original course was planned by the late Robert Risk, and Charles Esson. As soon as Superintendent Foster gave his consent to laying out the course, Mr. Risk called for eighteen stakes and an assistant, being afraid Mr. Foster might change his mind.

The course as then laid out had five holes on what is now the short course, one hole on the wooded island, and three on land now occupied by tennis courts. The "island" hole was a humdinger, as sliced and pulled balls went into the water. Those were the days of the solid gutta ball and they cost twenty-five cents each.

Gifts of Drivers.

Mr. Donnersberger and Supt. Foster, who drove the first balls, were presented with drivers by the late Judge Murray F. Tuley, one of the pioneers of golf, and then a member of the Riverside club. On the butt end of each club was a silver plate with a suitable inscription. The recipients both made longer drives than Judge Tuley, who topped both attempts.

The original layout was soon changed by cutting out the wooded island hole. In 1901 nine more holes were laid out, these running from 63d street to 67th street. Director A. A. Stagg held the amateur record for this course at 33.

The game has grown steadily, and today the Jackson park course is conceded to be the busiest in the world.

TWO CHICAGOANS WITH LEADERS IN RACINE BOWLING

Racine, Wis., May 10.—[Special.]—Chicago bowlers landed among the five leaders today in the first five shifts of Eddie Barth's sweepstakes tournament here. Prize money totalling $3,200 is up for competition, with 300 bowlers competing from Chicago, Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Waukegan, Cicero, Fort Wayne, Louisville, St. Louis, and Watertown.

Julius Reinke, local knight, is lodged in first place with a 1,056 total for the five games. W. Frick of Louisville is second with 1,048, and A. Carlson of Chicago third, with 1,042. A. Peterson, Chicago, is fourth with 1,034, and W. Gebhard, Racine, fifth, with 1,027.

HIRSCH SWIMMERS 43 TO 25 VICTORS

South Bend, Ind., May 10. — [Special.]—The Hirsch social center swimming team of Chicago defeated the flying squadron of South Bend here tonight at the city natatorium, 43 to 25.

The visiting tankers won four of the seven events and copped the 160 yard relay. Kenneth Schutt won two firsts for the locals, handing the Hirsch swimmers the first defeat that they have ever suffered in the 100 yard free style.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune.

The Question.

Does big league baseball offer proper occupation for athletes who are college graduates?

Where Asked.

Monroe street and Michigan avenue.

The Answers.

H. L. Emslie, 2643 North Irving avenue, advertising manager—I'd say no. A college man could employ his education to better advantages. For all the years he spent in college he could have fitted himself for business. One does not have to have an education to be a ball player, so why should a college bred man go into professional athletics when the business world would have more in store for him?

Albert P. Larsen, 3500 West Hirsch street, draftsman — I think so. If a man gets athletic training in college and if he likes the work, there should be no objection to his earning a livelihood in professional sports. In colleges nowadays special courses are offered in coaching and special training is given, which fits one for his "trade."

Bob Sochor, 2523 South Hamlin avenue, clerk—It does not. Big league baseball is not the proper occupation for one who graduates from college. I should think a college man would pursue some worth while occupation. Of course, if they have ambitions to be something better than a player, then I would say the occupation is all right.

J. Finn, 4434 Gladys avenue, baseball player — Certainly it does. I am a baseball player myself, so naturally I defend the occupation for a college man or any one else. One can make a large salary and especially a college man who gets a fairly thorough training in athletics while in school.

Harold Meyer, 4318 North Sawyer avenue, repairman—Of course it does. If the salary is large enough to cause a college man to take up baseball, it's worth following up. It is up to the man himself, for he knows what he is best fitted for. Even if a college man fails in professional athletics, he has his education to fall back upon.

On Local Golf Links

DOUBTLESS Col. Bogey would have used his niblick on J. Pluvius for turning on the overhead faucets yesterday when most of the local clubs had Olympic fund events scheduled for the afternoon.

As a result of the morning rain a number of the clubs postponed their events. Olympia Fields, in order to give the balance of its membership a chance to contribute, will extend its event over today. It will be some time before the total amount contributed by the golfers will be known.

EDGEWATER.

The "star" Olympic foursome included Chick Evans, who had 69, against par 70; William J. Bell, professional at the club, 76; J. B. Murphy, 80, and Herbert A. Lundahl, 81.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

Playing over No. 1 course, C. H. Burke and President Charles M. Smalley finished all even in the match round event. J. P. Leightfoot and L. H. Lamont tied at 78 for low net. Ralph Hoagland had 79 as low gross. Don Hamilton notched 84 as low gross over No. 3. A. S. McGillivray, 75, and E. L. Lalumier, 76, won the low net prizes. Finishing 3 down to par, A. S. McGillivray won the prize for that effort.

INDIAN HILL.

Eighty-two players competed in the Olympic fund event, a handicap against par. George E. Routh won first prize, finishing 2 up. Other leading scores were: J. C. Harding, 3 down; F. P. Butler, C. G. Litell, C. B. Korraday, and Frank A. Helmer, 4 down.

RIDGE.

Play for the Olympic trophy, presented by President Emory Thomason, and the qualifying round for the sports and pastimes trophy was continued until today.

GLEN VIEW.

Despite unfavorable weather, eighty-three members took part in the club handicap event for the Olympic fund. Each contestant donated $2, which netted $166. The winners were F. S. Colburn, 88—16—72; A. W. Eddy, 82—9—73, and Alden B. Swift, 78—4—74.

BRIERGATE.

A "century" was added to the Olympic fund when fifty members braved the elements and contributed an entry fee of $2. E. A. Steimert, 91—19—72, won low net. Capt. E. F. Carter, 75—1—74, had low gross and second low net. Other winners were: Low net, first nine—W. J. Casey, 50—12—38; B. H. Elliott, 50—12—38; N. Kraft, 55—17—38. Low net, second nine—F. P. Garbark, 52—17—35. High net, A. J. Meyer, 159—40—119.

EDGEWOOD.

Edgewood postponed its Olympic fund event until Saturday. F. A. Fider won the blind bogey event with a 77, W. C. Reibling being second. Art Sweet had low gross of 74 over a heavy course.

WESTMORELAND.

Westmoreland had a good turnout for its Olympic fund handicap in which the winners were: Class A—Fred Burnaby, 85—8—77; class B—F. H. Ahara, 95—17—78; class C—H. T. Griswold, 95—19—72; class D—E. D. Kelly, 104—30—74.

PARK RIDGE.

Nearly 150 members took part in the Olympic handicap which was won by Dr. E. B. Montieth, with a card of 87—17—71. F. A. Keiff, 88—15—73, was second.

LOCAL BIKERS SHOW INTEREST IN TRIBUNE DERBY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Although entries for THE TRIBUNE's third annual bicycle Derby to be held in Humboldt park on May 25 at 9 o'clock in the morning do not close until next Sunday, interest being shown by local clubs and unattached riders augurs well for the success of this year's event.

Not only is THE TRIBUNE's event stirring the riders to greater efforts, but they have been training since the opening of the outdoor season for the annual races of the Opal A. A. to be held in Douglas park this morning and for the Olympic road race tryouts which will be held next Sunday from Milwaukee to Chicago.

Plenty of Club Rivalry.

Riders who show well in today's Opal races will be entered in THE TRIBUNE races, while practically the same field which will compete in the Olympic road race tests next Sunday will face the starter for the twenty-five mile handicap, feature of THE TRIBUNE Derby. In addition to the handicap event, there will be races for class riders, novice, boys, and girls.

Club rivalry should assert itself throughout the Derby. Most of the local organizations, including the Franklin Skating and A. C., Opal A. A., Edgewater Cycling club, Marquette Wheelmen A. A., and the Lincoln Park Boat club, have nominated their best riders.

Police on Hand.

All races will be held over a two and one-fifth mile course with the start and finish at Kosciusko monument just south of North avenue, on Humboldt boulevard.

Motorcycle police in charge of Capt. William Stocker of the west park police will patrol the course to make it safe for riders and spectators. Officials, who will handle the races, will be announced in due time, but every effort will be made to secure the services of men familiar with the bike racing game. Arthur Gardner, one of the greatest sprinters who ever rode a bike, will be referee, while Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, will be starter, and Edward Mahlke will be chief clerk of the course.

No Entry Fee Needed.

As stated in previous articles, no entry fee is required to enter the races. Riders, however, must be members of the Amateur Bicycle League of America.

Those desiring to enter are requested to clip the entry blanks appearing on the sports pages and mail them as directed.

ARMY TO MEET NAVY IN OLYMPIC TRIALS

Soldier and sailor boxing champions of the 6th corp area eligible to compete in the final Olympic trials in Boston on May 19, 20, and 21, will be determined Wednesday night aboard the U. S. S. Commodore at the foot of Randolph street.

These bouts will be held under the auspices of the Army and Navy club at the request of Maj. Gen. Henry C. Allen, executive officer of the American Olympic committee. Funds derived from the show will go into the general fund necessary to defray expenses of the American boxing team to the Olympic games.

The first bout will be staged at 8:30 o'clock and the program is expected to last two hours. Following the boxing, dancing will take place until midnight. In addition there will be vaudeville acts and other forms of entertainment.

In each bout the champion of his division in the army has been matched with an opponent of equal weight from the navy. In the opening bout Irish Kelly of Fort Sheridan will meet Battling Sims of Great Lakes. They will scale 180 pounds. Bob McCreary of Fort Sheridan and Tommy Watson of Great Lakes, welterweights, will be the principals in the second bout. Eugene Clarke of Fort Sheridan will meet William "Bulkhead" Mulligan of Great Lakes in the third encounter. They are scheduled to make weight at 140 pounds.

Arthur Gose of Great Lakes and Billet Miller of Fort Sheridan, lightweights, will trade punches in another contest, while James Flynn of Chanute field and Fredesic "Kid" Joubert of Great Lakes, 150 pounders, will be the principals in the other. All bouts will be four rounds with the exception of the last two, which will be six rounds.

Scientifically balanced, holds the road at all speeds. All-steel body. One-piece windshield. Luxurious, genuine leather cushions, 10 inches deep. Cowl lights. Standard non-skid cord tires.

KENTUCKY WILL SEND HORSES TO HAWTHORNE

Louisville, Ky., May 10.—[Special.]—Seventy per cent of the horses that are racing in Kentucky this spring will come to Chicago for the meeting at Hawthorne, providing stable accommodations can be found for them.

This prediction was made today by one of the most extensive owners and breeders of thoroughbreds in Kentucky.

Finding room for such an array of racing talent at Hawthorne, however, is out of the question. And Kentuckians know this as well as do Chicagoans.

There was room for less than 700 horses at Hawthorne last year. Additional stables that will be built and the renting of others in the vicinity of the track may boost the capacity to 1,000 horses. The east and far west will take half of the room.

Altawood May Run Here.

The Kentucky division of the Green Tree stable owned by the Whitneys will likely transfer every horse they have in racing condition from Latonia to Chicago, Mose Goldblatt, the western representative of the stable announced today. This would also mean the coming to Chicago of the stable's jockeys, including the famous youngster, Ivan Parke.

C. Bruce Head, owner of Altawood, said his horse would be nominated for the Chicago Derby and will start if in condition at the time, while John C. Gallaher of Gallaher Brothers said his establishment would apply for room for fifteen or twenty horses, and in the lot will likely be Chilhowee, a 3 year old and an eligible for the Derby.

The eccentric Mr. Webb, who trains Black Gold and other horses owned by Mrs. R. M. Hoots, has asked for nomination blanks for the Chicago Derby, and Phil Chinn, who started Sarazen on his sensational career at Hawthorne last summer, is coming back, his stable connections say. Senator J. N. Camden, Harned Bros. & Jones, Peter Coyne, J. C. Milam, Desha Breckinridge, Woodford & Steele, Howard Oots, Jack Phillips, M. Lowenstein, J. Lowenstein, C. H. Kneblecamp, Pat Kneblecamp, H. Neustter, and William Perkins and others who expect to ship.

Bradley to Send Horses.

Chicago's Wise Counsellor is eligible for most of the rich eastern stakes and will likely go to New York after the Kentucky Derby is run unless Chicago friends of F. C. Burton, his owner, can get him to let the great colt run in the $15,000 Derby at Hawthorne on July 12.

Edward R. Bradley will send one division of his stable east, but the Ideal Hour farm management is making plans now to invade Chicago with the other division.

Judge Joseph A. Murphy, general manager of the Chicago Business Men's Racing association, will arrive in Chicago this morning to take charge of the final arrangements for the Chicago meeting.

SINCLAIR'S ZEV BEATEN FOR 2D TIME THIS YEAR

New York, May 10.—Zev, the Rancocas stable's champion thoroughbred of 1923 and greatest money winner of all time, is having difficulty striking a winning stride as a 4 year old. The colt made his third start of the season today in the $7,500 Excelsior handicap at Jamaica track and was decisively beaten for the second time.

The race, at a mile and a sixteenth, was won by the Greentree stable's Rialto, a 20 to 1 shot, by a head from Sunsini, which was three lengths in front of Zev, the favorite despite his impost of 133 pounds. He conceded eighteen pounds to the winner. Zev got off to a fair start but never threatened.

Trailing Zev in today's race were Mad Hafter, Dunlin, and Prince James. The time of the winner was 1:46.

The bumping the talent got when Zev was defeated was nothing compared to the shock that came in the last race on the card when Shine On, George Peterson's 3 year old maiden, romped home ahead of the field, a 60 to 1 shot. The filly paid 20 to 1 for placing and 10 to 1 on show bets.

MEYERS, PARELLI START TRAINING FOR TITLE BOUT

Joe Parelli and Johnny Meyers, who meet for the world's 158 pound championship at the Coliseum May 20, settled down to strenuous training yesterday at the Arcade. Each engaged excellent wrestling partners.

Before Meyers went to the gym he signed the articles of agreement in the office of Promoter Ed White. While Johnny may have trouble to make 158 pounds at 6 o'clock on the evening of the day of the match, he has planned a systematic course of training to take off the extra poundage without weakening himself.

Karl Sarpalius, the University of Chicago heavyweight, will make his professional debut Thursday night, when he will take holds with Stanley Zajac in one of the preliminaries of the show staged by Charley Cutler at First Regiment armory.

Articles will be signed this week binding the match between Champion Ed Lewis and Stanislaus Zbyszko at the Coliseum on May 28. This show will be conducted by "Doc" Krone.

German Boxer Loses to French Champ, Bretonnel

PARIS, May 10.—Czirzon, German lightweight boxer, first of his race to appear in a French ring since the war, was outpointed in a ten round bout tonight by Bretonnel, French champion. The German was coolly received, but there was no demonstration against him.

Four Runs in First Help Bradley Beat Wesleyan

Peoria, Ill., May 10.—[Special.]—Three hits combined with errors in the first round gave Bradley a quartet of runs and sewed up a 7 to 2 victory over Illinois Wesleyan today. Score:

DETROIT FISH BREAKS MARK.

Toledo, O., May 10.—[Special.]—Charles Jeffries of Detroit Northwestern broke the 40 yard back stroke United States interscholastic record here tonight in a dual swimming meet with Woodward Tech by two seconds. He made the event in :23 2-5. This also came within one-fifth of a second of breaking the world's record.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

NEWS AND NOTES FROM THE OUTDOOR WORLD.

ALTHOUGH the impatient angler has a great desire to go a-fishin' when warm May days raise his fishing fever, it is well that no angling is allowed (in many states) during May and part of June, as then the large and small mouth bass are spawning. During this period angling has been wisely tabooed.

The spawning season of bass varies according to the season. It is largely a question of water temperatures, and hence if the weather man turns on the sunshine and warm winds early in the spring the fish will spawn as early as April or May in some middle west states. Small mouths will start building a nest by rooting into the bottom of a lake and fanning away the sand with their tails when the temperature is around 60 degrees. But usually the female does not lay any eggs until the thermometer shows the water has become 62 degrees.

You have to hand it to the bass for the way he sticks around to guard the nest and, later, the young until they are able to take care of themselves. It's a case of dog eat dog in fishdom, and a bunch of newly hatched bass wouldn't last long unless they had a little protection at first. The faithfulness of the parent fish has earned him protection, and it is a mighty good thing that most states prohibit the taking of bass at this time of the year

Wisconsin is trying a new stunt in the way of propagating muskellunge. The hatcheries have not experienced much luck in turning out muskie fry, so one fish fan with an idea and plenty of determination is endeavoring to propagate the muskie tribe by giving protection to the spawning fish and their nests.

Spring is gradually taking hold in the north woods country. With the muskie and pike season opening just about three weeks from today, the pine woods crowd is already busy painting canoes and rowboats, and in general slicking up for the army that will hit upper Wisconsin to tackle the finny tribes on June 1.

As we mark time ('cause we're going to be in that June 1 brigade) a little lake keeps coming to mind. How we would like to see it on opening day? Eggert told us about it last fall when we were browsing around the lakes near Hayward, Wis.

There's a dandy bunch of lakes around Hayward and also northeast that town.

Although forest fires have taken their toll, with consequent damage to the scenery, the lakes are in a timbered region which adds greatly to their attractiveness. One can fish for either small or large mouth bass, pike, or muskies in this section. North and northeast of Hayward is another group of lakes worth fishing.

SHOOT LAURELS GO 3 WAYS AT LINCOLN TRAPS

C. R. Kinsman, W. M. Johnson, and H. B. Henry divided honors in the weekly shoot of Lincoln Park Gun club yesterday. The former won the fifty target event, sixteen yards rise, with a total of 47, while Johnson and Henry tied for high in the twenty-five pairs with totals of 40.

The second anniversary Thomas A. Marshall shoot will be held at the club today. The competition will consist of one hundred targets, sixteen yards rise, and the winner will be given a replica of the trophy donated to the Lincoln Park Gun club by the daughter of the late trapshooter.

25 PAIRS, 16 YARDS—W. M. Johnson, 40; H. B. Henry, 40; T. Sutton, 36; R. Hall, 34; S. Fay, 33.

Marquette Frosh Take a Track Meet from Culver

Culver, Ind., May 10.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy track team lost its dual meet with Marquette college freshmen, 68½ to 44½. Best performances were the 100 in :10 1-5 by Kennedy of Culver, the mile in 4:44 by O'Connell of Culver, and the broad jump of 22 feet 7½ inches by Donahue of Marquette.

CHOATE BESTS CULVER TO WIN YALE REGATTA

Derby, Conn., May 10.—Rowing a stroke which had unison and strength, Choate school of Wallingford, Conn., won the Yale interscholastic regatta of one mile on the Yale course of the Housatonic river today. The time was 5:01. It was Choate's fourth victory.

Choate took the lead at the start and held it throughout, finishing a length and a half ahead of Culver Military academy of Indiana, which had had a stiff contest with New Rochelle, N. Y., High school and De Witt Clinton High of New York City.

These three crews were evenly boated, and for three-fourths of a mile kept on even terms. De Witt Clinton then slackened and the others raised their stroke. Twenty-five feet from the finish Culver made its final spurt and crossed ahead.

The crews were timed as follows: Choate, 5:01; Culver, 5:10; New Rochelle, 5:11. De Witt Clinton, Kent school, and Episcopal school of Overbrook, Pa., finished in that order.

500 People, every day, buy this
OLDSMOBILE ~ SIX
Because of its Wonderful Record!

IT'S true that the price of this Oldsmobile Six is only $795! But that's not the big reason why 500 people are buying this car every day!

These 500 intelligent buyers are turning to the Oldsmobile Six because of its remarkable record!

They've watched one of these cars travel from New York to Los Angeles in high gear—with low, second and reverse gears removed!

They're familiar with the mountains and mud and desert sands that lie along that 3,674-mile path—and they marvel that any car could master all of them in high gear!

They've read the official observer's report of the economy this car displayed on that gruelling tour—27.8 miles a gallon of gasoline.

They know that this car, immediately upon arrival in Los Angeles, was driven 68 miles an hour on the Los Angeles Speedway before official observers.

They're convinced that this Oldsmobile Six is an economical car—a speedy car—a powerful car—and that it has amazing endurance and stamina.

These intelligent buyers question only one thing—this car's remarkable price. "How can such an automobile be sold for only $795?"—they ask!

Then they remember that Oldsmobile enjoys not merely the purchasing power and manufacturing facilities of a single company—but all of the advantages and resources of the great General Motors Corporation, with all that this means in the way of savings in raw materials, experimental work, manufacturing and marketing.

And so they buy—500 of them every day! And doesn't their judgment carry some weight with you?

If you're still unconvinced—name any test you can think of, within reason, and we'll have this car make it! And the sale will take care of itself.

Here are a few of the reasons for Oldsmobile's confidence in this remarkable car—

Engine—Its six-cylinder engine represents the finest talent of Oldsmobile and General Motors engineers. It developes 40 H. P.—has full force-feed lubrication to all bearings—oversize crankshaft—water circulating space around each cylinder—dome-shaped combustion chambers—interchangeable Chadwick bronze-backed bearings.

Coachwork—All Oldsmobile closed bodies are built by Fisher—a fact that in itself is a complete guarantee of quality, refinement and comfort. The bodies of the open models are assembled by Oldsmobile from parts manufactured by Fisher.

Mechanical—Oldsmobile Six uses Delco starting, lighting and ignition system, found on the finest cars generally. It has a Borg & Beck clutch—the best known. It has a Harrison radiator, Klaxon horn, Willard storage battery, Zenith carburetor, Alemite chassis lubrication.

Equipment—High grade non-skid oversize tires are standard equipment. All Oldsmobile open models have every necessary feature that would contribute to satisfactory motoring—the closed models embody a wealth of added accessories and refinements.

LOCAL FIGHT FANS WARM UP OVER TOM-GEORGES GO

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With the arrival in Chicago this week of Georges Carpentier of France, former world's light heavyweight champion, who will meet Tom Gibbons of St. Paul at Michigan City on May 31, interest in the international contest will increase and the boxing fans will begin to speculate on the probable winner.

While the local boxing fraternity did not take kindly to the match when it was first made, it is now practically assured the bout will attract an almost capacity crowd. Presence of Gibbons in Chicago last week went a long way toward feeling the pulse of the pugilistic fans and, judging from the way they packed the Arcade gymnasium, indications point to a good crowd.

Carpentier has never shown his wares in public in Chicago. Just before he boxed Jack Dempsey he appeared at the Illinois A. C. in a three round exhibition. Upon his arrival in Chicago on Tuesday or Wednesday the Frenchman will work for a few days at the Mullen-McGoorty gym at 175 West Madison street. He then will go to his training quarters at Michigan City, where he will occupy the same cottage that Jack Dempsey used in his preparation for exhibitions last summer.

Scientific Battle.

Unlike some of the bouts held in the Indiana city in other years, the Carpentier-Gibbons contest should be about the most scientific exhibition of the manly art of self-defense which could be arranged between two big men. Although both can hit with the right hand, they are as fast and shifty as two lightweights, and there is little that they do not know about the offensive and defensive angles of boxing.

While it is true Gibbons made a much better showing against Dempsey than did the Frenchman, Carpentier is coming to this country bent on getting one more chance at the world's heavyweight championship. In the Dempsey struggle Georges threw caution to the winds and made the fatal mistake of slugging with the champion. Naturally he was nailed.

On the other hand, Gibbons played a careful, waiting game against Dempsey at Shelby last summer. Tom did not try to trade punches. He simply boxed, went in close and tried to avoid punishment. His well planned battle made it possible for him to stay the fifteen rounds, something no other fighter has been able to do since Dempsey wrested the heavyweight title from Jess Willard.

Tom Opens Quarters.

In this coming battle there may be times when Tom and Georges will attempt to trade right hands, but for the most part the bout should be featured by some clever boxing at long range and at close quarters. While both assume crouching positions at times, they are always in position to hit with either hand, the right especially. Both have good lefts, Gibbons particularly, and he uses this weapon to hook and jab.

Their battle lines may be more clearly determined as their training periods advance. Tom motored to Michigan City this morning and is safely entrenched in his training quarters. The St. Paul battler will do his road work in the mornings and box in the afternoons. Carpentier will go to the battle ground the latter part of the week, according to plans recently announced by Jack Curley, the Frenchman's American representative.

Tickets for the bout will be placed on sale tomorrow. Joe Coffey, president of the syndicate staging the bout, has announced that advance orders for blocks of seats indicate a nearly capacity crowd, while weather conditions on the day of the contest will determine the general admission sale.

Ernie Goozeman and Herbie Schaeffer, who meet in the windup of Jim Mullen's boxing show at Aurora on Tuesday night welcomed the postponement from last Friday night. While both were in good shape, they claim they will be much better by Tuesday.

Rem Williams, the Detroit 148 pounder under the management of Charley Best, is making a favorable impression at Mullen's gymnasium. The Detroiter is slated to meet Jimmy Gory of the west side in an eight round bout. Sully Montgomery, the former Centre college football player who meets Mike Conroy of New York in one of the preliminaries at Aurora is looked upon as one of the best prospects seen in a local gym this year. Al Morris, the fighting copper is ready for his six round engagement with Marine Ranieri.

Promoter Mullen has consulted the weather bureau regarding conditions on Tuesday, and the report has it that warm and clear weather will prevail. Mullen announced that tickets purchased for last Friday's show will be good on Tuesday. No exchange is necessary.

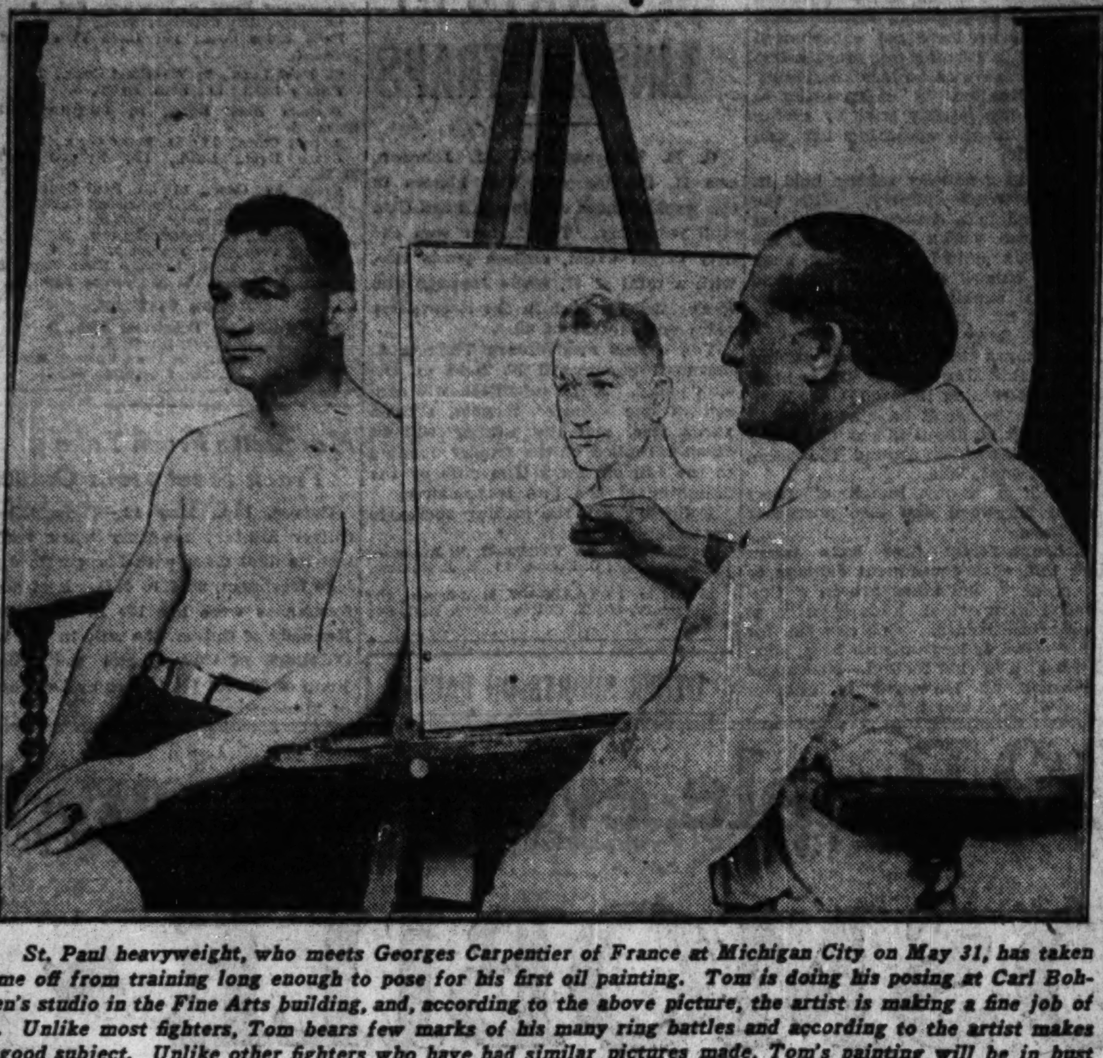
Gibbons Goes Fifteen Rounds with Artist



St. Paul heavyweight, who meets Georges Carpentier of France at Michigan City on May 31, has taken time off from training long enough to pose for his first oil painting. Tom is doing his posing at Carl Bohnen's studio in the Fine Arts building, and, according to the above picture, the artist is making a fine job of it. Unlike most fighters, Tom bears few marks of his many ring battles and according to the artist makes a good subject. Unlike other fighters who have had similar pictures made, Tom's painting will be in bust form and not full length.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 10.—Massachusettes Tech crew won from Cornell by three lengths in a dual regatta today.

ST. MICHAELS WIN AGAIN.

St. Michaels continued their winning streak by defeating Chicago Blues, 6 to 0, at the Michael field. The Michaels started off with three runs in the first inning, when, with the bases loaded, Rydzewski poled a two bagger and in turn was knocked across by Luckey's single. THE Stanley STEAM CAR
Perfectly Controlled

The Stanley Steam Car For 29 Years Superior in Performance

Your mind is free from all thought of the mechanical elements of locomotion in driving a Stanley Steam Car. You are conscious only of the sense of power—stored power, under perfect control—that propels you, at your will, from the speed of "The Century" to the pace of a snail.

For 29 years Stanley performance has been universally admitted to have no equal. It is silent, luxurious, dependable transportation—maximum power at any desired speed.

The New Model 750 Stanley reveals attainments never seen before in an automobile.

HEINRICH LANDS FOURTH IN STATE BOWLING SINGLES

Jack Heinrich knocked down 678 ten pins to take fourth place in the singles in the State Bowling tournament at Petersen's alleys last night. Jim Mulcahy's 670 in the same division gave him fifth in the singles and fourth in the all-events. Leo Faetz and Stanley Kellogg kicked over 1,257 sticks to tie for tenth place in doubles.

Jimmy Blouin's second place honors in the all-events and the fourth position assumed by the Kaadland quintet were the main changes in the tourney standing during the past week.

Reflections of a Man who Could Have Made Millions in Chicago Real Estate

"WHEN I was a boy," said an old Chicagoan, "my father used to tell of picturesque Fort Dearborn when it thrived as a trading post on the south bank of the Chicago river.

"Back in those days $100 bought a whole block in what is now the loop district of our city. And few were the pioneers who had the vision and faith in the future to put their meagre earnings into Real Estate.

"In 1853, a progressive settler realized his opportunity and purchased the whole block of 134 School Section having a double frontage on State Street and Third Avenue [now Jackson Boulevard] for the ridiculously low sum of $193. This property includes the present site of the new Straus Building at Michigan Avenue and Jackson Boulevard—a location which alone represents a value of $6,691,000.

"Along in the early sixties when I was a young man, a friend of mine told me that Chicago was destined to be a great metropolis—the country's largest distribution center.

"He pointed out the strategic position that the city held at the foot of the Great Lakes, and emphasized the importance of its central location in the Middle West. To prove his argument, he pointed to the rapid growth that the city had already shown. From a population of 4,470 in 1840 the city had grown in 1850 to 29,963 people and ten years later, in 1860, the census showed 109,260 population.

"But my good friend's counsel was futile. We had just passed the money panic of 1857 and so far as I was concerned the country all about us was too wild and vast to permit me to think seriously of an investment in Real Estate. And I stood back and let others with greater vision purchase property—that later made them millions.

"How foolish I was! Before another ten years had passed the city's population had nearly doubled—so had property values. And I had passed up a chance to make a fortune.

"In 1871, opportunity knocked again. I had a chance to purchase, at a very low figure, some near-in property on the north side. But the great fire came along and I lost my nerve. Another financial panic followed and I resolved to save my money. Many other opportunities presented themselves in the years that followed but it was not until 1910 that I caught the true vision of Chicago's future development.

"It was then a city of over 2,000,000 people and I, like hundreds of other men who had witnessed the development of our great city, put my money into good Chicago Real Estate.

"Already the returns on my investment have confirmed my conviction—a conviction born of experience and opportunity lost. Chicago now has a population of 3,000,000 people and my grandchildren should live to see the day---not fifty years hence---when Metropolitan Chicago will include all the territory for forty miles around.'

"Millions are yet to be made in good Chicago Real Estate. Those who are wise will not pass up opportunity as I did. Every year they wait, fortunes will slip through their fingers."

MOTORDOM

Great Boulevard to Give Muskegon Tourist Paradise

Ninety Mile Road Borders Endless Sand Dune Struggle.

MUSKEGON, Mich. — [Special Correspondence.] — Muskegon, summer playground of thousands of Chicago residents, within the next few years is to have an external boulevard system ninety miles long, with sixty miles of the route within sight of water, which will give Muskegon people and visitors seven distinct approaches to Lake Michigan.

The projected boulevard system has been made possible through the recent gift to the city by the Pere Marquette railway of 113 acres of sand dune land bordering the lake. The system will link together a fine external park system. Coincident with the railroad's gift was one from local property owners granting the rignt of way for a highway along the shore that will permit the building of one of the most important links in the boulevard system.

At least two or three years will be required to complete the boulevard system, but much of the route already has been finished. Of the ninety miles, sixty-eight now are covered by paved or other hard surface roads. When completed, the system will have cost upwards of $3,000,000.

The improvement will give Muskegon and its suburbs a lake shore development seven miles long, five miles of which will be on the lake. In addition to making Lake Michigan easily accessible, the various portions of four other large lakes in Muskegon county will be reached easily.

The land deeded to the city by the railroad lies on either side of the 300 foot channel that connects Muskegon lake with Lake Michigan. The channel will be crossed by means of a ferry. The land on the north side of the channel joins Michigan Dunes park, title to which has been accepted by the state, and which the state will develop soon. It is in this park that the most notable of the famous Michigan sand dunes are found. The tract is the only one in the country where are located side by side the permanent and shifting types of sand dunes. It is planned that the land recently acquired through the railway's gift shall be merged eventually with the state park site, thus increasing the size of the park to approximatly 1,000 acres.

The dunes have been forming for centuries, still are forming, in fact, as sand from the bottom of Lake Michigan is scooped up, particle by particle, washed ashore, and then, after drying, is moved inland by the wind. For uncounted centuries this sand movement has been going on. The wind has piled the sand in great heaps, some of them more than 300 feet high.

The dunes in Muskegon State park provide a contrast in nature that is but rarely encountered. Except in sheltered places, the shifting dunes are as barren of plant life as a desert, only a few of the more hardy creeping vines and grasses finding sustenance in the sandy wastes.

Within a stone's throw of the sand wilderness are the permanent dunes, originally heaps of barren sand like their neighbors, but their tops and sides encrusted with a deep layer of mold, the remains of thousands of plant generations. Here virtually every tree, shrub and plant known to this climate grows in profusion. Trees that all but top the nearby sand piles jut into the sky. Below the ground is carpeted with flowering plants. Wild animals make their homes in this veritable jungle. An occasional tree stump, reminder of the passing of a woodsman in earlier days, and a few trails over which the more daring of motorists travel, are the only changes that have taken place since the coming of the white man.

Here in the dunes may be studied the two giant forces of nature, destruction and reconstruction. Bit by bit, year after year, the sand from the desert spaces moves toward the forests. Grain on grain it creeps forward, restlessly driven by winter gale and summer breeze. It swirls through ravines and over open plains until at last it finds a resting place against the tangled forest growth, then shifts into the wooded areas over growing things, strangling, crushing, burying.

The pile against the door of the forest grows a little larger every year. Each season the sand moves a step further into the woodland. Where today is a patch of flowering plants next year will have been added to the wastes. A century hence today's forests may have been trampled into blackened trunks and branches by the combined weight of countless sand grains.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Steve Hannagan, Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Indianapolis, Ind., was awarded $5.

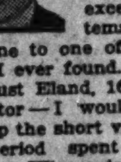
The Question.

Where, in your opinion, is the best vacation spot for auto tourists in the middle west?

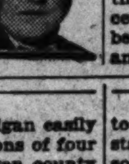
Where Asked.

Lincoln avenue and Wellington street.

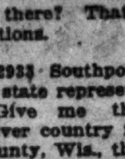
The Answers.



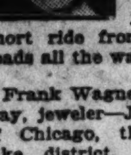
Augie Hoffman, 3333 Lincoln avenue, clerk—If I were going on a trip, I would drive to Windpudding and Muskie lakes, Wis., where there is ideal bass and muskie fishing. Good roads and excellent marking systems along the way direct one to one of the best vacation spots I ever found.



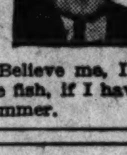
August Eland, 1636 Cortland street, inspector — I wouldn't give up the short vacation period spent in northern Wisconsin for anything in the world. It is the beauty spot of the country — good roads, lakes and rivers —and fish—O boy!



Frank Netzel, 1236 Altgeld street, grocer—There is nothing like spending a vacation in northern Wisconsin and Minnesota. The fishing and hunting up there can't be beaten. Besides, the roads are about the best, so why shouldn't a person vacation up there? That's where I spend my vacations.



Charles H. Weber, 2933 Southport avenue, state representative—Give me the Eagle river country in Vilas county, Wis., the most beautiful territory in the world. It is the best place in the country for fishing. And, just think, it is only a short ride from Chicago, with good roads all the way.



Frank Wagner, 1506 Diversey parkway, jeweler—Just out of Chicago, the Fox lake district, if you please. There are good auto roads every foot of the way. It's only a short ride from the best city in the world to the very best vacation center I have found. Believe me, I'll be catching some of the fish, if I have any luck, there this summer.

Coast Motorists Pay the Piper for Their Speed Bugs

CALIFORNIA motorists, to the tune of nearly 10,000, paid the penalty in the state courts for reckless driving and speeding during the first three months of 1924, according to estimates compiled by the division of motor vehicles. These estimates were based on reports received from courts throughout the state with the exception of San Francisco.

During the same period the licenses of thirty-nine persons were revoked, while the licenses of sixty others were suspended on various charges. Revocations for the period include eleven persons convicted of driving while intoxicated. Suspensions, for the most part, were for speeding.

Out of an estimated total of 9,904 convictions (San Francisco excepted), 5,883 were for speeding and 4,021 were for reckless driving. In the Los Angeles courts, however, there were 1,869 convictions for reckless driving, as against 534 for speeding, thus indicating that violations of the speed laws occur most frequently in the less congested districts.

WAR ON SIGNS.

Massachusetts has begun a state-wide drive against the billboards that line its highways. The state department of public works has been empowered to regulate billboard advertising by the process of licensing that industry. Violation of the new regulations is punishable by a fine of $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

Trade Association Tests Used Cars to Protect Buyers

MECHANICAL tests that cannot be influenced by the prospective salesman have been developed by the automotive testing laboratory, a division of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, in its campaign to protect the buyers of used cars from unscrupulous dealers.

With each car that passes the tests goes a laboratory certificate setting forth its exact condition. "Certified cars," the trade association calls them —used cars sold only after every possible defect has been removed. The tests are in actual operation in the laboratory building at 29th street and Michigan avenue. Here the association members' used cars are tested and appraised in every factor that makes them start, run, and stop.

The Wasson motor check registers with absolute certainty [1] horse power delivered at rear wheels; [2] slippage past rings and pistons in cubic inches per minute; [3] compression in each cylinder, and [4] percentage of oil dilution.

The Ambu engineering institute tests determine generator efficiency, amperage used by starter, battery condition, and tests for shorts.

In addition there are sound and temperature tests for bearings, transmissions, differentials; physical tests for frame and axle alignment—plus expert inspection of upholstery, paint, and fittings. All findings are recorded on the laboratory's certified report, which is furnished with the car at time of sale.

Hupmobile

Counter Shaft Gear: Drop-forged, chrome nickel steel, double heat-treated. Not only is the construction unusually heavy, but the gear is mounted on two special roller bearings. This practice—contrary to the cheaper practice of using simply a case-hardened gear of low-carbon steel and mounting it on plain bushings—eliminates the trouble and cost of replacement so common with the other design.

Hupmobile Shows You How To Get The Facts That Count

Before you lay down hard-earned money for an automobile—a Hupmobile or any other—possess yourself of vital facts.

For the first time in motor car annals, Hupmobile has shown the way to get at facts that count.

Facts that will tell you quickly and clearly why one car is better than another—why fair externals may conceal inherent weaknesses—why many things are of less importance than processes of manufacture—why a couple of hundred dollars more is not extravagance but a necessary expenditure. Step into the Hupmobile salesroom and ask to see the Parts Display.

On these boards, you will find displayed all the principal parts of the Hupmobile. Each is ticketed with a card that tells plainly and concisely in black type how it is made and what it is made of. Each card also describes in red type the lesser materials and processes often used for similar parts in other cars. Come in and see this object lesson in invisible value and invisible cost.

FARM BLOC SEES COOLIDGE; WINS CROP BILL FIGHT

Both Houses Promise a Vote This Session.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—The farm bloc won a complete victory today in the fight to obtain assurances of house and senate leaders that a vote would be taken on the McNary-Haugen bill at this session of congress.

A promise of consideration was given in the face of a threat by Senator Norbeck [Rep., S. D.] to force a vote on the bill in the senate by offering it as an amendment to the revenue bill, which leaders declared would doom both measures to defeat.

Senator Norbeck yielded his position stubbornly. He was not satisfied with the statement of the chairman of the house rules committee that a rule would be reported in time to assure action on the farm bill, but demanded promises from both senate and house leaders that no obstacle would be placed in the way of a vote.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

A Business Opportunity

exists for the man who wishes to be his own boss and the owner of a permanent, ever-expanding, profitable merchandising service. It may start with $100 capital, or $10,000, but it cannot start without capital. The degree of success has no reasonable limit. It has attracted to it and has today engaged in it, men who are conspicuous successes and of long and wide experience in merchandising, with capital abundant for all their requirements; and the other extreme of men and women with limited business experience and qualifications, and very small capital.

No man is too big for the business. Men of strong professional standing with splendid incomes have given up these incomes and their professional work to engage in this service, with success.

The business is merchandising, but it entails a service that is unique, intensely interesting—productive of great enthusiasm, and broadly constructive. It makes you the greatest benefactor in your community, town, city, or district, and pays you a real profit for such benefaction.

Service is the foundation of all real success, and this service literally enables you to take time from eternity and put it into the life of man, and make legitimate profits in doing so.

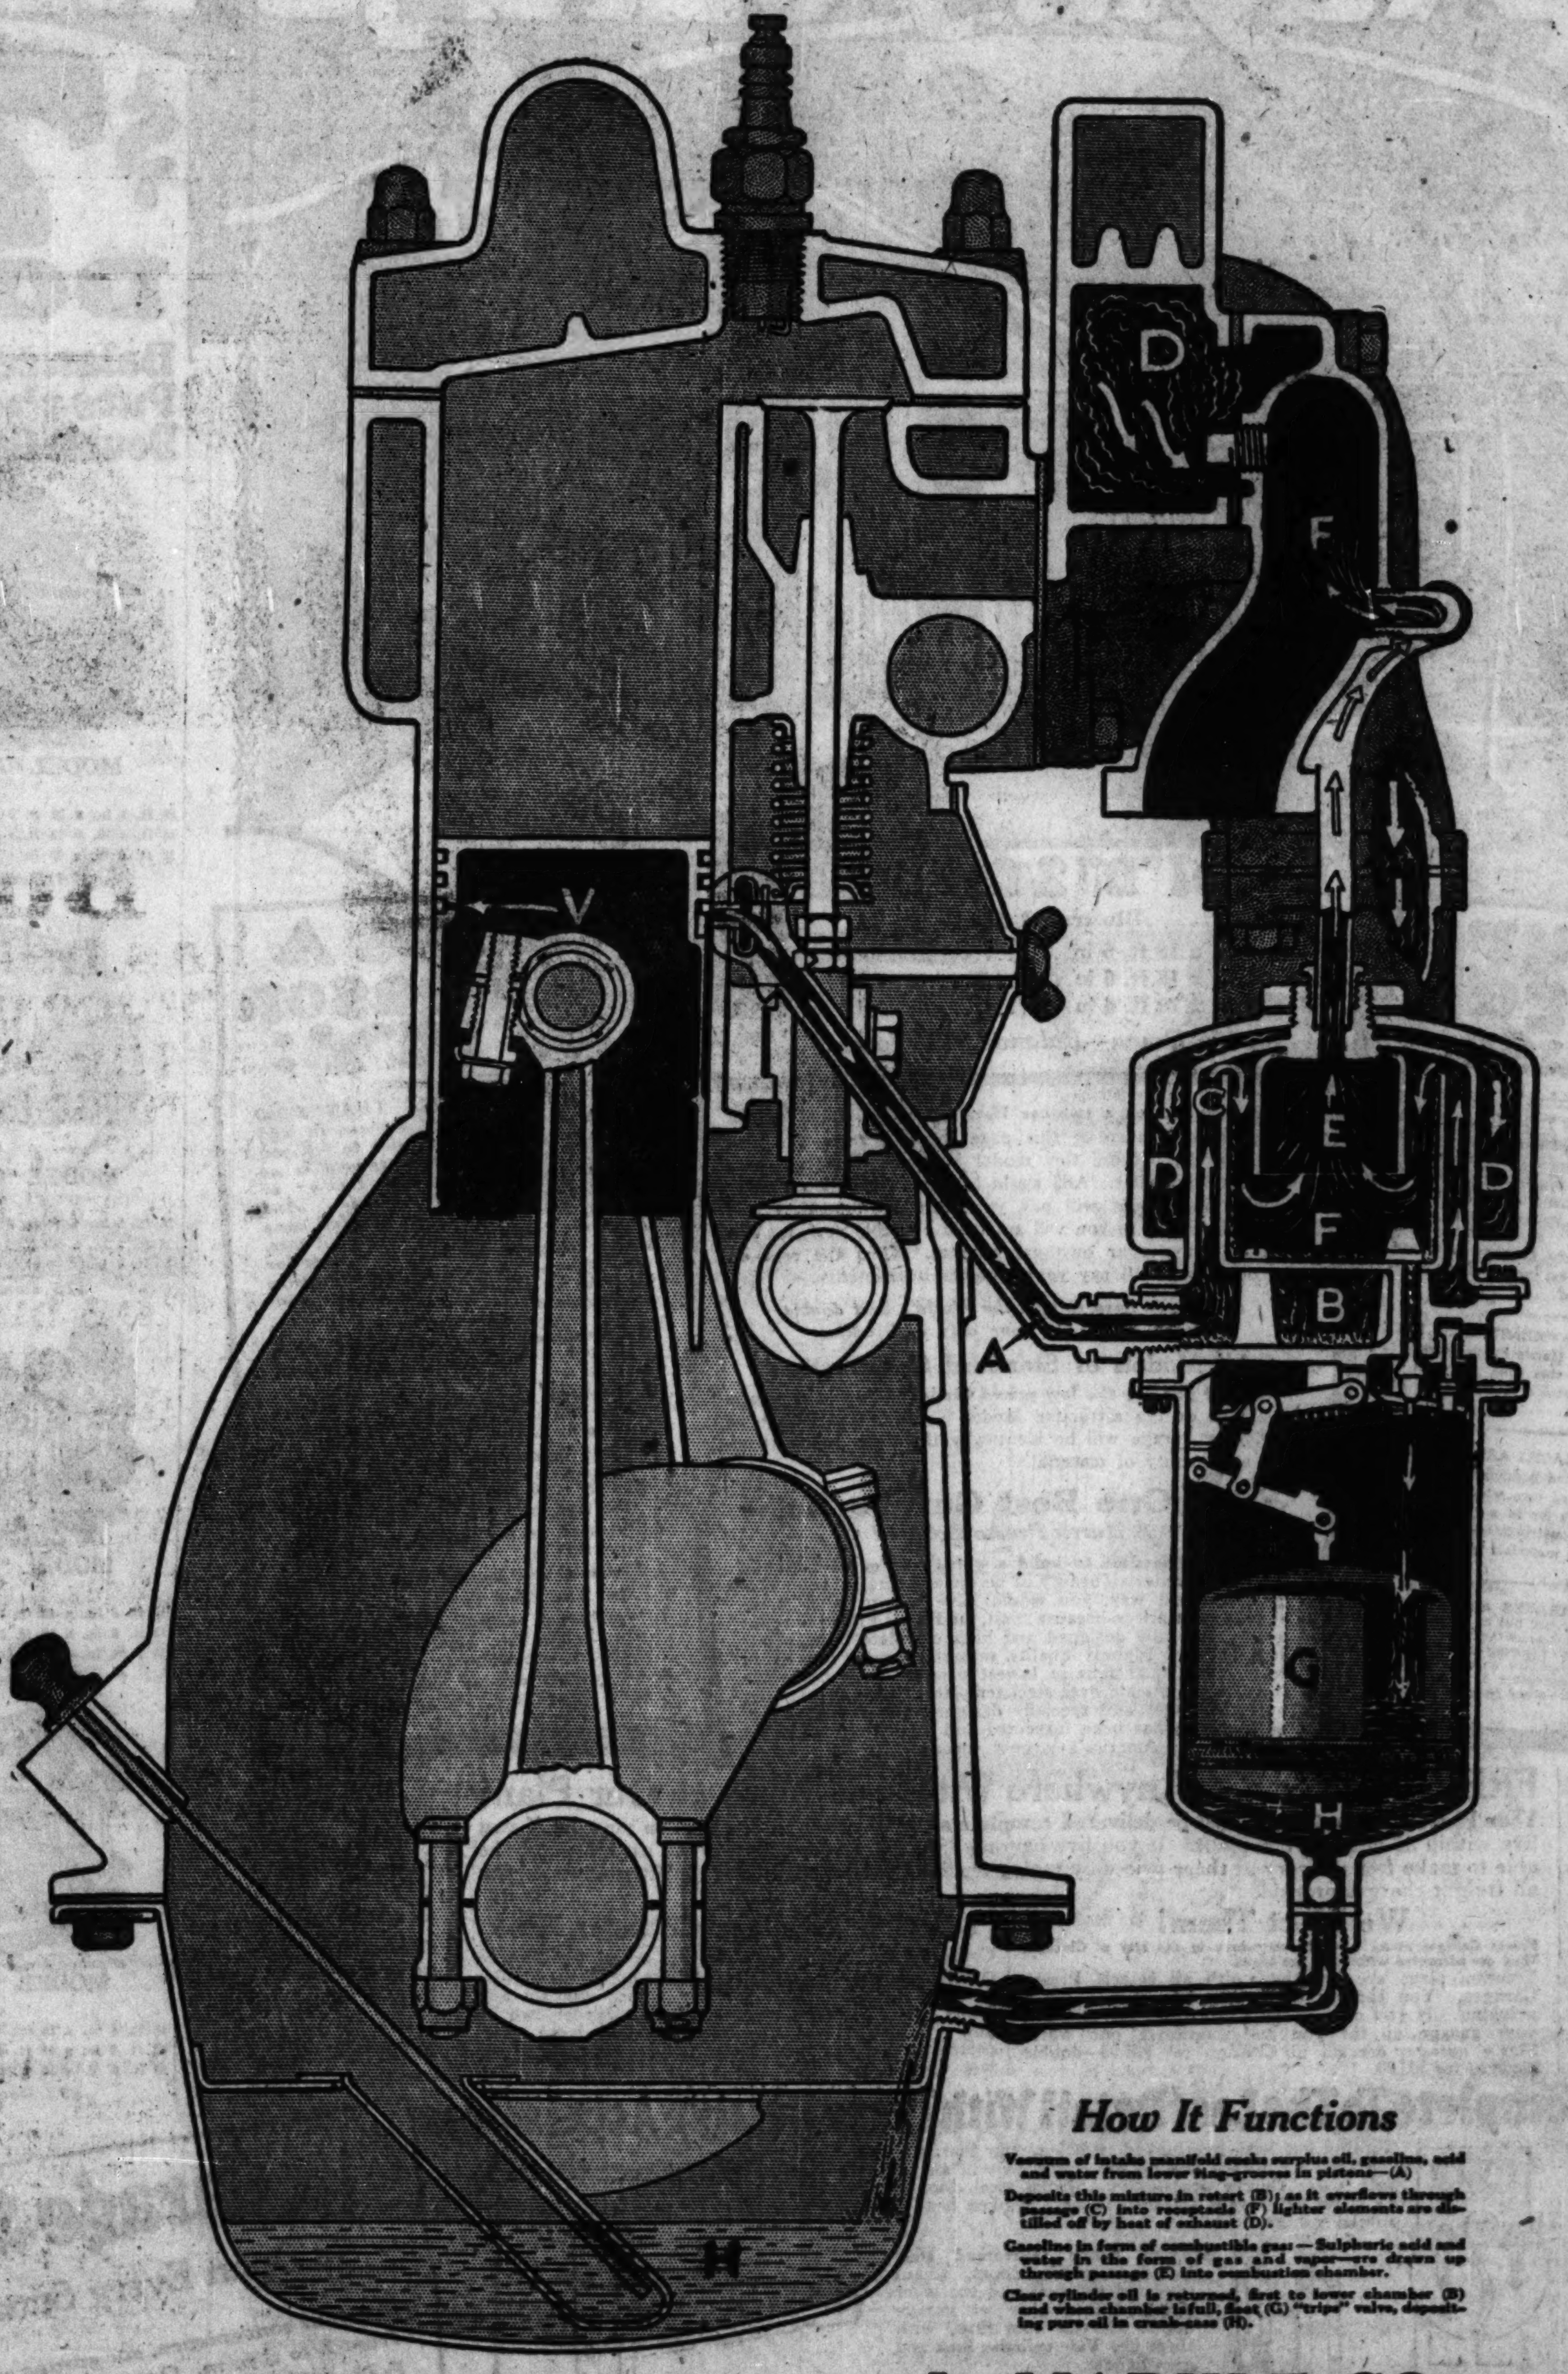
Again!—Rickenbacker Leads

Announcing the

"9th Fundamental"

This is the New Fuel and Oil Rectifier (licensed under Skinner patents) which totally Eliminates Crank-Case Dilution — greatest improvement in a motor since "Tandem Fly Wheels."*



You have learned to expect from this progressive organization the most advanced engineering discoveries and inventions.

Your confidence is again justified by the incorporation in this motor of the greatest improvement since Rickenbacker "Tandem Fly Wheels" eliminated all violent "Periods of Vibration."

This device we term the "9th Fundamental" improvement pioneered by Rickenbacker in a period of less than three years—and that is more than has been done by the entire industry in the last ten!

"RECTIFIER"—look the word up in the dictionary. Webster says, "to refine or purify, by repeated distillation or sublimation, by which the fine parts of a substance are separated from the grosser."

That is precisely what this wonderful invention does; and by doing so, it also justifies another Webster definition—"to correct from a wrong, erroneous or false state—to rectify errors, mistakes and abuses."

All cars selling over $1,000 must eventually have this. But as usual, Rickenbacker has it first.

Rickenbacker policy is to give the buyer the benefit of inventions and discoveries just as soon as we are sure of their desirability.

Others wait until public demand forces them to add the extra cost.

Recent history and present status of 4-Wheel Brakes is a classic example of that.

Rickenbacker lead—now they are all following.

Rickenbacker is always a year or two ahead.

"What does this Rectifier do?"—you ask.

It does so many things—by correcting the primary cause of most motor troubles—that a mere enumeration of them makes a formidable array.

Seems almost too good to be true. Sounds like a "Cure-All."

Yet the principle is so simple—same that operates your Vacuum gasoline feed and windshield wiper—after a five-minutes' examination you will clearly understand.

It prevents "Crank-Case Dilution."

That is to say it prevents the mixture of gasoline, water and Sulphuric Acid, with the lubricating oil in the crank-case.

Having done that, the Rectifier accomplishes the following amazing results:—

(1) Guarantees pure oil of full viscosity to all bearings.
(2) Prevents "blow-bys."
(3) Prevents "Oil Pumping."
(4) Maintains full compression.
(5) Maintains full power of motor after long service.
(6) Prevents scoring of cylinders.
(7) Prevents excessive wear of piston rings.
(8) Prevents piston "Slaps."
(9) Prevents leaking past rings.
(10) Prevents accumulation of carbon.
(11) Prevents fouling of spark plugs.
(12) Prevents pitting of valve seats.
(13) Prevents sticking of valves.
(14) Prevents pitting of cams.
(15) Prevents etching of link pins, and "stretching" of silent chains.
(16) Prevents etching of piston rings, piston pins, bronze bushings, gear teeth and all other steel and copper parts.
(17) Results in great increase in gasoline and oil mileage.
(18) Unnecessary to drain crank-case every 500 miles, as formerly. Depending on speed you drive, you may expect 1,500 to 2,000 miles per gallon of oil.
(19) Permits use of lightest grades of cylinder oil at all times.
(20) By using gasoline formerly wasted adds about 15% to mileage per gallon.
(21) Vaporizes water from fuel, feeds steam into cylinders where it acts to dissolve carbon and prevents detonation—"knocks."
(22) Prevents forming of Sulphuric and Sulphurous Acids—and their ravages.
(23) Relieves pressure in crank-case, thereby taking place of "breather" relief, and conserving oil formerly wasted through that vent.
(24) Valves will not require frequent re-grinding.
(25) Cylinders good for at least 50,000 miles without re-grinding.
(26) Piston Rings will not need replacing in less than 50,000 miles.
(27) Prevents wear of valve stems and guides.
(28) Conserves oil formerly drained from crank-case and thrown away.
(29) Should reduce motor upkeep 75%.
(30) Will double life of motor.

Note: A Rickenbacker car has been driven 30,000 miles without draining crank-case.

How It Functions

Vacuum of intake manifold sucks surplus oil, gasoline, acid and water from lower ring-grooves in pistons—(A)

Deposits this mixture in retort (B); as it overflows through passage (C) into receptacle (F) lighter elements are distilled off by heat of exhaust (D).

Gasoline in form of combustible gas:—Sulphuric acid and water in the form of gas and vapor—are drawn up through passage (E) into combustion chamber.

Clear cylinder oil is returned, first to lower chamber (B) and when chamber is full, float (G) "trips" valve, depositing pure oil in crank-case (H).

It's Your Garage Because:

ALL HARRIS PRESTO GARAGES are delivered to your lot complete to the last detail, painted and ready to erect and occupy in a day. Not just a load of rough lumber, with many extras to pay for. No waiting—no muss around your lot—no uncertainty. You know just how your Harris Presto Garage will appear on your lot when you select it in our garage show yard.

LOWEST MONTHLY PAYMENTS, JUST LIKE garage rent, pay for any Harris Presto Garage in one year. At the end of this time, you own the World's best garage instead of a handful of rent receipts.

HARRIS PRESTO GARAGES ARE THE ONLY patented and trade-marked buildings of their kind in America—the choice of men who know. They offer all you could wish for in a garage—sturdy, enduring, permanent construction—beauty of design and highest grade materials from foundation to roof.

HARRIS PRESTO GARAGES ARE NOT PATented to obtain high prices, but as a protection to you against unscrupulous imitations. Important features of construction insuring ease of erection, strength and permanency are covered by patents issued April 2, 1918, September 3, 1918, March 22, 1921, and July 18, 1922—other patents pending.

WE have chosen a two-car Harris Presto Garage for the pictorial feature of this page for two reasons. First and directly, because this model in these sizes has been remarkably popular. And again because probably no other building investment will pay you such an immediate and profitable return as you will get from a double garage. Use half and save your own garage rent. Then the rent on the other half will pay your monthly installments.

So, all you need to own the World's Best double garage is $75.00, your only cash outlay

All Models of Standard Construction

Whether you buy the low priced Model "A" one car garage at $152.00 or the attractive Model "G," two car garage at $299, your garage will be identically the same in construction and quality of material.

Your One Best Garage Bet—

A Harris Presto Garage!

If it were possible to build a garage of equal strength, quality of material, beauty of design and detailed completeness, the old way, you would have to pay much more than our low prices, because: first, the Harris Presto Garages are scientifically designed and built complete here in our big plant of highest quality material bought by us in tremendous quantities at lowest prices. They are made on a gigantic scale over steel templates, jigs and patterns by trained men and specially designed machinery. Their construction has been inspected and passed by engineers of many of America's largest corporations.

Theres A Big Reason WHY:

ANY ONE OF MORE THAN 5,000 Harris Presto Garage owners in and about Chicago will be quick to tell you why. Their combined judgment is an overwhelming argument in favor of these—the world's best garages. And—please, don't forget, they decided upon a Harris Presto Garage because it was, and is today, by far the best garage for the money. A few of the exclusive features in Harris Presto Garage construction follow:

1. Guaranteed "no-sag" garage doors of our own make—painted on both sides.
2. Patented notch lock roof trusses—roof will hold any snow load. 15 year guaranteed slate surfaced roofing.
3. Extra heavy top and bottom wall plates—strictly No. 1 grade framing lumber, special interlocking method of wall framing.
4. Patented, extra heavy corner post construction.
5. Matched and beaded roof sheathing.
6. Clear kiln dried Oregon fir siding.
7. Waterproof window sills—all sections interchangeable. Door and windows placed where wanted.
8. All garages painted one good coat—body color grey, white trim.

MOTORDOM

Middle West Roads Graduate from Old One-Horse Class

Engineers Watch Detroit Experiment and Plan Express Lines.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MASON CITY, Ia., May 9.—[Special.]—Ultimately, when the horse and buggy idea gives place to the motor transportation plan nationally, automobiles must be allowed to travel over long stretches of right of way at their maximum speed. Wider roads entering population centers, division of highways into their logical freight, local, and express lines, and the unification of transportation laws throughout the United States will make all this possible.

So, at least, say engineers of the middle west and the transport experts now busily engaged in working out the growing road problems of practically every community of any size in Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa.

All of them are looking eastward this spring toward Detroit, where Wayne county pavement pioneers are pushing the construction of a 200 foot right of way from Detroit to Pontiac, with just this idea of segregating highway traffic and putting automobile operation into the scientific transportation field where it belongs.

When completed this highway will provide tracks in its center for fast and local railways. On the outside two forty foot pavements will carry the automobile traffic. These one way lines will provide for slow moving and local cars on the inside lines and for fast, through motors on the outside speedways. Cross traffic will be protected, according to the first plan, by elevating the intersections and dividing the grades.

Thus the cars used to transport passengers or light freight for long distances will be given a chance to operate at maximum efficiency and minimum expense without endangering the joy riders, the slow moving trucks, and the myriad other tardy vehicles which form the real barrier on any open road.

Cook county roads on Sunday do not hold a monopoly on congestion. Far from it. Try, as this TRIBUNE pilgrimage has, to thread the maze of vehicles on main roads entering Indianapolis, Terre Haute, Cairo, Ill.; Springfield, Peoria, Rock Island, Davenport, Cedar Rapids—any city or town of any size in the middle west—and you will meet worse than the Waukegan road mess. Generally the speed limit in these towns is held to twenty miles an hour and sometimes to fifteen. With the highway filled to its limit, the restriction means that cars simply cannot move faster than ten to twelve miles an hour and that then the speed is far from safe. Even when wide open country is reached there is certain to be three or four leisurely drivers heading the procession at twenty as a matter of course. They have crawled ahead so long in getting out of town that this speed seems natural, and a car attempting to go somewhere at the legal limit of thirty miles an hour becomes both a danger and a pest.

But in summer local traffic is only a part of that carried by the average main highway. Every other car carries a foreign license and may be heading for a point several thousand miles away. It is naturally operating on some sort of schedule, which calls for a certain speed. The driver has just so much time to get to his destination and knows that in holding to a steady speed over the entire distance he is conserving his fuel and saving his motor from strain. Driving has become mechanical after days and perhaps weeks of travel, and ten miles an hour processions are the most dangerous situations that can confront him. He has paid for personal transportation. His vehicle licenses—costing as high as $50 a year in some states—entitle him to use his car to its best advantage. His road taxes entitle him to full use of the highways. He has usually contributed heavily to the very stretch of highway he can see ahead in gasoline taxes, and yet he is under constant restraint from purely local regulations. If he happens to be reckless or rebellious by nature he disregards as many of these local regulations as possible and becomes a menace to every other driver on the road, and all because of the lack of transportation planning about highway terminals and of uniform regulations which will give the automobile in its present numbers a chance.

In these central states Illinois is now at least two years ahead in highway work. Indiana is just getting well under way with paving on its interstate highways. Iowa has not started in any comprehensive way to pave its interstate primary routes, but has its road foundations pretty well laid. The eighteen foot pavement is, of course, the standard in all three states, and engineers are convinced that this width is inadequate and dangerous on all but open country roads.

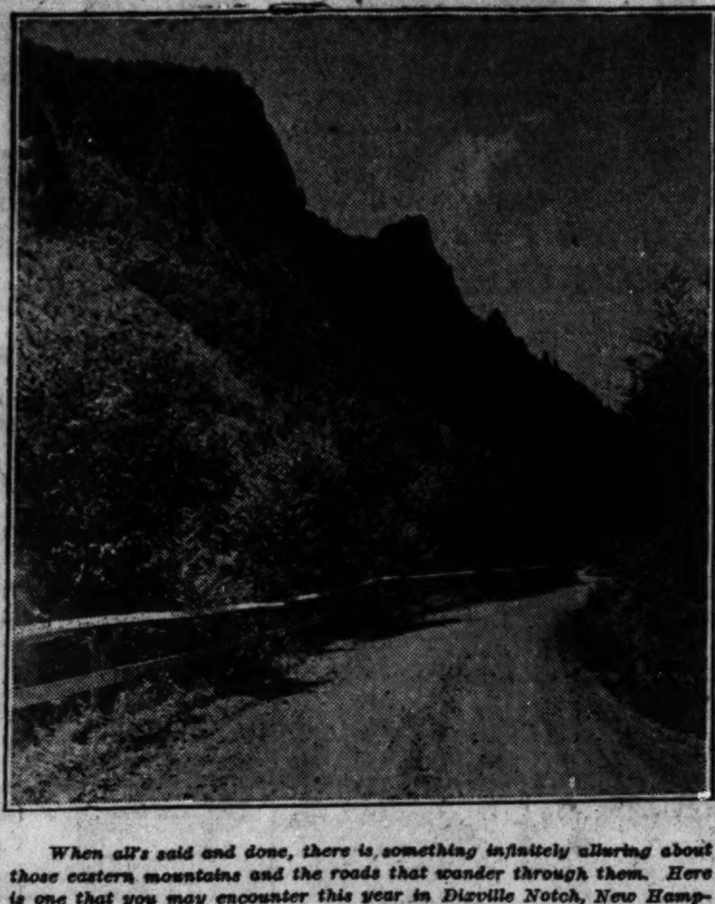
There is a division of opinion as to the best method of meeting motor vehicle needs at terminals. About half of the road authorities favor widening the present terminal pavements to about half again their present width. The opposition wants parallel pavements built to carry one way traffic and eliminate all passing dangers. The latter present facts and figures to show that accidents are practically eliminated when all of the traffic on a given road is moving in a single direction. Blinding lights, they point out, cease to be a menace and become instead an added point of safety on the one way road. Cross traffic is protected against collision by a 50 per cent margin, and uniform speed is natural. The cost of construction of such improvements is the big drawback. Addition of one way roads requires the purchase of new rights of way and the building of an entire new highway unit, while most of the present main roads can be widened without condemning property and like extra expense.

Observations so far indicate that this is a year of unprecedented expansion in highway work throughout the middle west, and that the wider road campaign has usurped the place of initial pavement programs in all of the big terminal points.

Favor U. S. Cars.

American made automobiles are easily understood and can be repaired simply by mechanics, while European cars do not conform to any basic standards and as a result "freak" cars appear on the foreign markets.

DAWN IN THE NOTCH.



When all's said and done, there is something infinitely alluring about those eastern mountains and the roads that wander through them. Here is one that you may encounter this year in Dixville Notch, New Hampshire. The scene lies about sixty miles north of Mount Washington, in the White mountains.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY ERWIN GREER.

BE SATISFIED—IF IT RUNS.

THE sensible motor car owner is satisfied if his car gives a reasonable performance. If the fan belt breaks he puts on a new one. If a washer leaks in the rear axle and the axle begins to throw grease, he cleans out the grease on the brake bands, put in a new washer and then tries driving more in the center of the road. Driving to the right — continually — tilts the axle housing to the right, works the grease out a lot sooner than it would otherwise. And he doesn't howl about it, realizing that it was his own fault for driving to the extreme right.

Every car has some sort of chronic trouble. Even the same make and model of car is capable of developing varied troubles. It is common to hear a motorist say, "She always did that," or "That never did work properly." And such comments are as readily made about the $8,000 machine as the $900 one. But the big reason why complaints are confined to a certain class of drivers is because the other class of driver knows that a car needs constant attention, and gives it.

I know a fellow who is continually bewailing the fact that one of the ignition wires was always dropping off a spark plug. Instead of inserting a new fastener at the end of the cable he chose to sit back and yell about it. Meanwhile the car runs on three or four cylinders, depending upon how effectually he swears. The car is mechanically perfect outside of this small defect and 6 cents would remedy that. But to hear his talk you'd think that the machine was a veritable wreck.

I invited this same chap to take a ride in my car, which is an expensive make. "This is the sort of a car for me!" he exclaimed, as we glided down Michigan boulevard. "Nothing ever goes wrong with this make of car."

But just then he beheld my chauffeur acting exactly the same as he had acted the day before,

"Blast it!" the chauffeur exclaimed. "The horn is out of order!"

There you are, folks. Half the automobile drivers are to blame—not the machines themselves. Give your machine reasonable attention and care. And always remember that the car owner who appears to have a "regular car" is the fellow who, nine times out of ten, knows how to take care of it—or has learned to be satisfied with what he has.

After the Rain.

About the best time to polish the nickel trimmings of the car is when the machine has been brought in out of the wet. Even where motorists are careful enough to wipe off the trimmings with a dry rag some of the moisture remains over night and appears as rust the next morning. If the polishing job is combined with the drying process the motorist can go to rest feeling that he has killed two birds with one stone and made a good job of it.

Replacing Shells.

If bearings have worn too much or if they have been burned out it will be necessary to replace the shells with new ones. In this operation it is important that the bearing shell itself seats accurately in the crank case or rod. All burrs should be carefully removed and the parts thoroughly cleaned before the bearing lock screws are inserted, because if the shells do not have a solid seating all work will be wasted and the bearings will not stand up as they should.

For the Church.

Motor busses are utilized by the Memorial Baptist church of Courtland, N. Y., for the transportation of rural members of the Sunday school. Each Sunday the machines cover the macadamized highways within a radius of seven miles of the town, picking up all within walking distance of the roads who have no other means of conveyance.

Put Engine Under Hood.

In 1902, when the automobile was known as a "horseless carriage," Claude E. Cox of Terre Haute, Ind., distinguished himself by building the first car that had its engine under the hood in front, instead of under the seat.

More Good Roads.

Alberta, Canada, will spend $3,500,000 for good roads this year, according to an announcement by Hon. A. Ross, provincial minister of public works. The money, he said, will be spent in completing 420 miles of partially constructed highways. Work will be begun immediately. Capital is being borrowed under an act calling for the issuance of fifteen year bonds. These will be paid for on maturity out of a sinking fund created from the proceeds of automobile licenses in the province.

Under the terms of the dominion good roads act, Alberta, it is pointed out, will receive a grant of $1,500,000 from the federal government this year. This will take care of about 40 per cent of the cost of the road building program during the year.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE

........From the Case Engineering Code:

"When an automobile fails to operate satisfactorily it is usually because of a defect or derangement of some one part or unit. Had this been better made the car would have continued to perform until something else gave way. Any part or unit that wears out, or breaks before another, is inadequate and should have been made better. Given the care it deserves and barring unusual accidents, a motor car should perform consistently and dependably as a whole during the full term of its useful life.

"By constantly bringing nearer to the point of perfection every part that ever shows need for improvement, the highest possible degree of refinement and permanency is attained in the finished machine. Obviously, if this process of refinement is extended throughout a car it cannot fail to serve and satisfy its owners better and for a much longer time."

In the exacting process that is employed in developing Case motor cars, a graphic record is kept of all parts replaced in the cars in use.

Periodically these quantities are reduced to definite factors which picture, plainly and accurately, the endurance of the car as a whole during each year of its life. This is accomplished by dividing the number of cars into the number of replacements of each part. From this Case obtains the endurance factor or index for each part.

Every possible step is taken to reduce this factor to the lowest possible point by—

2 The use of the finest and most suitable materials throughout.

3 Infinite care and precision in workmanship.

4 Exhaustive inspection of the minutest detail.

This system is the only one ever devised which gives any substantial guarantee of steady, orderly progress toward perfection. It has developed impartially, and to an unusually high standard of excellence, every feature and every quality of Case cars.

Owners have been spared the risk and expense attending frequent and radical changes. The permanence of essential qualities has made Case one of the few fine cars consistently held in high regard.

Goodrich Balloon Cords for any car

YOU can equip your car with Goodrich Balloon Cords, because Goodrich makes them for 20 and 21 inch wheels (the new equipment) and also for existing wheels and rims.

Whatever problem the car presents, Goodrich can equip it with Balloon Cords.

Here is a chance to obtain the greater comfort, added safety, and pleasure of Balloon Cords for any car, new or old; and get it in highest quality.

The name, Goodrich, on a Balloon Cord assures you of the quality, vital to a tire. It tells you that it is the product of the same tire manufacturer that fathered cord tires.

Consult the Goodrich dealer for expert and reliable facts and suggestions on Balloon Cords. He will advise you on the proper size for your car. Ask him to show you our Balloon Cord Information Chart, and get from him our up-to-date Bulletin, "Goodrich Balloon Cords."

Motor Optimists Trim Their Sails to Meet Demand

Industry Tones Down Its Breakneck Speed in May.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., May 10.—[Special.]—Automobile manufacturers and automobile dealers, collectively, have about decided that they shot too high during the optimistic periods preceding the National automobile shows of last winter, and that their selling schedules are not now being maintained. This fact is, of course, causing more or less disappointment, but not discouragement.

Dealers as a unit declare the noticeable slump in sales is no cause for apprehension. Many of them were swept off their feet by the optimistic wave, along with great business they handled during the latter months of 1923. This business was spread over the entire country with but very few poor spots. But since the first of April, despite the satisfactory first quarter, sales have not measured up to expectations, although orders, in good volume, are being received. Automobile weather has been slow in arriving, and dealers are pinning their faith to the belief that with the coming of warm weather the buying public will again rush the agencies. From the side lines it is apparent that the situation will be confined to about 25 or 30 makes of standard cars. Outside of this number the manufacturers will be forced to be satisfied with what little patronage there is left.

During the first half of April a noticeable increase in sales was apparent, despite many days of unsatisfactory weather, and if the law of average prevails the month will close well ahead of March and far in excess of April, 1923.

When manufacturers are satisfied that an increased production is necessary everything is set for an output that will satisfy the looked-for demand, but until such time really arrives, there will be no move made for an output that will flood the market. Dealers throughout the country must be heard from—dealers who, during the winter months, were provided with cars by trainloads with which to fill orders booked for early deliveries.

Until a positive assurance that an outlet for more cars is a certainty, producers who have cut their high levels of early months will maintain production on a curtailed basis. This attitude will continue indefinitely, and schedules revised from week to week as conditions develop, say the leaders.

Since the beginning of 1923 the industry has enjoyed a period of prosperity far greater than the most optimistic would prophesy. This continued for more than a year. The first quarter of 1923 was a comparatively light one in the total output of motor vehicles, and manufacturers were faced with an unexpected condition. An unlooked for buying movement started over night, and the supply of cars on hand was far too small to meet the demand. Factories were speeded up to capacity and schedules revised upward. This resulted in the second quarter reaching the record breaking figure of 1,155,290 cars. The third quarter experienced a falling off from the second of 154,540 vehicles, and the last quarter saw an output or 875,503.

In order not to be again caught short, manufacturers worked their plants to capacity regardless of orders booked, instead of waiting for the demand to come and then catching up with it. This resulted in an output of 1,040,092 cars during the months of January, February and March. This exceeded every quarter of 1923 with the exception of the second. Present indications are that the second quarter of the present year will fall far short of the production for the corresponding quarter of 1923.

The cars are ready, and the manufacturers, sales managers and dealers are satisfied that the demand will develop before the season is much older, and automotive heads are happy in the belief that what business they expected but did not get in March and the early weeks of April, they will get later on.

There is a reason why some of the automobile manufacturers are in better financial condition than others, why they don't have to borrow money and are always rated as "AA." That reason is not merely because they sell more cars or make more profits, experts declare, but the result of their conservative policy.

It is well known in the automobile industry that many concerns have "gone to the wall" because they were not conservative enough, or not conservative at all. They went full speed ahead, believing that because they had experienced a year or two of success, it was a certainty that it would always be so. Death was the cause of this over-confidence, and lack of conservatism.

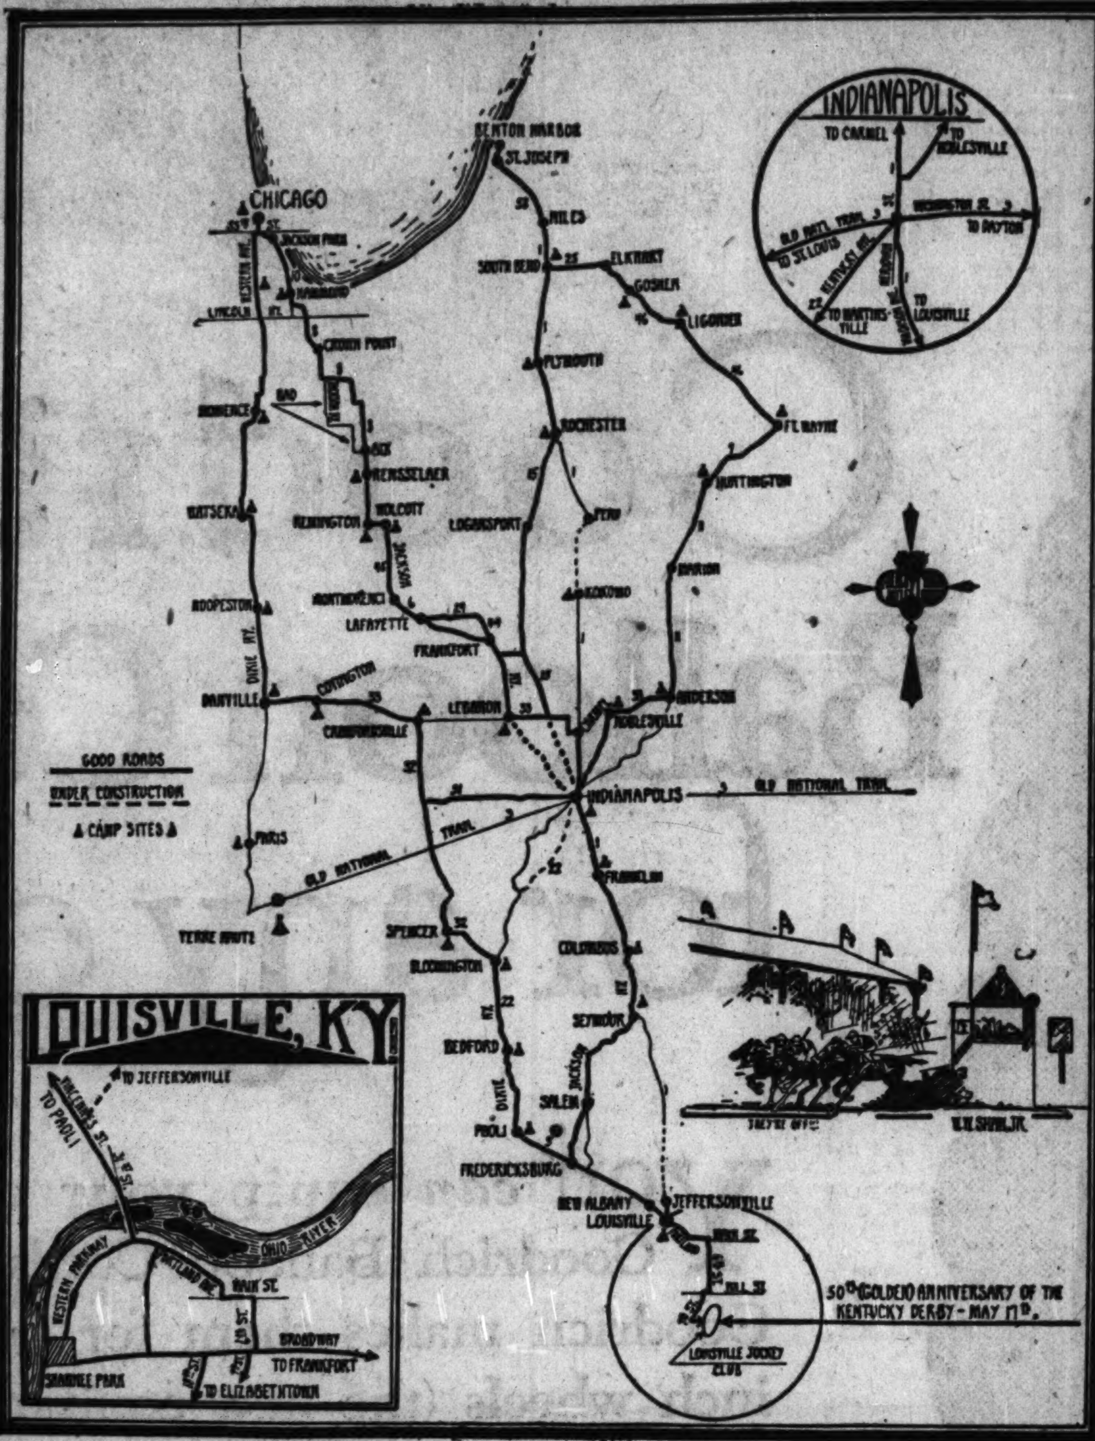
III.—GOOD ROADS TO LOUISVILLE



If you're going to the races you'll have good roads all the way to Louisville. The best and shortest route for the Chicagoan is via the Dixie highway to Crawfordsville, then south over Indiana state highway 33 to Bloomington, and 22, where you pick up the Dixie highway again, to Paoli and Louisville. The next best route is via Hammond, then state road 8 to Aix, Ind., where you pick up the Jackson highway to Lebanon. At Lebanon go east on 33 to a county road just two miles west of the Range Line road or state highway 1, and then south and east into Carmel, where you pick up concrete road into Indianapolis. Many of the roads leading south into Indianapolis are closed for construction. At Indianapolis go south over the Jackson highway to Salem. Leave the Jackson highway at Salem, taking the hard road to Frederick and then the Dixie to Louisville. Roads between Peru and Kokomo, Indianapolis and Bloomington, and Seymour and Jeffersonville are under construction.

Second Washer.

The average hand tire pump does not always operate satisfactorily, due to the leather washer failing to properly seal the cylinder on the down stroke. By threading the plunger rod a few inches farther back, and adding another cup washer, the pump will operate much better, as there will be less leakage past the washers.

Watch the Cuts.

Don't neglect small cuts. These will often extend farther than you think. Dirt and wet get in, the fabric rots, and a blowout follows. Look over your tires from time to time. Don't keep a spare tire out of use too long. Change over occasionally. A tire lasts better in use than exposed to the sun and rain on the running board.

Out of Luck.

Twenty-three years ago automobiles had no right on the streets of Berlin, according to a dictum of a Berlin judge at the time.

U. S. Lost Billion Dollars in 1923 Through Accidents

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Highway traffic accidents in 1923 cost the United States $1,113,753, it was estimated by William Phelps Eno of Washington, D. C., chairman of the Eno Foundation for Highway Traffic Regulation. He addressed the Yale university-State of Connecticut conference on motor vehicle traffic and control and estimated that in the last year avoidable mishaps caused 27,000 deaths, 675,000 injuries, and 5,062,500 property damages.

He summarized as imperative need for immediate steps to be taken: Uniformity in traffic regulations; more exacting examination form in granting licenses; courses in traffic training for officers and school children.

"The object of highway traffic regulation is to save life, time and money. What really makes traffic regulation of absorbing human interest is that it saves many lives and prevents much physical suffering. If we could save all the lives now being sacrificed and prevent all the accidents resulting in human injury and in property damage, the equivalent in money would be far above $1,000,000 a year in the United States alone," he said in part:

"There is as yet no adequate system of recording accidents anywhere and in many places practically no system at all, so that many people get home or out of town and there is no record of the accidents, although they may finally result in death.

"During the nineteen months of the world war it was estimated that the loss of life by highway traffic accidents in the United States was pretty nearly twice as great as our loss of life through the war itself. It may be remembered that during that time hundreds and perhaps thousands of pedestrians were run down by army trucks driven over our streets and roads by inexperienced drivers with a recklessness never surpassed.

"Other estimates based on deaths recorded indicate a mortality of about 18,000 for 1923, personal injuries 450,000, and number of property damages 3,375,000, but, as already pointed out, these figures are necessarily very incomplete.

"I believe that if a really complete tabulation had been possible it would have shown something like twice the above figures, or 36,000 deaths, 900,000 injuries, and 6,750,000 property damages.

"Suppose we take an average of these two estimates, which would give 27,000 deaths, 675,000 injuries, and 5,062,500 property damages.

"If the value of a life were estimated at $10,000, a bodily injury at $500, and a property damage accident at $100, we would have made a total loss of $1,113,750,000."

New Wrinkles for Motor Vagabonds at Coliseum Show

THE hundred and one problems that confront the motorist who plans to adopt motor camping treatment for the wanderlust this summer will be solved graphically at the second annual National Outdoor Life exposition, which opens at the Coliseum tomorrow.

Success in motor camping depends largely on the proper selection of an outfit.

Equipment for the motor gypsy at the exposition will range in luxury from a specially built motor camping car built on a modified truck chassis, and embodying all the comforts of a Pullman on tires, to outfits for two persons and a light roadster. The motor camp car has luxurious accommodations for four passengers, with an observation platform, a bath, spring beds of the Pullman type that fold into the side of the body, a radio set, and a kitchenette as complete as any that could be found in a small apartment. Special tanks contain several days' supply of gasoline and water, and a refrigerator enables the chef of the party to provide a luxurious bill of fare.

A Fine Car that Costs Little to Operate

One outstanding feature of this majestic, powerful Peerless Eight is its remarkable long mileage at such ridiculously low operating cost.

Built into the Peerless "V"-type motor and into every part of the chassis, is a staunchness and a nicety of balance that result in unusual freedom from wear and repairs.

After months of rigorous service, owners find this dependable car still free from carbon—still the remarkably smooth, noiseless Eight it was at the start. The same superabundance of power is there that marked its first few thousand miles.

For the Peerless Eight possesses stamina and endurance far beyond any rational requirement. It is a masterpiece of care and precision. And, as such, it gives that masterful performance so appreciated by those who know fine motor cars.

If you would experience the highest type of motor car performance, by all means ride in the Peerless Eight.

Engineers Warn Cities to Begin Brake Inspection

In recent tests conducted in Washington by representatives of the Society of Automobile Engineers and Bureau of Standards, need of local ordinances governing the control and efficiency of brakes on automobiles came in for a generous share of consideration. These tests revealed the following defects on average automobiles:

1. Cars with four wheel brakes varied considerably in the effectiveness of their brakes.

2. Cars with two wheel brakes also varied considerably in braking efficiency and stopped at greater distance than the four brake cars.

3. The socalled "emergency brake" was less effective than the service brake in stopping the car.

Although the tests showed the efficacy of four wheel brakes, especially in emergencies, it also revealed the fact that this innovation needs considerable adjustment and improvement before it can be considered a finished product.

According to the tests made by the Bureau of Standards the average stopping distance for a four brake going at the rate of twenty miles an hour was 21.1 feet on a dry pavement, and 26 feet on a wet road. These tests varied from 16 to 26 feet on a dry road and 14 to 40 feet on a wet road.

Two wheel brake cars stopped at an average of 36 feet on a dry road and 56.3 feet on a wet pavement. The stopping distances also varied considerably, showing that two wheel brakes needed as much standardization as the four wheel brake.

Inefficiency of the service brakes was a distinct surprise in the test. Using the foot brake alone, the driver going twenty miles an hour stopped at distances varying from 22 to 98 feet. With the emergency brake alone they stopped from 42 to 155 feet.

Use Old Hose.

Rubber garden hose makes an excellent protection for ignition cables. Cut off a piece of hose to the correct length, and run the wires through it and out through the opposite end or through holes in the side to conform with the location of the spark plugs and the general scheme of the wiring. Starting wire cables can also be protected from oil and water, short circuits, chafing and other injury by covering with garden hose.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Two hundred and thirteen Willys Overland dealers assembled at the Chicago branch, 19 West 26th street, last Wednesday, to view the new Overland Blue Bird which now comes through with balloon tires and standard equipment, and the new sedan coupe, with exceptionally wide doors. Orders were given for 210 of these cars to be delivered within sixty days. Country dealers drove away with 158 new cars.

Exports of Paige and Jewett cars for the first four months of the year exceeded the entire export business of 1923, according to Harry M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Jewett company, who has just returned from a tour of Europe. In one month sixty-five Jewetts were sold in London, he states. The firm has entered the field in Germany for the first time, and Mr. Jewett reports encouraging prospects there.

Boyce-ite, the new motor fuel ingredient just introduced in Chicago, is the invention of Harrison Boyce, who put out the motometer, which has passed the 5,000,000 mark in sales. It is claimed for his latest product that it removes carbon, increases gasoline mileage, removes carbon knocks from motors, eliminates the necessity of cleaning spark plugs and grinding valves, and also tends to make a more responsive and quieter motor.

The Gray Chicago company, distributor for the Gray automobile in Chicago territory, has moved into new and larger quarters at 2313 S. Michigan avenue.

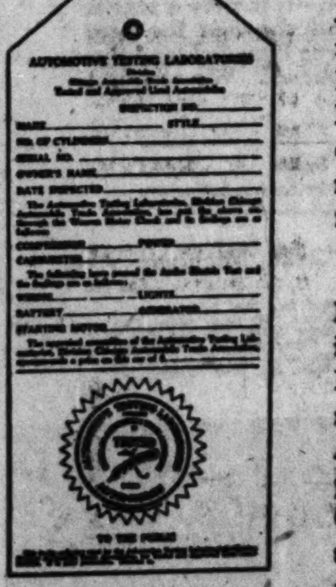
LOOK FOR THIS GREEN TAG



This is the Official A. T. L. Tested and Approved Seal. Inside is the complete report on the condition of the car for your protection.

AT LAST uncertainty and guesswork have been eliminated from your used car purchases. The most exact testing equipment engineering science has ever devised now renders you a detailed test report on the mechanical condition of the used car you buy.

This new condition in the used car market has been brought about by members of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. A wonderful new system of car testing, known as the WASSON MOTOR CHECK, combined with the AMBU ENGINEERING INSTITUTE electrical and other tests have been adopted as standard measures of mileage value in used cars offered for sale by dealer members of the Association.

Tests are conducted by The Automotive Testing Laboratory, a new branch of the Association, in the roomy building at 29th and Michigan, N. W. Corner. Every car tested in the Laboratory will bear the official seal of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association and be accompanied by The Automotive Testing Laboratory Certified Report. This report gives an exact statement of the car's mechanical condition, and is your assurance of known value for your money.

The WASSON MOTOR CHECK, adopted for these tests, is a revolutionary invention that measures the motor under actual working conditions. It tests with deadly accuracy every factor that makes the wheels go 'round. It tests (1) Horsepower delivered at rear wheels, (2) Slippage past rings and pistons in cubic inches per minute, (3) Compression in each cylinder, (4) Percentage of oil dilution.

Then there are the AMBU ENGINEERING INSTITUTE electrical tests for shorts—for generator efficiency—for amperage used by starter—for battery condition. There are sound and temperature tests for bearings, transmission, differentials. There are physical tests for frame and axle alignments, plus personal inspection of upholstery, paint and fittings.

These tests will be conducted by a personnel of trained specialists in automotive testing, under engineer in charge, F. E. Edwards, chairman of the Technical Committee of the A. A. A. and member of the S. A. E., who has officiated as test engineer at many of the big race meetings for a decade.

THOROUGHNESS is the keynote of this testing service which is to result in FAIR and SQUARE dealing with the used car buying public.

Automotive Testing Laboratory tested and approved used cars will be offered for sale only by dealer members of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. Look to these dealers for positively known values in used cars, backed by the certified report and tag of The Automotive Testing Laboratory.

Drive a Six

Get Out of the Four Class

Fours are going! Soon only the very cheapest cars will be Fours.

Why put up with Four-cylinder disadvantages when you can have Six-cylinder advantages in a Dort for practically the same price.

Fours are noisy; the Dort Six is silent. Fours are sluggish; the Dort Six is "peppy." Most Fours halt on hills; the Dort Six takes them in high. Fours vibrate; the Dort Six has no period of vibration. Four-cylinder power is uneven; Dort six cylinders give you a smooth power flow.

The Dort Six costs no more in the first place than many Fours—and costs decidedly less in the long run.

Stewart BUMPERS
BEAUTIFY and PROTECT YOUR CAR

Most Blows are Received on Ends of the BUMPER

IT is at the ends of the bumper where double-bar protection is most needed. Two cars, about to collide, invariably attempt to miss each other and seldom hit head-on. A side blow is usually the result and the double-bars of the Stewart are there to absorb it.

Driving or parking, you can be protected at all times against careless drivers by equipping your car with double-bar Stewart bumpers.

Stewart Bumpers Give Double-Bar Bumper Protection at Both Ends as well as in Center

FARM AND GARDEN

Iowans Turn to Dairying to Cover Cattle Price Slump

Make More Selling Cream than by Feeding It to Calves.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

MASON CITY, Ia., May 10.—[Special.]—Agricultural relief measures have little appeal to the average Iowa farmer. Most of them apparently have decided that the best way to meet the new changes in conditions is to buckle down to hard work, shift their production programs, and hoe their own rows. An independent, optimistic, winning agriculture is the new interpretation being given to the letters I O W and A.

To the average person outside of the state Iowa is thought of in terms of corn and oats, hogs, and beef cattle. Growing crops and fattening porkers and steers are still the principal occupations of Iowa farmers, but there is a growing interest in milk cows and hens. During the last week THE TRIBUNE's midwest touring expedition has crossed the state from east to west and from north to south, and in every section found silos and dairy cow stanchions mixed in with the beef steers' corn cribs and feed bunks.

More than 50,000 dairy cows, valued at $5,000,000 have been shipped into Iowa during the last two years, most of them coming from Minnesota and Wisconsin. Ten per cent of all the butter produced in the United States is now made in Iowa.

Turn to Dairying.

Checking up on dairy cattle alone does not tell the whole story of dairying in this state, for we have found hundreds of beef cattle men separating the milk and selling the cream. The practice heretofore has been to turn the calves in with the cows and save only enough milk for home use. The need of ready cash and the big drop in the price of pure bred cattle used for breeding purposes have encouraged beef cattle producers to sell cream.

Interest in dairying is also indicated by the growth of cow testing associations here. Four years ago there were only twelve in the state; today there are fifty-five. Three years ago Iowa farmers produced a little more than 86,000,000 pounds of butter; they are now producing more than 124,000,000 pounds a year. It is roughly estimated that there are more than 1,000,000 dairy cows in the state. There are 435 creameries, most of them owned coöperatively by farmers.

The enormous number of cream separators sold to farmers in recent years is also evidence of the interest in dairying. A big farm implement dealer and distributor of dairy equipment in Cedar Rapids, Ia., says his concern has distributed between 1,000 and 1,100 separators, all of the same make, among Iowa farmers within the last four years, and has ordered a third more than usual to take care of the increased demand this season.

May Be Temporary.

Whether dairying has come to stay in this state outside of the southeastern counties where the milk cow has been well established for many years is a question. Production of cream is probably a temporary business with the beef cattle men who are still hopeful that pure bred beef cattle prices will improve from now on, making it possible for them to go back into the business of producing breeding stock so that Iowa can produce more of her own feeders instead of depending upon breeding sections of the west and southwest.

Eighty-five to 90 per cent of the cattle that are fed for the market in Iowa's feed lots are brought from central markets. Most of them come from Omaha, Kansas City, and Sioux City, Ia. A few come from Chicago to eastern counties. This means that Iowans produce a small percentage of their feeders. Pure bred cattle breeders believe that a bigger percentage of the feeders will be produced in Iowa in future.

The views of Louis Kinzey, who lives six miles south of Cedar Rapids on the red ball highway, are typical of dozens of other practical farmers talked with in various sections. He says the slump in the prices of grain crops and beef cattle, particularly beef animals a few years ago, caused Iowa farmers to look around for another source of revenue.

Hopeful About Future.

"I've been milking five or six cows for the last year or two, a thing I had never done before," said Mr. Kinsey. "I found I could get a good price for cream. I make more by selling the cream than by allowing the calves to take all the milk. I can't get rid of my pure bred shorthorn heifer and bull calves at a decent price when I try to sell them as breeding stock. I do well to get beef prices. In fact, I can sell the male calves as steers for more than I can get for them as bulls. I sold a dandy pure bred shorthorn bull recently at 5 cents a pound, beef market price.

"However, I believe pure bred beef cattle are coming back and I'll sell the male calves as steers from now on and keep the good heifer calves. I'll be ready when the raising of pure breds gets back on a paying basis.

"You'll think I'm fussing about the prices we are paid for the things we have to sell, but I'm not. I have seen farm prices lower than they are now and I made some money, too. The trouble is I have to pay about twice as much for lumber, implements, hardware, and other things, but the prices we get are not double. Here's an example: Ten years ago when I was getting $7 to $7.25 a hundred for my hogs I paid $60 for a manure spreader. Today a similar spreader will cost $155 and I got only $6.90 a hundred for the last batch of hogs I sold.

"Buying high priced land, tractors, trucks, and automobiles has put a lot of our farmers in bad shape," added Mr. Kinsey. "I'm not knocking the tractors, trucks, and automobiles—we need all of them—and I own a truck and automobile, but too many farmers are not buying intelligently. They buy them whether they need them or not. I don't believe a farmer should buy any of these things unless he has cash to pay for them."

Dealers Ask Cash.

Implement dealers throughout the state are trying to run a cash business this year. Despite the fact that this has naturally forced many farmers to repair their old plows and planters. A. A. Happel, a Cedar Rapids implement dealer, says his sales have increase 100 per cent over last year, and at least 90 per cent of his customers have paid cash. Many others, however, claim they are having difficulty trying to do business with farmers on a cash basis, especially in the repair department. The implement dealers' cash customers are usually the farmers who are selling milk and cream.

Iowa is planting an increased acreage of corn. Early reports showed the increase would be 3 or 4 per cent over last year. It is probable that with the favorable weather for plowing and planting the increase will be even greater than this.

Literally thousands of acres of sod have been plowed up for corn along the highway that goes through De Witt, Mount Vernon, Cedar Rapids, Belle Plaine, Tama, Marshalltown, and Nevada west to Ames. When corn was down to 35 and 40 cents a bushel a few years ago much of the land in this section was put in grass, and now with corn prices climbing higher—around 70 cents elevator price last week—the grass land is being put back in corn.

Substitute for Oats.

A million acres of soy beans will be grown in Iowa this year as a substitute for oats in the live stock rations. The acreage would perhaps be even greater than this if farmers could get seed. The limited supply of seed has put the price of beans up to $3 and $4 a bushel. The soy bean is grown here in this state chiefly for hogging down with corn and for silage.

Despite the fact that the assessors' early reports indicated that from 15 to 20 per cent fewer sows were bred for spring farrowing, Iowa has a comparatively big crop of pigs coming on to take care of the bumper crop of corn and other grains. While there are no definite figures on the size of the spring crop of porkers, farmers say their losses this year have been much less than last because the weather was much more favorable at farrowing time in March.

Herman Bucholz, who lives near Tripoli, believes he holds the record with his litter of nineteen Duroc-Jersey pigs.

Improve Farm Flocks.

Reports of the demands farmers are making on the big hatcheries for high grade baby chicks indicates the tendency to increase and improve farm flocks. Out here at Clarion a big lumber yard is being used for a hatchery. A batch of more than 2,700 eggs has already hatched and more are in the incubators.

The gradual development of smaller farms is becoming the tendency in many parts of Iowa. The one man farms of eighty acres are making it possible for tall corn growers to dodge farm labor problems and high wages.

In Des Moines a movement is on foot to send out high school boys after the first of June to help farmers. Arrangements are being made to place the boys, and no wages are specified in the agreement. It will be left with the farmer to decide how much the boy earns besides his board and room.

Iowa land is still a good investment, E. L. Johnson, who lives at Waterloo and is a director of the federal bank, told a group of bankers at Creston the other day, but "we must get back to the old idea," he said. "The pioneers who settled this state secured their farms for the purpose of raising crops and a family. Nowadays it seems the modern idea of buying a farm is to raise the price."

DOWN ON THE FARM

TWIN GARDENERS—Raising $500 worth of vegetables in a tiny city garden won a trip to Washington for John and Charles Knier of Elmira, N. Y. The twin brothers, 14 years old, are of a family of eleven children. They called on the President and had a world of fun telling amateur gardeners at various points between Elmira and Washington how they raised $1,400 worth of vegetables in four years at a cost of $56.40.

Editor Scouts Hard Time Tales About Northwest

AGRICULTURAL interests are beginning to resent the stories of the farmer's being broke. Evidence of this was shown recently by Charles F. Collisson, agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, in a straight from the shoulder talk broadcast by the Tribune-Zenith radio station. He said that nearly every speaker on agriculture that he had reported lately felt it necessary to tell how many millions of farmers are deserting their farms. They tell how many are going to die of want and starvation, unless the speaker or his candidate is elected something or other.

"All of this gloom is getting tiresome," Mr. Collisson said. "This talk is doing the northwest a lot of harm, down east. In Washington recently everybody was asking us from Minnesota, 'Is it true that the middle west is broke?'"

Cow the Answer.

Wheat farmers have suffered a heavy blow in the northwestern states, but Mr. Collisson showed that there are many other valuable products on the farms up there besides wheat, and that all of the farmers in that section must not be judged by the unfortunate situation the grain farmers—the one crop farmers—happen to be in.

"There are vast regions of the northwest where we do not hear any complaints about hard times, or frozen credits," he said. "Our agriculture in the northwest is not headed wrong. Rather it is advancing rapidly, in the right direction. We are on the right path, the cow path, and we have only to follow it, more closely and more rapidly, in order to win out. Wherever we find a community where the cow paths are numerous, there we find real prosperity today.

Hard-Up Tale Absurd.

"In Minnesota, several of our dairying counties had to borrow no money at all. They make from half a million to two million dollars' worth of butter a year, in the farmers' coöperative creameries. Their banks are full of farmers' deposits, and cash reserves are ample.

"Minnesota has twenty-nine counties which produce more than a million dollars' worth apiece, and six of them produce more than two million. In these counties it is absurd to say that farmers are hard up.

"They have hundreds of their own coöperative cheese and butter factories, around the bend of nearly every road, in central and southern Minnesota and Wisconsin.

"And don't forget that Wisconsin's annual production is more than $200,000,000 and has not had a bank failure, due to conditions in the last six years."

ROLLIN

The Year's Most Distinctive Automobile

A really distinguished car—swagger body designs—far removed from the commonplace.

And what a wealth of mechanical refinements! No need to worry about this car becoming obsolete—it is years ahead of the times.

Its European type motor is the successful adaptation of the fundamentally correct, scientific principles, of high speed, high compression and small piston displacement. Crankshaft is held rigidly against whip and vibration in four sturdy bearings.

Balloon tires and 4-wheel brakes—without which no modern car is complete. A special design transverse rear spring—an expensive feature but well worth its cost.

Distinctive appearance and the last word in mechanical progress, at such a reasonable price!

Touring Car, $995; Three Seated Coupe Roadster, $1195; Five Passenger Sedan, $1295
Prices f. o. b. Cleveland. Tax extra

The introduction of the Rollin makes it possible for you to now own a distinctive car possessing the most advanced engineering features without paying an extravagant price.

Why it's True Blue

THE Oakland Six is true blue because it was designed with one very definite purpose in mind—to make it the finest light six in its class. Take Oakland closed cars for example. Here are real automobiles. They are true blue because their distinctive Fisher-built bodies are real closed-car bodies—with no makeshifts nor compromises entering into their construction or appointments, inside or out.

Oakland's Six-Cylinder Smoothness Means Greater Closed-Car Comfort

The Oakland engine is true blue because in it the many natural advantages of a "Six" have been developed to a degree that will delight you.

There is quietness at all speeds and a freedom from annoying vibration which, you will agree, is essential to complete closed-car satisfaction; there is extreme flexibility which makes gear changing rarely necessary; there is a surprising ability to respond to unusual demands quickly and without fuss—all of which qualities you will surely seek in selecting your next closed car.

Then there are four-wheel brakes (you certainly should not buy a car without this proved essential); exclusive centralized controls on the steering wheel; a special body finish which retains its lustre indefinitely, and a dozen other features.

Isn't it true that the problem of choosing the right car—closed or open—is merely a matter of getting the most and the best for your money? Examine the True Blue Oakland Six. Ride in it. Drive it yourself. We welcome frank comparisons.

CONGRESS MAKES TRADERS UNEASY —GRAINS LOWER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weakness in the stock and cotton markets in New York, disappointment over the tax bill in congress and a lack of aggressive buying resulted in a break and lower close in grains.

The finish was at the bottom with net losses of ⅞@1c on wheat, ⅝@1⅛c on corn, and ¼@⅜c on oats. Rye was unchanged to ⅛c higher.

Grain markets in the last week were decidedly unsettled, with May wheat and corn showing relatively more strength than did the deferred deliveries. Wheat was ⅛c higher to ⅞c lower at the last as compared with the finish of the previous week with corn off 1@2⅝c, while oats were ⅝c higher to ¼c lower and rye ⅝c lower. Lard finished 7½@12½c, ribs 2½@12½c and bellies 15@22c lower than a week ago.

Wheat Bulls Less Confident.

There was considerable change in sentiment noted during the day, the continued efforts of congress to pass what many traders call "destructive legislation," having considerable influence in shaking confidence of believers in higher prices. However, trade is not large and the market is easily influenced at times.

Winnipeg May showed relative strength and closed only ¼c lower. Liverpool was ⅛d higher at the last in the face of an advance in exchange. Foreign crop reports were less favorable, but the export demand was slow with sales estimated at 200,000 bu Manitobas. Charters have been made to load 800,000 to 1,000,000 bu wheat here for shipment to the eastt. Crop reports from the southwest remain favorable, although frost is predicted for parts of the belt, and heavy to killing frost occurred in southwestern Kansas. May finished at $1.03⅝; July at $1.05⅛ to 1.05⅝, and September at $1.06⅛ to 1.06⅝.

Heavy Undertone in Corn.

Corn showed a heavy undertone a good part of the day, the feature being the buying of May and selling of July, which put the May to a fractional premium over the July. May finished at 76¼c to 76⅝c and July at 76⅝c to 76½c, with September at 76c to 75⅞c. With May at a premium bulls believe that the break has run its course. Wet and cold weather has checked planting in parts of the west and complaints of seed rotting in the ground came from sections of Iowa. Cash basis here was easier with receipts 113 cars. Eastern demand was slightly better with sales of 85,000 bu.

Trade in oats was light, and after cereal interests had bought a little May early the market turned easy and finished about the bottom. May was 46⅞c at the last. Receipts, 92 cars. Eastern demand was fair with sales of 110,000 bu.

Rye Closes Firm.

Rye showed independent strength with a somewhat better class of commission house buying. Export demand, however, remains slow.

Provisions were dull and easier with lard unchanged to 2½c lower, ribs 2½@5c lower and bellies off 2½@7½c at the last. Deliveries on May contracts were 50,000 lbs ribs. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the summer season to date is 1,539,000, against 1,705,000 last year. Prices follow:

PRIMARY ARRIVALS

Primary arrivals of grains last week were 12,679,000 bu, against 12,479,000 bu the previous week and 10,176,000 bu last year. They were 2.5 per cent over the five year average. Wheat receipts increased for the week, mainly in the movement from other markets to Chicago, and the runs of wheat, corn and oats were above last year's.

Chicago received 3,088,000 bu of grains last week, or 87,000 bu less than the previous week, and 665,000 bu more than last year, but showed 495,000 bu below the five year average. Wheat arrivals were larger than the previous week and last year's, and corn was 423,000 bu above last year's.

HAY TRADING FAIR

Business in hay was moderate, with prices unchanged and arrivals of timothy 18 cars, but no prairie. Of straw there were 2 cars rye, 1 car oat, and 1 car wheat, with demand good and prices $1.00 higher. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Export demand for grain at the seaboard was relatively slow, with sales of 200,000 bu Manitoba wheat reported.

Chicago handlers sold 53,000 bu wheat, 85,000 bu corn, and 110,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 60,000 bu corn sold to go to store. Charters were made for 800,000 to 1,000,000 bu wheat at 2c and 300,000 bu corn at 1¼c to Buffalo. Deliveries on May contracts aggregated 217,000 bu wheat, 215,000 bu corn, 109,000 bu oats, and 20,000 bu rye.

Milling demand for cash wheat is rather light in all markets. The basis here was unchanged at 2@8c over May for No. 2 hard. Receipts, 24 cars. St. Louis was unchanged and Kansas City and Omaha unchanged to 1c lower.

Cash corn prices here were unchanged to 1c lower, with the basis easier at 1c over May for No. 2 mixed, while yellow was 2c over and white 1⅝c over. No. 3 mixed was ¼c under to ¼c over; yellow, ¼c under to 1⅝c over, and white ⅝c over, with No. 4 grades 2½c under the May. Receipts, 113 cars.

Outside markets were unsettled, 1½c higher to 1c lower, with Peoria showing the most strength.

A slightly easier undertone prevailed in cash oats, with prices unchanged to ½c lower. No. 2 white was 2@2½c over and No. 3 white 1@1½c over May. Receipts, 92 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

There was less confidence among holders of grain at the close due to the numerous depressing influences, traders laying special stress on the break in stocks and the decline in the unfilled steel tonnage which was said to be greatly in excess of expectations. It confirmed reports that general business is slipping and induced general unloading, creating an impression that unless there is better buying support prices may work irregularly lower.

Corn traders said that the heavy selling of September by commission houses and local professionals led by Bennett & Kidston was the feature at the close, widening the discount under July to ⅝c. Most of the professionals have been bearish on September corn for some time past.

There is said to be around 1,500,000 bu and possibly more of the corn at Duluth unsold. The week's shipments from there were 978,000 bu and the receipts only 87,000 bu, so there should be a big reduction in stocks. It is said that sales of No. 3 mixed corn there on Friday was 1c over Chicago July c. i. f. Buffalo, which was equal to 2½c under the price at Chicago.

Indications are for a moderate reduction in the visible supply of wheat and possibly of other grains for the week. Wheat stocks next week should show a heavy reduction at Chicago, as around 1,000,000 bu are under charter to be moved out for eastern mills.

Parts of Kansas and Nebraska have had frost the last few days, but there are no complaints of damage so far.

"It now appears that if there is to be any upward tendency of prominence in wheat it must come from unfavorable crop conditions," says Thomson & McKinnon. "Given clearing and warmer weather which will permit finishing spring work, there will probably be an increased movement of corn to market, and even now, receipts of primary corn are considerably larger than last year."

FINANCIAL NOTES

Recessions of 2 to 2½ points took place yesterday in a variety of the oil shares, including Pacific, Cosden, Marland, Houston, Skelly, and Phillips. New low prices for the year were established by Standard of New Jersey at 33⅛, Marland at 30¼, Texas company at 39¼, Skelly at 20, Cosden at 29, and Pure Oil at 20¼.

United States Steel common broke 1⅝, closing with a net loss of 1⅛ points. Its decline brought similar recessions in American Can, Studebaker, Baldwin, and other market leaders.

Marked heaviness also developed in motor and accessory shares, equipments, and specialties. General Electric broke 4 points; Davison Chemical dropped back 3, and American Beet Sugar preferred 3⅝. Pierce-Arrow preferred and General Refractories dipped to the year's lowest levels. Congoleum, Dupont, American Wool, and United States Industrial Alcohol yielded readily to selling pressure.

Reports of a contemplated extra dividend by Atlantic Coast Line stimulated active buying of this stock, which was an outstanding exception to the general market trend. An advance of 4 points carried it to a new high price for the year at 126. The American Power and Light company declared a 2 per cent stock dividend on the common.

The accumulation of news events which brought about a general decline in the stock market failed to exert much influence on bond prices. Activity was a feature of the abbreviated market session, and prices for the highest grade securities again were firm. The semi-speculative group, which normally would be influenced by sudden movements in one direction or another in the stock market, showed some irregularity.

The striking thing about the week in cotton was this market's demonstration of independence of the security markets. The volume of trading in cotton on Friday in all three markets was the largest in weeks, and in distinct contrast to the smallest volume of sales this year on the stock exchange. This fact was attributed to factors that never have anything particularly to do with the trend of security values or the volume of sales in the latter.

The weekly New York clearing house bank statement showed a mixture of increases and decreases in the principal items. Loans, discounts, and investments decreased $53,401,000. Net demand deposits declined $30,751,000, while time deposits were $16,341,000 larger. Aggregate reserve totaled $562,104,000, leaving an excess reserve of $35,315,390, an increase of $18,300,370 over a week ago.

Stockholders of the Grand Rapids Railway company will meet on May 12 to authorize a first mortgage or deed of trust to the American Exchange National bank of New York which will secure an issue of $5,000,000 sinking fund gold bonds.

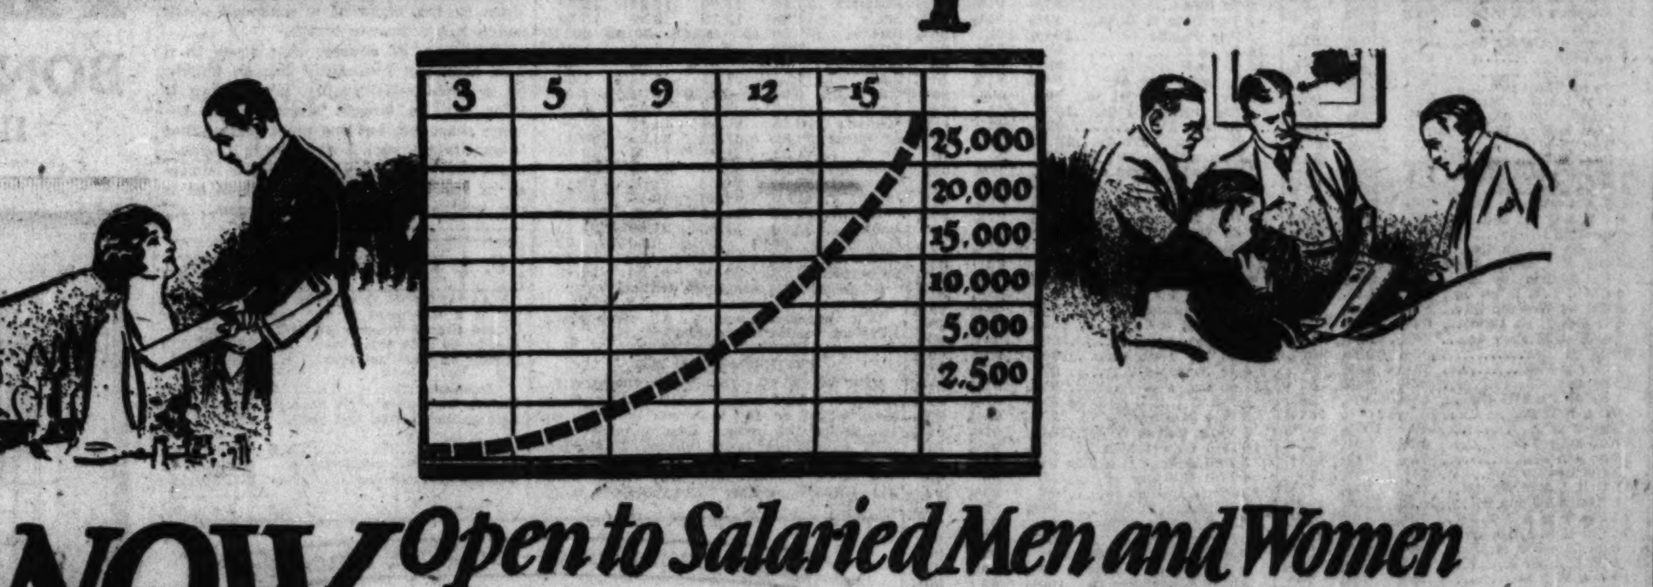
The Quickest Safe Way to Become Independent



NOW Open to Salaried Men and Women as well as Investors of Means!

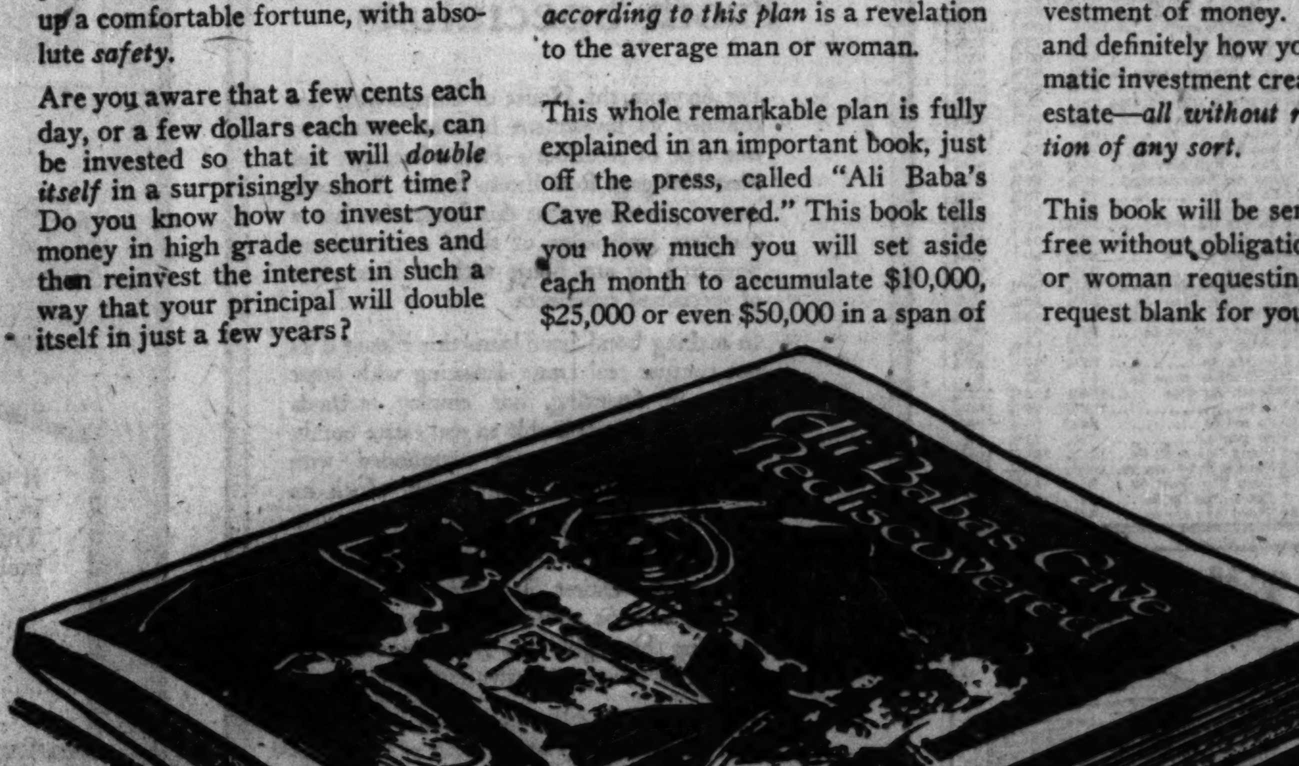
THERE is now a way for any man or woman to become independent quickly and easily—to build up a comfortable fortune, with absolute safety.

Are you aware that a few cents each day, or a few dollars each week, can be invested so that it will double itself in a surprisingly short time? Do you know how to invest your money in high grade securities and then reinvest the interest in such a way that your principal will double itself in just a few years?

Few people realize the magic power of compound interest. The amazing way money grows when invested according to this plan is a revelation to the average man or woman.

This whole remarkable plan is fully explained in an important book, just off the press, called "Ali Baba's Cave Rediscovered." This book tells you how much you will set aside each month to accumulate $10,000, $25,000 or even $50,000 in a span of years. It outlines for you the most successful plan ever developed for the scientific accumulation and investment of money. It tells clearly and definitely how you can by systematic investment create a good sized estate—all without risk or speculation of any sort.

This book will be sent postpaid and free without obligation to every man or woman requesting it. Mail the request blank for your copy at once.



This book will show you the way to build up for yourself a comfortable, substantial estate. Send for it today.

FREE!
The plan outlined in this book is not fancy or conjecture; it is written from the experience of 39 years, during which time we have seen any number of canny men and women build up comfortable fortunes using these very methods. In all these 39 years not a single investor has ever lost a penny on any investment purchased from us.

TRADE, POLITICS, RESOLUTIONS ON JAP EXCLUSION

BY SCRUTATOR.

Adoption by the chamber of commerce of the United States of a resolution on the Japanese exclusion issue brings up the question of whether business and industrial bodies would not make their work more effective if they limited more strictly the scope of their activities.

By scattering their fire and going into too many collateral issues, they are apt to lose prestige.

If there is to be force behind the demand for less government in business, it would seem that less business in government must be a corrolary.

Genuinely representative bodies like the chamber also run the risk of becoming confused in the public mind with the multitude of fake and dummy organizations when they take "jurisdiction" of issues somewhat removed from their primary concern.

It was pointed out here some time ago that tax reforms desired by business were not made more certain of achievement by hitching the bonus issue on to the pleas for reduction.

Neither politicians nor people now pay much attention to resolutions and petitions on general questions of a controversial nature.

Supply and demand is the reason. The supply of resolutions and programs have cheapened them. For some years the business of organizing bodies with high sounding titles, impliedly claiming to represent millions who are unaware of such representation, has become a regular trade and the output of resolutions has become a machine industry.

Who has forgot the hundreds of thousands of resolutions for the league of nations gathered by the army of "scouts" who attended every convention?

If foreign trade is supposed to be bound up with the exclusion issue, of course, the subject is germane in a business gathering. But every summary of Asiatic trade shows that the United States is gaining by leaps and bounds, although every section of the far east is within the "barred zone" except Japan—the one nation more economically dependent on us than any other in Asia. There also is a grave doubt whether the foreign trade of the United States will be aided by a lowering of prestige.

We have heard a great deal of late about the necessity of cultivating love and good will abroad, but little about enforcing respect.

Our government spent some millions during the war on foreign propaganda which pictured Uncle Sam as Santa Claus with a huge grab bag for all nations. It is yet to be shown that we have gained a penny's worth of business by that. On the contrary, we seem to have reaped an abundant crop of hatred, because disappointment was inevitable when we failed to measure up to the picture we had drawn of ourselves.

Successful nations, like successful men, are bound to be hated and envied.

We must expect it, but we will lose little business by it. Americans are accustomed to be told that they are narrow minded and prejudiced against other peoples. As a matter of fact, we have a minimum of such feeling, while many nations reek with inherited grudges against all northern Europeans and are frequently reproached by their wise men for indulging in such dislikes.

COTTON PRICES DROP

NEW YORK, May 10.—COTTON—Weaker cables with selling by the previous day's buyers combined with selling on the weak stock market and decrease in steel tonnage, carried prices down. The close was at nearly the lowest, with net losses of 27 to 40 points on the most active deliveries. A large short line was covered in May yesterday. Trading in May was at 220 points over July, the widest so far. Fairly large exports are expected next week. Crop reports were more favorable. Prices follow:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Prev. close.	Last year.
July	29.06	28.75	28.77	29.17	24.10

March	3.54	3.52	3.54	3.54

Refined was quiet and unchanged at 7.40@7.50c for fine granulated. Refined futures, nominal.

DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Cotton goods were steadier at the week-end. Buyers continued to show more interest in gray cloths, with mills reluctant sellers at current prices. Curtailment continued to increase. Yarns were firmer, but the demand showed little change. A large rug auction opens Monday at which $5,000,000 worth of merchandise will be offered. Wool goods showed little change. Raw silk was slightly firmer. Silks were in moderate demand. Burlaps were firmer.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Underlying conditions in steel have been very unsettled during the week and further drastic curtailments of production have been made to conform with the very slow demand. Copper quiet. Recent offerings below 13⅛ cents for electrolytic delivered appear to have been absorbed. Lead easy, following weakness abroad. Tin unsettled by the fluctuations in sterling. Zinc heavy.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Weak at $7.00 slab; ZINC—Dull at $5.90.

Stock in New Company Is Speculation.

We receive many letters asking us if stock in such and such a corporation, which is just being organized, is a "safe and sound" investment. To these we invariably reply—after giving whatever pertinent data is available—that stock in a new corporation is bound to be a speculation and that it represents participation in a new business venture.

This statement does not imply that the stock may not become valuable in time. It means that no one knows whether or not it will. Every corporation goes through this stage. Some of them become successful and some do not. United States Steel corporation stock was a speculation in its early days. Ford Motor stock was of very doubtful value. In the early days no one could foresee that they were destined for the success which is theirs today.

On the other hand, there are thousands of corporations which never attain the degree of success which makes their stocks valuable. A great many never get beyond the promotion or organization stage, and money invested in them on the strength of bright prospects becomes a total loss.

Some companies start out with a meritorious product and many apparent reasons for success—and then fail. Failure may be due to one or more of a number of causes, such as incompetent or dishonest management, inadequate distribution facilities, improper sales methods, lack of demand for the product and inability to create a demand, too great a distance from the natural market, excessive cost of production or marketing, lack of sufficient working capital, business depression which curtails buying, too much competition, etc., etc.

All or any of these things, and a great many others, may stand in the way of the success of a new company. Stock salesmen frequently point to the big, successful corporations and call attention to the fact that they, too, had their humble beginnings. They draw the parallel with their own company and convince prospective investors that a like success awaits them. They make no mention, however, of the vastly larger number of corporations that have failed and brought loss to the investors.

After a company has passed successfully through the organization stage and has a number of years of successful operation and steadily increasing earnings to its credit it has demonstrated that it can succeed and one may be justified in the inference that it is likely to continue to do so. Each successive year that it proves its earning ability gives the company greater strength and its stock gradually passes from the purely speculative class to the class of a seasoned stock which has a proven worth.

It is true, of course, that stock in a new company frequently can be bought at a price considerably lower than it later can be bought when it has become seasoned, but one must realize that in purchasing such a stock he is purchasing a chance of success or failure, whereas in purchasing a seasoned stock he is purchasing a demonstrated success.

How We Are Helping Women

THE modern woman is independent enough to adopt a policy of personal investigation in the vital affairs of her life, to get her information from those qualified to give it and to make up her own mind in money matters.

Hundreds of women date their financial emancipation from the day they learned of our service, particularly our Department for Women. Here they found, as you will today, an organization of women experienced in handling the problems of women.

How can we help you? First, by talking over your investments with you and giving you the benefit of our many years of experience with money affairs not one bit different from yours—by helping you get rid of securities that can never be anything but a source of worry and trouble to you—by showing you how you can increase your income without investing an extra dollar.

We want you—we invite you—to come to us with these matters. Often it takes a woman's intuition and sympathy to give a woman the aid and advice she needs to relieve her of worry and put her finances on a better footing. You will find these here.

Our service is as free as it is friendly, yet perhaps you hesitate to come in and say you need investment advice. If so, let us become acquainted by sending you the splendid little investment stories, "Heartaches and Happiness," written especially for women. These and other literature will be sent without obligation if you will simply mail this coupon.

Greenebaum Bonds—100% Safe Since 1855

It Pays to Buy Your Real Estate Bonds From Specialists

For 69 years, the House of Greenebaum has confined its investment business entirely to one type of securities—First Mortgages and First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. It is only natural, therefore, that this Institution has a complete knowledge of these securities not possessed by any house without these years of specialized experience.

In making bond issue loans this House does not confuse real estate financing with other forms of financing, nor employ methods which are not applicable to real estate bonds. Greenebaum Bonds are surrounded with protective measures of their own, which no other investments possess.

A record of 69 Years' Proven Safety shows that, as the Oldest First Mortgage Banking House, we have served our customers best by knowing thoroughly one type of investment—and confining our activities to these.

Our Booklet, "The Oldest Banking House in Chicago," gives the whole history of the House of Greenebaum. Call or write for Booklet No. I-511

The New York Times.

New York, May 10.—[Special.]—Today's stock market showed substantial increase of activity. In the two hours of trading, total transactions almost equaled Friday's five hour achievement.

But the kind of influence which dominates the present market, and the kind of news which most impresses it, were illustrated both in the increased activity and in the fall of prices for numerous industrial shares. The governing influence was the early announcement of a reduction in prices for crude oil. This news appealed unpleasantly to speculators for the rise in the various oil stocks; more particularly because of recent assurances of a contrary movement.

Steel Report Follows Oil Cut.

The early selling of stocks in general was explainable on the familiar ground that unsettlement in one group on a highly speculative market will affect the other groups. But a rise or fall in oil prices has probably as little real bearing on the financial situation generally as a change in the value of any commodity could have.

Before the close, the markets had a statement of more importance to consider. The United States Steel corporation's monthly "unfilled orders" statement had been expected to show a substantial decrease during April, but the figures as published were larger than the estimates. The reduction of 574,360 tons in orders is larger than any monthly shrinkage of last year, and is not matched since the series of monthly declines at the end of 1920 and the beginning of 1921.

Production Exceeded Consumption.

This is an interesting showing, yet it cannot be said to cast any new light on the situation. Production of steel at the beginning of April was on the largest scale in this country's history, but consumption, large as it was, had not expanded in any such degree. The necessary result was that shipments against orders were speeded up to prevent accumulation at the mills. It is evidently these shipments, greatly exceeding the new orders received, which have caused so great a decline in the showing of the order books.

The stock market reacted to the news with a sharp decline in prices, the net losses being larger than have been reported in some time. Declines of 1 to 2 points or more were numerous, while in the Standard Oil issues dropped back from 2 to 9 points.

Cut in Oil Is a Surprise.

The reductions announced in the price of midcontinent and Pennsylvania crude oil by two prominent factors came as a complete surprise to the financial district, and this was evidenced by the heavy selling and sharp decline in the petroleum stocks. Heretofore most of the talk had been that there would be an advance in midcontinent followed by a rise in California. The Magnolia Petroleum, a Standard Oil unit, cut prices in midcontinent from 5 to 25 cents a barrel, while nine grades of Pennsylvania crude oil were cut 25 cents a barrel. The slow movement of oil due to a belated spring is chiefly responsible for the cut.

The week ended quietly in foreign exchange, with rates a fraction higher. It was to be observed that the franc ruled throughout the day at a hardly perceptible distance from the 6 cent price.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The close of last week showed numerous price losses in the local unlisted security market. Butler Brothers was fairly active, declining from 31¾ to a close of 30¾ bid, 30½ asked. By-Product Coke sold at 37 and 38, but was later offered at 36, with odd lot buyers at 35. Northwestern Yeast was offered down 2 points to 183, with little interest on the buying side. Interstate Iron and Steel preferred broke 2½ points at 54½ bid, 56 asked. Sullivan Machinery was also a point lower at 58½ bid, 60 asked. Brunswick-Balke-Collender was neglected and unchanged, closing 97 bid, 100 asked, ex-dividend $2.00.

Great Lakes Transit was erratic, breaking from 39 to 36, and later rallying to a close of 37½ bid, 39 asked. Fairbanks Morse common was in moderate supply, declining an additional point to 25 bid, 25½ asked. Elgin National Watch was quoted 45 bid, 46 asked throughout, with little stock changing hands. Creamery Package issues were weak, the full voting shares being off 1 point at 29½ bid, 30 asked, while the non-voting stock was equally lower at 27 bid, 28½ asked. Some few transactions in Kellogg company were reported at 19¾ and 20¼. Albert Pick preferred yielded an additional point at 89 bid, 90 asked.

Bucyrus common was an exception to the general trend, advancing some 4 points to 59 bid, 61 asked. Chicago Railway Equipment was fractionally easier at 25 bid, 26 asked, while the common sold at 44½ to 45½. H. O. Stone common was again wanted at 17, with no stock offered for sale. Western Grocer was under pressure, closing at 86 bid, 88 asked—off 2 points. Goodman Manufacturing was quoted 50 bid, 52 asked, with no reported sales. Palmolive company common sold at 82@84, but was later offered at 83, with 79 the best bid showing. The close of 59 bid, 60 asked, on Beatrice Creamery common represented a loss of approximately 2½ points. Standard Cap and Seal was generally wanted at 24½, with limited offerings at 25½. National Grocer preferred sold at 85.

Trading in the motor and accessory shares was on a limited scale, with little change in quoted values. Sales of Ford of Canada ranged between 445 and 450. Paige-Detroit closed unchanged at 13⅜ bid, 13⅝ asked. Motor Wheel yielded fractionally to 9 bid, 9¼ asked, while Timken Axle closed at 5⅛ bid, 5⅜ asked. Motor Products was weak, breaking 1½ points to 65 bid, 66 asked. Some few transactions in Edmund Jones were reported at 33 and 35. Stearns Motor yielded a point at 12½ bid, 13 asked.

Sugar shares were quiet, but inclined toward lower price levels. Holland-St. Louis was off a minor fraction at 3⅝ bid, 4⅛ asked. Columbia was unchanged at 6½ bid, 7 asked, despite the resumption of a 1 per cent quarterly dividend. Sales in Michigan ranged between 5¼ and 5⅝. Utah-Idaho was quoted 3⅝ bid, 4 asked, with little stock actually changing hands. Godchaux preferred was offered at 37, with little interest on the buying side.

Public utilities were generally steady, but substantial gains were made in a number of issues. American Power and Light common rose from 237 to high sales at 257, but later reacted to a close of 252 bid, 255 asked. National Power and Light was some 16 points higher at 126 bid, 129 asked. Tennessee Electric Power second preferred was in demand, advancing from 61 to 64½. This gain was partially relinquished later, closing at 63 bid, 63¾ asked. Offerings of Electric Railway Securities found ready sale between 14 and 16. Stock was wanted at the close at 15¾, with odd lot offerings at 16¼. On few sales American Public Utilities preferred improved some 6 points to 51 bid. Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light preferred ranged between 74½ and 75½.

With week-end hog offerings comparatively liberal and shipping orders indifferent, prices slipped back to a level with a week ago.

The market practically was in the hands of large local operators throughout the session, weakening as the day advanced, and closing largely 15@20c below high point Friday, with spots off 25c comparing extremes of the two days. Outsiders took less than a fifth of the number on sale.

Medium and weighty butcher hogs suffered the sharpest declines, best at the close selling slowly at $7.50, against $7.60 earlier in the day, and $7.70 Friday. Choice light topped early at $7.50, but moved slowly later at $7.40. Prevailing rates are generally steady with last Monday, and stand 5@10c below previous Saturday, the day's average at $7.40, being 15c below Friday, the high day of last week.

Hog Receipts Large.

Hog receipts last week at 169,300 were largest since week ending March 29, being 17,700 larger than previous week, 4,200 smaller than a year ago, and 30,200 above the ten year average. Shipments from Chicago at 40,100 were second smallest since last November. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 234 lbs was 1 lb lighter than previous week, 1 lb lighter than a year ago, and 1 lb under the ten year average. Hog prices last week averaged $7.45, within 5c of the highest since last October, being 15c above previous week, 25c below a year ago, and $4.75 under the ten year average.

Cattle receipts last week at 60,300 were as large as any week since last January and more than 20 per cent greater than previous week's supply, with good beef steers comprising most of the increase. Better quality raised the week's average price to $9.80, against $9.65 previous week, $9.20 a year ago and a ten year average of $10.75.

Choice Beef Cattle Firm.

Although choice beef cattle were more plentiful expanded eastern outlet held better grades on a firm basis, throughout the week, while in between kinds gradually declined, closing unevenly 25@40c below a week ago. Cattle shipments from Chicago last week were largest in two months at 19,500. Butcher cattle closed steady, after a 15@25c drop earlier in the week. Calves were $1.00@1.50 higher than a week ago.

Lamb Offerings Increase.

Liberal offerings of lambs, principally from Colorado, swelled last week's sheep receipts to about 77,000, the largest since January and considerably above normal for this season. However, while local receipts have increased 13,000 over previous week's total, leading outside western centers report a gradual falling off of supplies, which proved a strengthening influence on the local trade first three days of the week, when a new top of $17.35 was established.

After reaching the highest price level since 1920 last Wednesday, lamb market reacted Thursday and closed barely steady with a week ago, best at the close selling at $17.00. Shorn stock topped this week at $15.80, a new high for the year. Aged sheep were scarce and fully 50@75c above a week ago, but in a top heavy condition, late. Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 54,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against 17,742 cattle, 58,347 hogs, and 18,656 sheep a week ago, and 22,639 cattle, 45,804 hogs, and 2,871 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 58,000 cattle, 170,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep, against 55,114 cattle, 174,009 hogs, and 54,645 sheep a year ago.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Mills bill, which gives federal courts the power to compel parties in a commercial agreement to submit to and abide by arbitration, is expected to be made a special order of business in the house of representatives this week. The rules committee reported the measure favorably and said its passage would materially lessen the cost and delays of commercial litigation.

WORCESTER, Mass.—A wage reduction of 10 per cent becomes effective Monday at the Whittall Carpet mills, according to the announcement posted at the mills today. The company says it is merely canceling the 10 per cent increase given voluntarily a year ago and that the cut is made necessary by the drop in carpet prices. More than 1,500 workers are affected.

Chicago stocks followed the downward course of the New York market yesterday. The Yellow issues and Stewart-Warner bore the brunt of the selling. Yellow Manufacturing dropped to 45, a new low record, and closed at 45¼ for a net loss of 2 points. Yellow Cab declined a point to 40, or within a fraction of its recent low price. At 45 for Yellow Manufacturing and 40 for Yellow Cab there was evidence of support by the recently organized pool. Stewart-Warner also was under pressure, declining to 62, a new low record for this year, and closing at 62¼ for a net loss of 3¼. Bassick-Alemite declined 1⅝ on uncertainty as to maintenance of its present extra dividend.

We have an illustrated book telling about safety. Send for it today—no obligation.

American Bond & Mortgage Company, 127 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Sirs:

I just told a friend of mine, Mrs. ———, to write in or call you about investing some money she has on hand. If you will take as good care of her money as of mine I know she will be grateful to you and to me.

I am sending her to you because she is a widow with quite a small amount of funds, and she must have absolute safety and still a profitable return on her investment.

Thank you in advance for your courteous attention to her needs.

Sincerely yours,
E. P. K.

This is a copy of a letter, the original of which is on file at our offices—out of courtesy, name withheld.

"She must have Safety"

Among our tens of thousands of customers are a great many investors who have come to us through the personal recommendation of their friends. You need only to read the above letter to understand why we value these customers so highly and have such a deep feeling of responsibility in serving them.

To receive such a letter as this always gives us a thrill of pardonable pride. For truly, is there any individual or company in existence that does not enjoy the reward of honest effort?

Every dollar of principal and interest that has become due on First Mortgage Building Bonds sold by this Company has been paid in full to every investor.

We will be pleased to send you our new book, "Formula of Safety." Ask for Booklet C. T. 332.

Making Instinct Work for You Instead of Against You

How "back-seat driving" illustrates the advantages of the Reo dual foot control

ONE of the major reasons why Reo now outsells in Chicago all cars of the same average price or higher, is the Reo dual foot control.

For thirteen years it has been an outstanding factor in making "Once a Reo owner, always a Reo owner" a common saying all over the country.

No other car has it, or anything like it.

How it works

When someone else is driving and danger seems to threaten, your feet instinctively press down on the floor boards or—if you are in the back seat of a cab or some other short car—against the back of the front seat.

This forward and downward pressure of the feet is the result of certain physical forces and instincts.

It occurs just as much—perhaps more—when you are in the driver's seat as when you are in a back seat.

With the Reo dual control one foot is always in braking position because the service brake is on the left pedal. Your instinctive foot pressure therefore instantaneously sets the service brakes.

You don't have to work against instinct for a fraction of a second, consume another fraction in taking your foot off the gas, and still another in finding the brake pedal, before you are ready to begin stopping.

With the Reo dual control all these fractions of seconds are saved—and on a car going twenty-five miles an hour a half second means eighteen feet; even a fifth of a second means seven feet.

In emergencies

This explains why, even in ordinary driving, the Reo owner enjoys exceptional confidence and safety.

In addition, the Reo dual foot control gives him extraordinary resources for emergencies.

At such times, the instinctive reaction of the hands is to grip the steering wheel hard. They are reluctant to leave it and they ought to be. The steering wheel needs them.

In the ordinary car, however, the so-called emergency brakes require a hand to set them. To counteract that hand's instinctive grip on the wheel, to move it to the brake lever, to pull back on the lever—all these require so much time that few people use their emergency brakes in emergencies.

In Reo dual foot control the emergency brakes are on the pedal at the right—the one which on other cars controls the service brakes. The Reo emergency brakes can therefore be set in the same time as the service brakes on other cars.

If you want to stop hard and fast, shift your throttle foot to the brake pedal—while your other foot is jamming on the service brakes—and push down on both feet.

With the Reo dual control you can therefore set the service brakes in the time ordinarily required for just declutching.

In emergencies you can set the emergency brakes in the time required for the applying of the service brakes on other cars—and you can keep your hands on the steering wheel where they belong.

REO MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Lansing, Michigan

—and Balloon Tires

If you are one of those who have never really investigated the Reo dual control, giant intake valves, ground cylinders, and many other motor and chassis superiorities, come in and examine a Reo motor and a Reo chassis—and take a ride on genuine balloon tires.

The best and quickest way of finding out the many advantages of these new tires and the Reo dual control is to drive a Balloon-shod Reo.

We suggest that you telephone or call to indicate the time most convenient for you—and we will be glad to have you take out a balloon-tired Reo over the roughest and most difficult going that you can find in town or country.

What Reo Owners in Chicago say about the Reo Dual Foot Control

"Two days after taking delivery of my car, I had my first occasion to prove the effectiveness of the Reo Dual Foot Control. A Ford Coupe cut across Michigan Avenue, directly in front of me without warning and in direct violation of traffic regulations. Automatically I applied both brakes with the result that a collision was averted.

"I fully believe had I been driving a car with the commonly used hand emergency brake, a damaging collision would have occurred."—C. M. Rogers, 175 W. Jackson Boulevard.

"I am very much pleased with my Reo passenger car that I bought of you recently. I have had six cars, different makes, and when I thought about looking at a Reo I had a mental reservation to start with that I would not like your clutch and brake on one foot control. The rest of your car, after examining the chassis as I did, easily won me over, as I think you are giving great value and have a wonderfully made car.

"After driving my car now for ten days, I would very much dislike to go back to the method of clutch pedal and brake pedal separate. Your method has done away with shifting of the feet, and the emergency lever which was always in the way.

"The car is very easily handled and has the finest steering mechanism I have ever sat behind."—W. P. George, 37 South Clinton Street.

"I have just ordered my third Reo and I want to take this opportunity to express my enthusiasm. I believe that if other women knew how easy it is to drive a Reo, it would be difficult to sell them other makes of cars.

"A great deal of my driving is done in traffic. I have never stalled my engine, and the ease of steering the Reo makes both city and country driving a real delight. But I think possibly the most important thing to me, aside from the fact that I drove my last Reo 18,000 miles without any mechanical trouble of any kind, is the Dual Foot Control.

"This control makes it especially easy for the woman driver. When you are driving a Reo and it is necessary to stop quickly, you simply do the instinctive thing. It gives one a feeling of confidence."—Marie Kryl, 1900 South Spaulding Avenue.

"My Reo Brougham is the third Reo that I have had. The other two have given me perfect satisfaction; in fact, when I turned my last Reo in this Spring the same spark plugs were in the car that came with it when I bought it and had never been taken out but once.

"I like the Dual Foot Control very much. I think it makes it much easier to drive and easier to keep your car under control at all times, and I think from my experience you get a great deal more mileage with this clutch brake control than with the other form, as it gives you a chance to stop the car in such a way that it does not seem to wear the brakes out."—Dr. H. S. Warren, 5 South Wabash Avenue.

"The Dual Foot Control of the Reo is absolutely the most simple and easy acting control I ever had experience with. The double foot brake is most wonderful and positive in action."—C. M. Mickelberry, 801 West Forty-ninth Place.

"The Dual Foot Control of the Reo was one of the details that interested me most during the time I contemplated purchase of a new car.

"I very quickly realized its merit from a technical analysis, and my experience with it in service has convinced me of three very distinct advantages over other types. It permits of a very flexible and reliable control of the car in congested traffic, because it necessitates the use of only one foot for both clutch and brake, leaving the other free at all times for manipulation of the accelerator.

"I have also found that it has a very distinct advantage when one finds it necessary to come to a stop on an incline ahead because it permits of a very smooth engagement of the clutch and a uniform accelerator operation without any inconvenience or quick moves.

"It is without doubt one of the most flexible and convenient controls for the lady drivers who are inclined to kill their engine when coming to a sudden stop. My wife has expressed herself very favorably after having driven our Reo for a very short time.

"If there are any disadvantages in connection with the Dual Control of the Reo car I have not as yet in my driving experience discovered what they are."—Geo. E. Haas, 1334 North Kostner Avenue.

"The Dual Pedal Control is wonderful and I feel certain if more people knew the many advantages of it, they would demand it."—C. E. Ullrich, 8000 Stony Island Avenue.

"The Reo Dual Foot Control makes it practically impossible to step on the accelerator instead of the brake when making quick stops, a factor of importance in this day of crowded thoroughfares. Women especially appreciate the ease of operation of the clutch-brake over other types."—Henry J. Schluter, 2111 Grace Street.

AN AFRICAN ANIMAL TALE

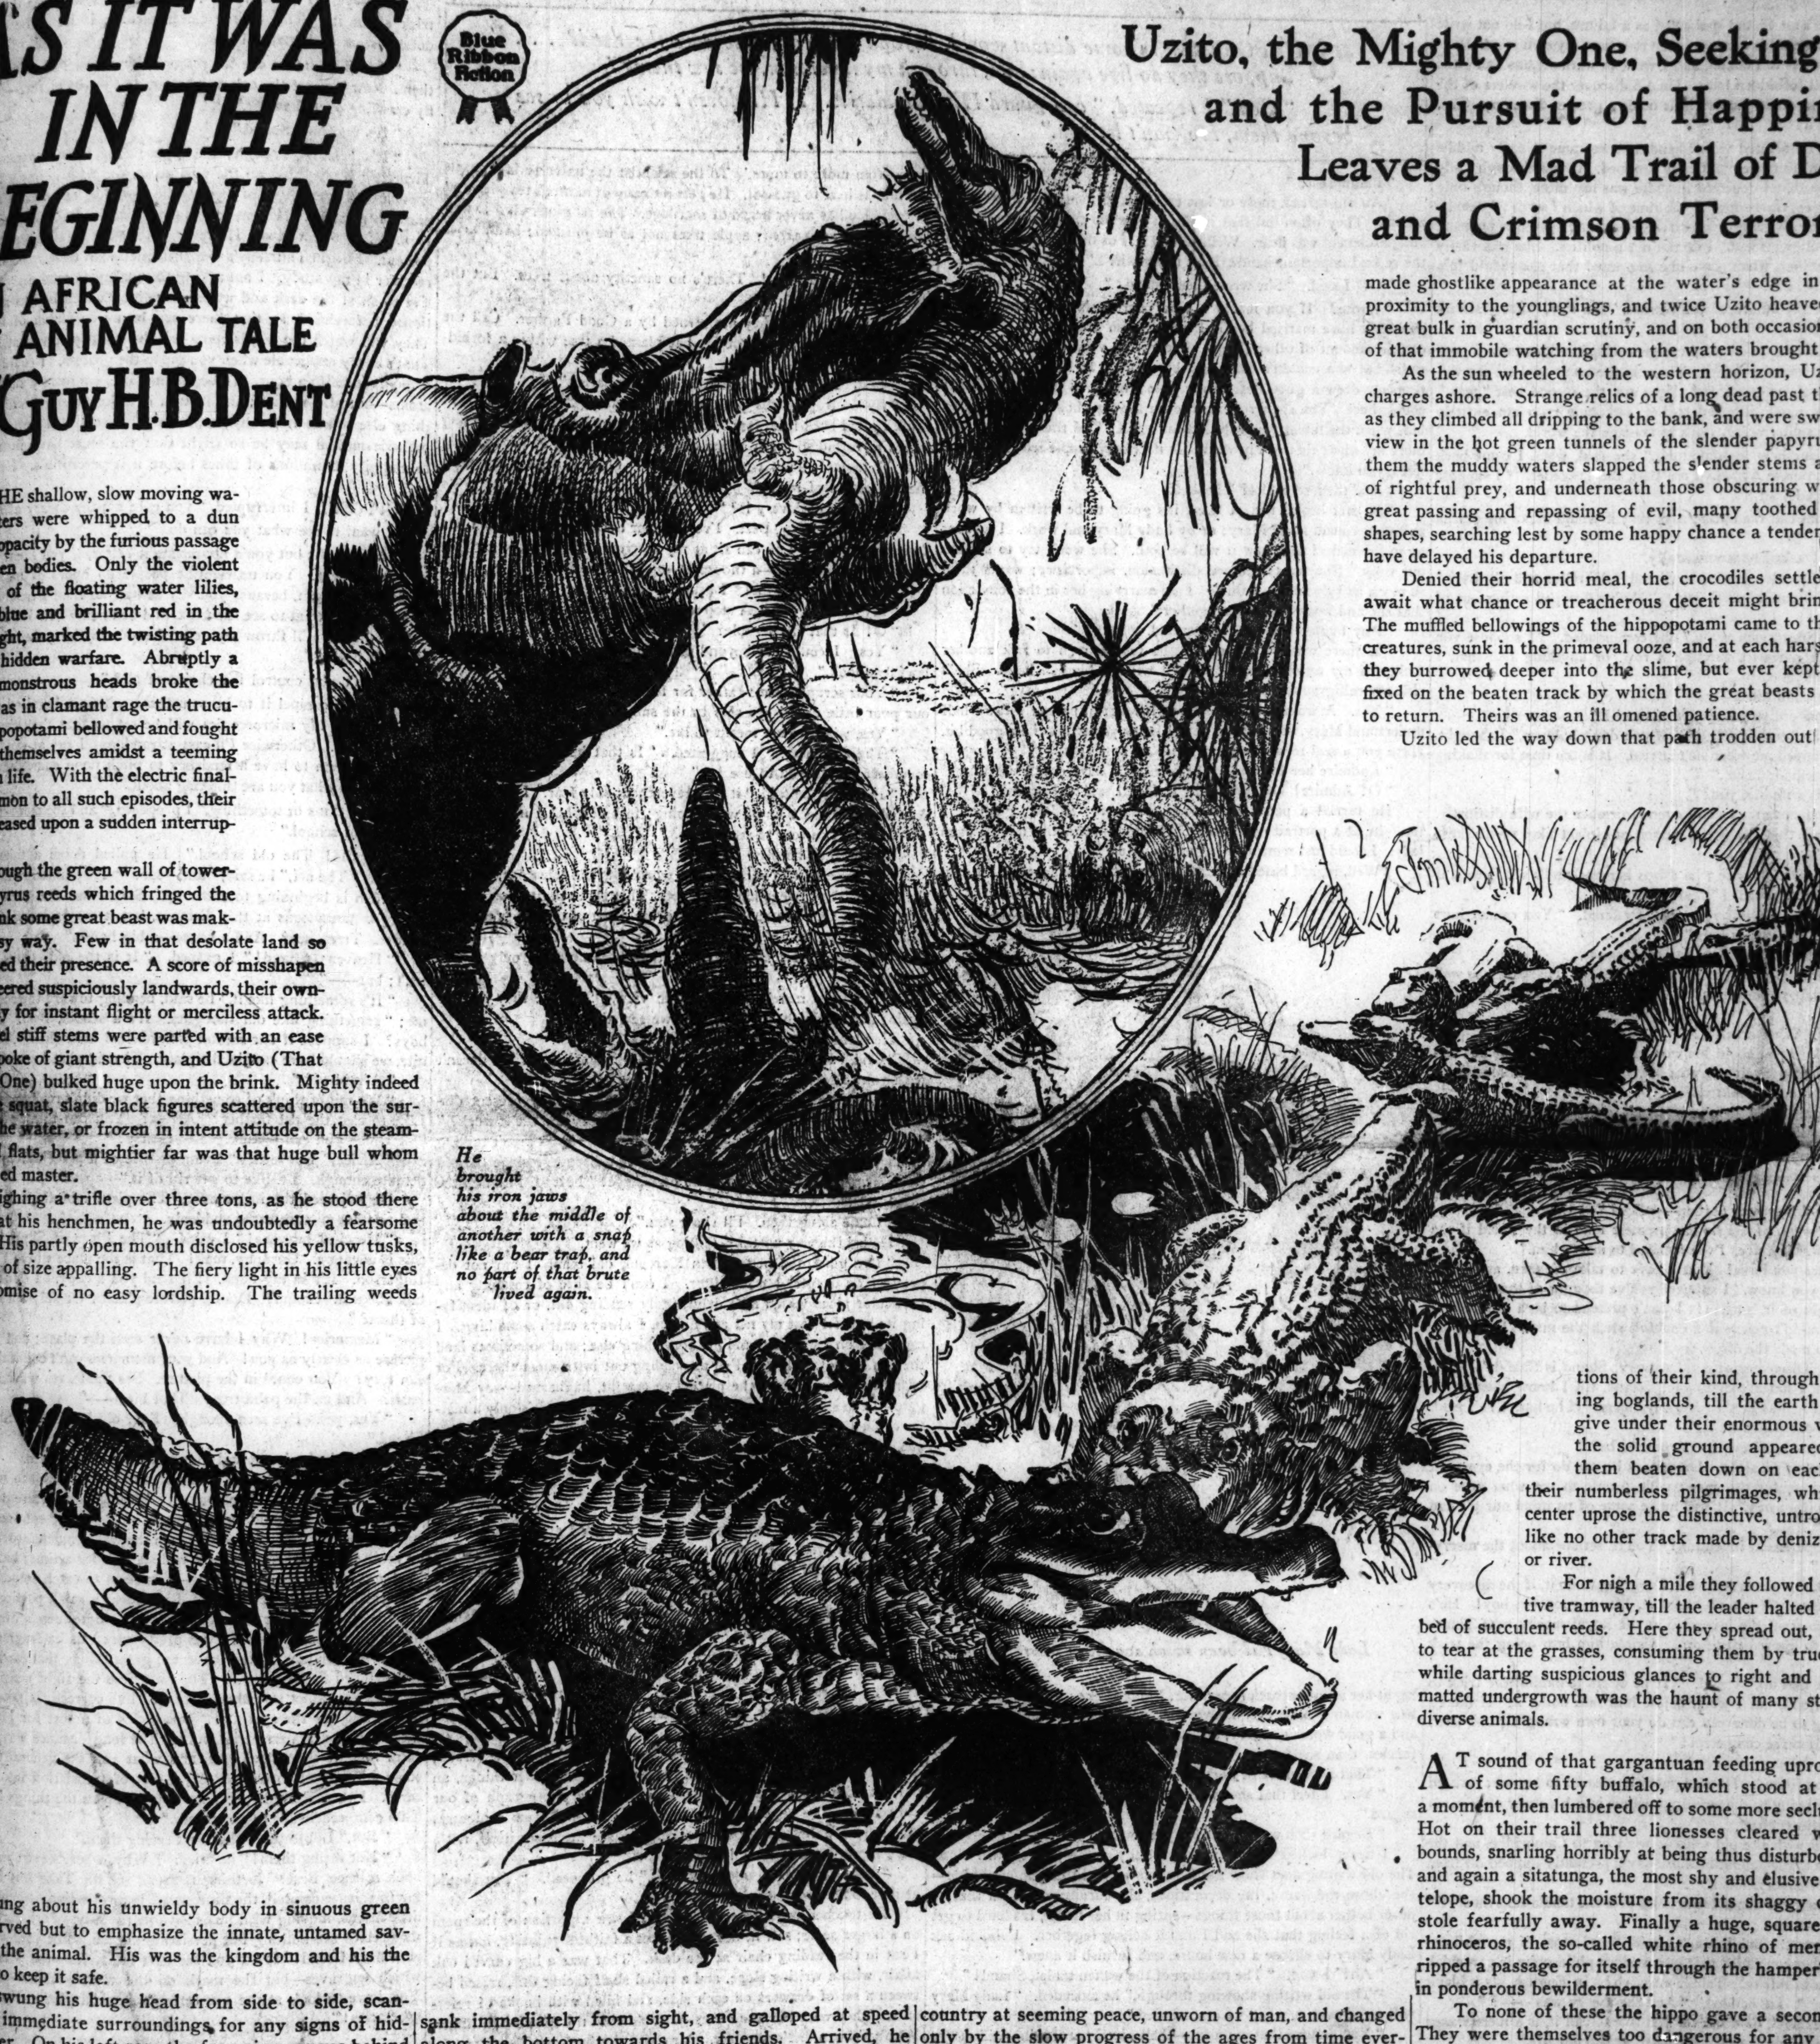
Uzito, the Mighty One, Seeking Life and the Pursuit of Happiness, Leaves a Mad Trail of Death and Crimson Terror

THE shallow, slow moving waters were whipped to a dun opacity by the furious passage of unseen bodies. Only the violent waving of the floating water lilies, white, blue and brilliant red in the dawn light, marked the twisting path of that hidden warfare. Abruptly a dozen monstrous heads broke the surface as in clamant rage the truculent hippopotami bellowed and fought among themselves amidst a teeming reptilian life. With the electric finality common to all such episodes, their voices ceased upon a sudden interruption.

Through the green wall of towering papyrus reeds which fringed the river bank some great beast was making noisy way. Few in that desolate land so advertised their presence. A score of misshapen heads peered suspiciously landwards, their owners ready for instant flight or merciless attack. The steel stiff stems were parted with an ease which spoke of giant strength, and Uzito (That Mighty One) bulked huge upon the brink. Mighty indeed were the squat, slate black figures scattered upon the surface of the water, or frozen in intent attitude on the steaming mud flats, but mightier far was that huge bull whom they called master.

Weighing a trifle over three tons, as he stood there glaring at his henchmen, he was undoubtedly a fearsome sight. His partly open mouth disclosed his yellow tusks, each one of size appalling. The fiery light in his little eyes gave promise of no easy lordship. The trailing weeds which hung about his unwieldy body in sinuous green curves served but to emphasize the innate, untamed savagery of the animal. His was the kingdom and his the strength to keep it safe.



He brought his iron jaws about the middle of another with a snap like a bear trap, and no part of that brute lived again.

He swung his huge head from side to side, scanning the immediate surroundings for any signs of hidden danger. On his left rose the frowning ranges behind which the Congo forest lay like a shroud over the land; on his right, the mouth of the Victorian Nile led to dim regions afar.

As he stood there in all his pride of strength a monstrous crocodile, disturbed by his rough entry, plunged sullenly into the river at his side, and disappeared. Uzito watched its departure, meditating upon the need for action. Well he knew the danger to the young of the school represented by that nineteen feet of armor clad ferocity. But the saurian was an enemy that even he hesitated wantonly to attack. He made as if he had not seen it. Of human enemies he had no fear, for the banks of that river are barren of mankind because of the fly whose bite brings the torment which only ends in death.

Satisfied at length, Uzito plunged into the water, sank immediately from sight, and galloped at speed along the bottom towards his friends. Arrived, he hustled two or three of the younger bulls out of his way, and settled down beside his mate in the position in which he meant to pass the coming hours of burning sunshine. From above only the bulging top of his forehead was to be seen, the domelike eye sockets and gaping nostrils.

One by one the remainder lowered themselves to a similar stance. They peered up into the mounting daylight, unmoving, like floating logs. Overhead the swarming bird life of the endless marshes swept by unceasingly—great flocks of white egrets, clamorous, spur winged plover, and sacred ibis, as well as the saddle billed storks, the noisy purple ibis, and long legged heron. Across and across the broad lily pads which moved no more than these giant creatures in their midst the curious long-toed lily trotters darted in search of food like fragments of many colored rainbows. This was a country at seeming peace, unworn of man, and changed only by the slow progress of the ages from time everlasting.

BUT grim dangers lurked on every hand. More than once as the slow hours passed a sinister shadow shape, at the apparent mercy of the shifting eddies, drifted near the school, and each time, unmoving, Uzito watched its stealthy progress, marking its course to within a fraction of an inch. And each time the cruel, all seeing eyes of the sluggish crocodile, reckoning the appalling danger of Uzito's battering rush, sank softly from sight as a deflected pathway.

Not one instant of respite is known to him who in the wilds holds onerous position. Ever must he bear in full mind the terrors of the dry land no more and no less than the death which lurketh among the water plants.

Twice the fierce bearded face of an itinerant lion made ghostlike appearance at the water's edge in dangerous proximity to the younglings, and twice Uzito heaved round his great bulk in guardian scrutiny, and on both occasions the sight of that immobile watching from the waters brought safety.

As the sun wheeled to the western horizon, Uzito led his charges ashore. Strange relics of a long dead past they seemed as they climbed all dripping to the bank, and were swiftly lost to view in the hot green tunnels of the slender papyrus. Behind them the muddy waters slapped the slender stems as if balked of rightful prey, and underneath those obscuring waves was a great passing and repassing of evil, many toothed nightmare shapes, searching lest by some happy chance a tender calf might have delayed his departure.

Denied their horrid meal, the crocodiles settled down to await what chance or treacherous deceit might bring to them. The muffled bellowings of the hippopotami came to these sinister creatures, sunk in the primeval ooze, and at each harsh outbreak they burrowed deeper into the slime, but ever kept their eyes fixed on the beaten track by which the great beasts were wont to return. Theirs was an ill omened patience.

Uzito led the way down that path trodden out by generations of their kind, through the yielding boglands, till the earth ceased to give under their enormous weight, till the solid ground appeared beneath them beaten down on each side by their numberless pilgrimages, whilst in the center uprose the distinctive, untrodden ridge like no other track made by denizen of land or river.

For nigh a mile they followed this primitive tramway, till the leader halted by a thick bed of succulent reeds. Here they spread out, and began to tear at the grasses, consuming them by truckfuls, the while darting suspicious glances to right and left. The matted undergrowth was the haunt of many strange and diverse animals.

AT sound of that gargantuan feeding uprose a herd of some fifty buffalo, which stood at gaze for a moment, then lumbered off to some more secluded spot. Hot on their trail three lionesses cleared with huge bounds, snarling horribly at being thus disturbed. Time and again a sitatunga, the most shy and elusive of all antelope, shook the moisture from its shaggy coat as it stole fearfully away. Finally a huge, square mouthed rhinoceros, the so-called white rhino of men's desire, ripped a passage for itself through the hampering stems in ponderous bewilderment.

To none of these the hippo gave a second glance. They were themselves too dangerous for any to attack unless the attacker should be crazed with hunger; or so numerous and malignant, as the red and black driver ants be, that they recked nothing of death so that the hurrying millions of their ropelike swarms might feed in insatiable greed for flesh.

But with the speed of the tropic storms arose a quarrel amongst those dull witted animals. There was no real reason for it, but then a hippo never needs a reason for his incessant brawling. At one moment the only sound to be heard was the rhythmic swish and crash of those huge jaws, at the next the marshes rang with the voice of their anger. Bull fell bawling upon bull, and cow upon her sister. Even the youngsters squealed and hit at each other in imitation of their elders. The din was frightful, and the havoc wrought by the

The Wireless of the Eye

IT grits me to hear Shand spoken of as a failure, but I do not write this story to clear his name, or even to relieve my own mind. Robbing orchards is in fashion, and I want to warn Adams and Eves that there is still forbidden fruit. He did discover the wireless of the eye, but before he could publish it he made a greater discovery. This is the story of it:

I was well acquainted with Shand, but we came to early middle age with the acquaintance practically dropped. It was through Lady Mary Hesterson that I renewed it. She was my niece, though only ten years younger; thirty-four at the time of which I write; a woman who had been much sought in marriage but had spared a husband and espoused policy instead. I do not mean politics. She was vastly amused, I remember, when some one suggested that she should join the list of lady M. P.'s.

"We settle the affairs of the nations," she said, "not just talk about them."

By "we" she meant one of those great cliques which in turn govern this over governed country. Those in the know told me she was the best brains of her particular clique and the second best "man." I was, and am, much attached to her, although I do not entirely approve of her subterranean work to manage the world.

"I want your help in something," she said, when I came back from an exploration in Africa. I am Best, the Traveller. "I suppose you'll be a sport, Dick?"

She does not call me uncle; says that it would make me out an old man.

"Well?" I asked noncommittally.

"You know Shand? Professor Shand? Wireless and all that?"

"I used to know him," I said. "We've dropped rather out of touch."

"Then get into touch again," she commanded. "I suppose you could? The drop wasn't through a row, or anything like that, I gather from him."

"O! You know him?"

"Yes. How did you drop out of touch?"

"Principally because you drop if you don't hold on," I thought. "I fancy he dropped me when he married. It is the time for shaking off a fringe of acquaintances."

"Didn't his wife like you?"

"I don't remember. I don't even remember the wife distinctly. I shouldn't fancy that she was a person of violent likes or dislikes; just ordinary."

"It is the ordinary wife who drops her husband's old friends if they interest him too much!" Mary observed.

"Put it down to her if you like," I offered. "You cannot hurt those quiet ones, as Ruskin says."

Mrs. Shand had been dead for some years.

"Her or you. I can't put it down to Shand. He speaks so well of you; and never justifies himself with a reason. The hall mark of real liking!"

"Possibly. What about it?"

"He'd talk to you about his wonderful discovery; if he has discovered it. People say it's impossible. You might lure him on to give you an advance demonstration."

"Why should I?"

"I want to know if he really has done it."

"Why?" I persisted.

"O! Just to know whether I am going to commit an indiscretion!"

"Politics—I beg your pardon—policy?"

"No; personal. He'll be the greatest man in the world if the thing comes off. If it does I've promised to marry him."

"The deuce you have! You'll have to take the man, as well as the greatness, you know. I suppose you've thought of that?"

"I've thought of it, ancient! I don't pretend to be a sentimental miss, but I wouldn't marry if I couldn't stick the man. I can stick Shand—if he's made the discovery."

"Umph! Discovery or no discovery, Shand is Shand."

"Yes, but I haven't discovered Shand, till I know whether he has done it. If he has he's atrociously clever. If he hasn't he's mad. I want to find out which he is."

"What does the discovery purport to be?"

"The wireless of sight. He swears he can do for the eye what Marconi has done for the ear; enable people to see what goes on hundreds of miles away. It will make some of us mind our p's and q's, won't it?"

"Bally impertinent invention! You're serious about the marrying business?"

"I don't know about serious! I'm going to do it, if the discovery comes off. You find out all about it, like a good old boy! He's arranged to show off the invention at the Royal society next Thursday. I want to know beforehand. Cajole him into doing the trick for you."

"I'll look him up," I said. "If he offers to exhibit the trick to me, well and good, but I won't cajole him into doing it. If there's any wrangling to be done you can do your own wrangling, my dear. There's nobody more competent!"

I CALLED on Shand. He was patently pleased to see me; insisted upon my stopping to dinner; dragged me into his study afterwards for a heart to heart chat.

We began with the old school; went on to Cambridge, and the things that we argued about in those days; presently jumped off from them to his discovery.

"You remember our old squabbles over the tabula rasa theory?" he asked.

"I've forgotten my Latin," I said, "and most of my philosophy. I've rather concluded that our western philosophy is parochial. It doesn't run in Africa. Tabula rasa, eh? In English it's a blank tablet, isn't it?" He nodded. "And the theory was ——?"

"That our soul, or whatever you like to call it, is a mere waxen tablet on which experiences write what we call our life."

"Rot," I grunted. "One tablet takes Phyllis down in fast colors; the other doesn't trouble to notice her. Something—soul—mind—the ego—selects the entries for the tablet; chisels in some impressions; won't scratch it with others."

"The old delusion! When you look at the tablet you see no soul; no you; nothing but inscriptions. There isn't even a calligraphy of your own. Other hands do all the writing; thousands of them, though at any given time all the important writing is done by one hand. Then a new hand comes; smooths off the old inscription; writes a new one. Three hands seem to have written most of what matters on my tablet. First the school; the masters and the fellows. You did your share. After a time the tablet was wiped clean, and a new hand wrote a fresh inscription on the old leaf."

"New leaf," I contradicted. "The old leaf is only turned, with the old writing still on it. You've just proved that; turned back to it and read it. You, I say. Your ego or soul."

"No soul, and no turning back. The old stuff was dimly visible underneath the new; like the older writing on a palimpsest."

"Palimpsest?"

"An old screed, more or less erased, and then used to write on afresh. They often did that in the days when there was no paper, and parchment was dear. Well, second leaf or old leaf scraped clean, the second important handwriting is my wife's."

"O!" I said. "She wrote then, Shand?"

"Wrote? If you marry a wife your business is husband. I shouldn't have married her if I hadn't been prepared to give up a certain amount of other things. We got on very well—particularly well—but she couldn't share my big work. So she naturally and properly drew a good deal of my time from it to things which she could share. Yes, she wrote my life for the time being; and I missed her, when the tablet was wiped clean again. The third writing was more my own; that of my work. It isn't only people who make our lives, you know."

"And the next tablet?" I asked.

"It isn't begun yet. I think it's going to be written by work and your cousin Lady Mary; or by Lady Mary and work. I wonder as to the order! Anyhow it will be both. She won't try to scratch out work. She wants success, distinction, importance; wants them as much as I do; more, I think I am marrying her in the conviction that she and work will write together."

"Any human reason?" I inquired.

"If there weren't, I shouldn't be fool enough to risk another maker of my autobiography. She'll write a biggish hand. She'll risk my calligraphy, too!"

"Yes. A woman is generally soft wax; in parts. I don't half understand Mary, or a quarter; but I fancy you will write a good bit. Have you a real regard for her?"

"I admire her far more than any one I have ever known."

"O! Admire! I said regard. In fact, I said real regard."

He turned a paper knife over and over; sighed; glanced, I thought, at a portrait over his desk; a rather attractive middle class lady. I could just remember her as his wife.

"Well, regard based on admiration; extreme admiration. Looking at her as an impartial spectator, I judge her to be the most attractive woman I have ever known; undoubtedly the cleverest woman and a good woman. Mary, at heart, is a better woman than any one fancies, than she fancies."

Lady Mary had been much sought in marriage.

"That is my idea of her; but a wife is a fact, not a fancy."

"Yes. I feel that she is—desirable. I want her. There's your regard."

"Regard such as you felt for your wife?"

"I never looked upon Eva impartially. She just seemed close. The old writing does show itself, in this way. Sitting in her house—she chose the house, the decorations, the furniture and all that; I never bother about those things—sitting in her house, it's hard to get rid of a feeling that she and I and it belong together. I should ask Lady Mary to choose a new house, and furnish it anew."

"Ah!" I said. "The reaction of the waxen tablet, Shand!"

"The old writing showing through," he amended. "Lady Mary will write over it, when we are married."

"You assume that my niece—she's niece, not cousin—will marry you?" I commented.

"She has promised," he stated.

"O! I thought the promise only conditional."

"I shall fulfill the condition next week," he assured me. "I could fulfill more than the condition; but I cannot make up my mind whether it would be legitimate."

"Legitimate? By what law?"

"The law that we are left to guess."

"DO you by any chance mean religion?" I asked. "I thought science didn't trouble about that!"

"My attitude toward the unknown is not entirely scientific," he stated apologetically. "I suppose I caught the other point of view from my wife. She was religious."

"Women are. Very few men are entirely irreligious. I don't profess to be myself. What's the practical difference between the points of view?"

"The scientific first and only commandment is 'Let knowledge grow from more to more.' To the scientist the universe is a puzzle and man is here to guess it. He gets into any of nature's temples that he can. He has never heard of sacrilege. The religious view is that some things are sacred; apple trees not to be plucked; boundaries set by—nature!"

"O! Hang nature! There's no sanctity about trees. But the tree owner?"

"Say, then, that they are owned by a Good Farmer. Call the Good Farmer God. Suppose He has planted a tree within a forbidden boundary?"

"God," I said, "can maintain His boundaries."

"By destroying the presumptuous invader, Best. But I don't think I stand back from fear. Anyhow, I see no iron fence or flaming sword to forbid so much of my discovery as I think of proclaiming next Thursday. That wins Lady Mary. Observe that I say win; the confession of regard."

"And the discovery is?"

"It's a big thing, Best. I've done for the eye what Marconi has done for the ear. You can sit at my receiver and see what goes on a hundred miles away—a thousand—eight thousand."

"Why stop at eight!" I asked.

"My discovery doesn't stop at eight thousand. The earth does!"

"O! Is that the scruple?"

"Yes. I could see beyond earth; but I don't know that it is lawful to look."

"Your scruple seems rather far fetched," I commented. "Even our poor little naked eye sees to the sun, and beyond!"

"Yes, what we are meant to see."

"The telescope?" I suggested. "Is that heresy? Does your reverence forbid you to use it?"

"Perhaps," he said, "it isn't reverence; only fear. I don't mean fear of punishment, or of wrongdoing; fear of what I might see!"

"Eh? You fear to see—what?"

He breathed deeply.

"Suppose that in some distant world, beyond telescope, we saw the dead? They live again, of course. That isn't religion; only common sense. Can you suppose that every atom of dust is preserved, and none of soul?"

"Just now," I reminded him, "there was no soul; only a wax tablet!"

"That was merely the scientific view. Suppose they do live again; and, through my invention, we saw them?"

He glanced again at the portrait.

"God," I repeated, "can guard his boundaries. If He doesn't wish you to see beyond them, He won't let you."

"No. We mightn't wish to see. Well, as to my present discovery. Would you like to come to my laboratory and see it work?"

"Why, man!" I cried. "Who wouldn't? If you aren't talking through your hat, you've made the greatest discovery since the old world began to roll. The Marconi of the eye!" I slapped him on the shoulder.

"Come along then. I'll show you."

He led the way upstairs, talking as we went.

"I've gone one better than Marconi, old man. I am not dependent on a special transmitter. I can't be sure of catching any particular place which isn't deliberately sending out, or of identifying it; but if I cast my net at random, I always catch something. I can move on from that, and get something else; and sometimes land the fish I want, although I've no sending out instrument there. For example, if I recognize the place I've caught, haphazard—say Margate—I can shift along by the sea and get, say Deal. It's only a matter of finding the right waves. Every place has its own; every person. You have. The waves differ in breadth as well as in length, and in quality; but I suppose that is only a restatement of the fact that they are different. Here we are. This is the seeing in apparatus."

He uncovered a large table. I am not good at describing machinery. In brief, there were a number of closed cabinets round the border connected by a multiplex of coils. At one end of the table there were levers and indexes and wheels. Slanting up from the center there was a white screen; a waxen looking thing about eight feet long by six feet deep. He pointed to it.

"The tabula rasa," he said. "The blank mind of the machine, on which the sight waves write. It wipes itself clean after each writing; leaves no traces underneath. I have a transmitter in my study down at Bognor, and keep the room lit. I'll show you the study."

He pressed a lever, and a staid room appeared upon the screen; a room furnished in old oak; on the walls, among other things, an old bat with a silver plate on it, an oar, and a photograph of our old school. The appearance on the screen differed from a picture; stood out in relief somehow. I seemed to see the room itself, not a mere representation of it in lines.

"Let's concentrate upon my desk," he proposed. "You should be able to read some of the papers."

He touched other levers; and then I saw a portion of the room on a larger scale; saw it, not as one sees a faithful painting, but as if I sat in the reading chair at the desk. That was a big carved oak affair, with a writing slope, and a railed shelf facing this, raised between a set of drawers on each side, and filled with books of reference. They were the usual ones—I could read the titles—Whittaker, Who's Who, a dictionary, etc. A manuscript lay upon the slope, the first page upward; written on half margin in Shand's clear, small hand, and much corrected. "The Limits of Knowledge" was the title. This was immediately followed by some queer verses.

KNOWLEDGE.

Man schedules the world in ordered plan.
And top of the list he put down: "Man!
Featherless biped; wearing clothes;
The creature like to a god, who knows!"

Knows? . . . Well, his mind can reach afar,
Past the red sun, the last lone star;
Past time that was, past time now given;
Can dream a hell, and demand a heaven.

Knows? . . . Hear him talking of "primal cause,"
And "evolution" and "moral laws"—
"Let justice be done though the heavens fall!"
A speck of dust? What man knows it all?

"The humility of the truly great!" I remarked.

"Your tongue in your cheek?" he suggested.

"No—yes—I don't know . . . Shand? I suppose there's no trick about it? This isn't a clever picture, is it? The coloring doesn't seem quite natural."

"No. The waves are microscopically correct. Let me adjust them. Now you get the coloring better. As to the picture—see that fly crawling over the desk."

"It's uncanny, Shand."

"It's 'canny' enough; the reproduction from a transmitter. That long black thing on the wall above the desk is one. The red spots are its eyes; eight of them. The reproduction without a transmitter is uncanny. It seems like a determination of inanimate things to manifest themselves. However, let's stick to the explicable at present. I begin Thursday's demonstration with transmission by the receiver in my study. I am asking the society to send a representative to sit at the desk and write; something which he has not mentioned beforehand, so that there can be no suspicion of trickery. They will watch the words come and the ink dry; down at Bognor. That's easily explicable when you grasp the process. I could explain it to you in half an hour. To begin, matter is not merely substance—atoms—but also motion; and motion is never independent. Everything else mocks it faintly; vibrates in unison, although the sympathetic motion may be so slight that you must have instruments to magnify it millions of times before it is perceptible. Next—"

"SUPPOSE," I interrupted, "you give me the theory afterwards. I want to see what you can do."

"Very well; but you'd appreciate it better, if you knew broadly how it happens. You unscientific people do hours of unnecessary work and thought, because you shy at half an hour's careful study. However, you want to see the trick, and don't care how it's done, eh? Let me think? I'll throw my net and catch anything that chooses to transmit itself."

"Don't you control the choice at all?"

"I shall compel it to be something within a hundred miles or thereabouts. My microscopics will be set so that they can't reach much farther. Otherwise I'll cast at random. I say at random; but the waves seem to have a tendency to pitch upon something with a similarity to what you are thinking about."

"Let's think of something," I proposed, "and see if we can get it. Say the old school."

"Righto! The old school." He pulled down a thing like a grating. "The net," he said, "and—see?" He pointed to the screen. "The fish is beginning to show up. Sometimes the catch is practically instantaneous at this distance, but it may take up to half a minute. Trees, see? And a house—a big house."

"Heavens, Shand!" I gasped. "It is the old school. No, it isn't; but——"

"It's something like it," he said, bending toward the screen with me; "something like our thoughts. It's a school, Best. See those boys? I suppose if our mental pictures had been clearer, more definite, we should have caught the place. That is what I am afraid of."

"Afraid of?"

"We might think of something that we didn't really wish to see! Like to cast the net farther? Africa? You can think of a place? One which you can picture pretty clearly?"

"Africa," I agreed. "I've a picture of a place out there that's definite enough. I'd like to get rid of it."

He adjusted the instrument. The picture of the school went; and another picture came suddenly.

"Merciful heavens!" I cried. "The Place of Skulls! Shand, this is uncanny. Uncanny, man! That is the place where I lost poor Rogerson. It's in my book. I'll send you a copy. I don't want to talk about it. Shand? Does it picture places? Or only our memories of them?"

"Memories! Why I have never seen the place; and I see the picture as clearly as you! And your memories can't count the skulls, can they? You could in the picture. See the leaves waving on that bush? And on the palm tree? That bird——"

He touched a lever, and the screen was clear again.

"I've never known the instrument respond so well to suggestion before," he told me. "I suppose it's because you picture things better than I do. I could never visualize clearly, except something I tunk trying . . . Best? If you make the waves much larger, and put on more power—the instrument will stand it for a time; but it would be dangerous to go on too long—you seem to catch something that isn't earth. One of the planets, I suppose; a small portion of some strange place or other; sometimes a place where there's life, life, but life that isn't ours. Twice I was pretty sure I had a fragment of the sun; a sun anyhow. Fiery caverns; great things that stalked about and dripped flaming metal. The first time the sight nearly blinded me, and the tablet was almost spoilt. I've correctives now; for the tablet, and for the spectator. Spectacles of a sort for him. I use them for all extraterrestrial work. The long distance waves always seem to hurt the naked eyes, and what you see generally requires some adjustment to our senses; a sort of translation into terms of earth. I've contrived spectacles that give you the things in equivalents comprehensible to our senses."

"But," I objected, "that isn't seeing them."

"Not seeing them!" he cried. "Why, where's even your school book science, Best? Nothing is as we see it. Take this lever. So far as science can tell, the thing itself is a collection of inconceivably little atoms, moving with inconceivable rapidity. Perhaps the atoms themselves are nothing but persisting motion. But your eyes see it as a bar of steel! What you see isn't the stylus—the pointed thing which engraves—but the mark on the waxen tablet—your mind. You have to look at the sun through smoked glass. Put on these spectacles!"

HE brought out two pairs of spectacles, with boxes rather like the sound boxes of gramophones, instead of lenses; put on a pair, and gave me a pair.

"Fasten them behind the head," he advised. "They're heavy. There's a chain. Here, I'll do it for you. No, you won't always see things as they are—imperceptible to our sight, perhaps—only their equivalents to earth senses; but those are all the senses you have! Now I'll turn on the long distance waves. Don't be alarmed by the rumbling. Even ether grits when it moves fast enough, and those waves move billions of miles in a second. The burning smell is merely from the waves of light chafing. Now we're getting something. Watch the tablet. What do you make of it?"

"Rather like a forest of trees," I thought. "They—they're shaped like trees, but they seem to be a sort of stone . . . or ivory. Some of them. Those round green spots, in the trees, Shand—Red in the 'ivory trees'—Man! The eyes move; and the stone trees! They catch at one another . . . People like stone trees! Alive! . . . That one's rising up; taking bits of the ground with it. . . . Shand! It isn't ground; more like molten metal. It's flaming . . . The thing that looks like a waterfall? A waterfall of melted stone! What place is it, Shand?"

"Some scrap of a sun in the cooling stage, I should think. You get all sorts of worlds; dead places with no motion; all deserts and rocks; other places that seem to be all sea; no land; sometimes with queer things swimming or sailing upon them; sometimes sticky sea, or shifting land; sometimes things moving about on the land or sea; queer things . . . . This seems to be some sun; before life perhaps. It might be our sun. I can't guess. I don't know the length of my waves. I have increased them beyond what I can measure, you see . . . . Had enough of this, whatever it is?"

"Yes. Can't you find a world like ours?"

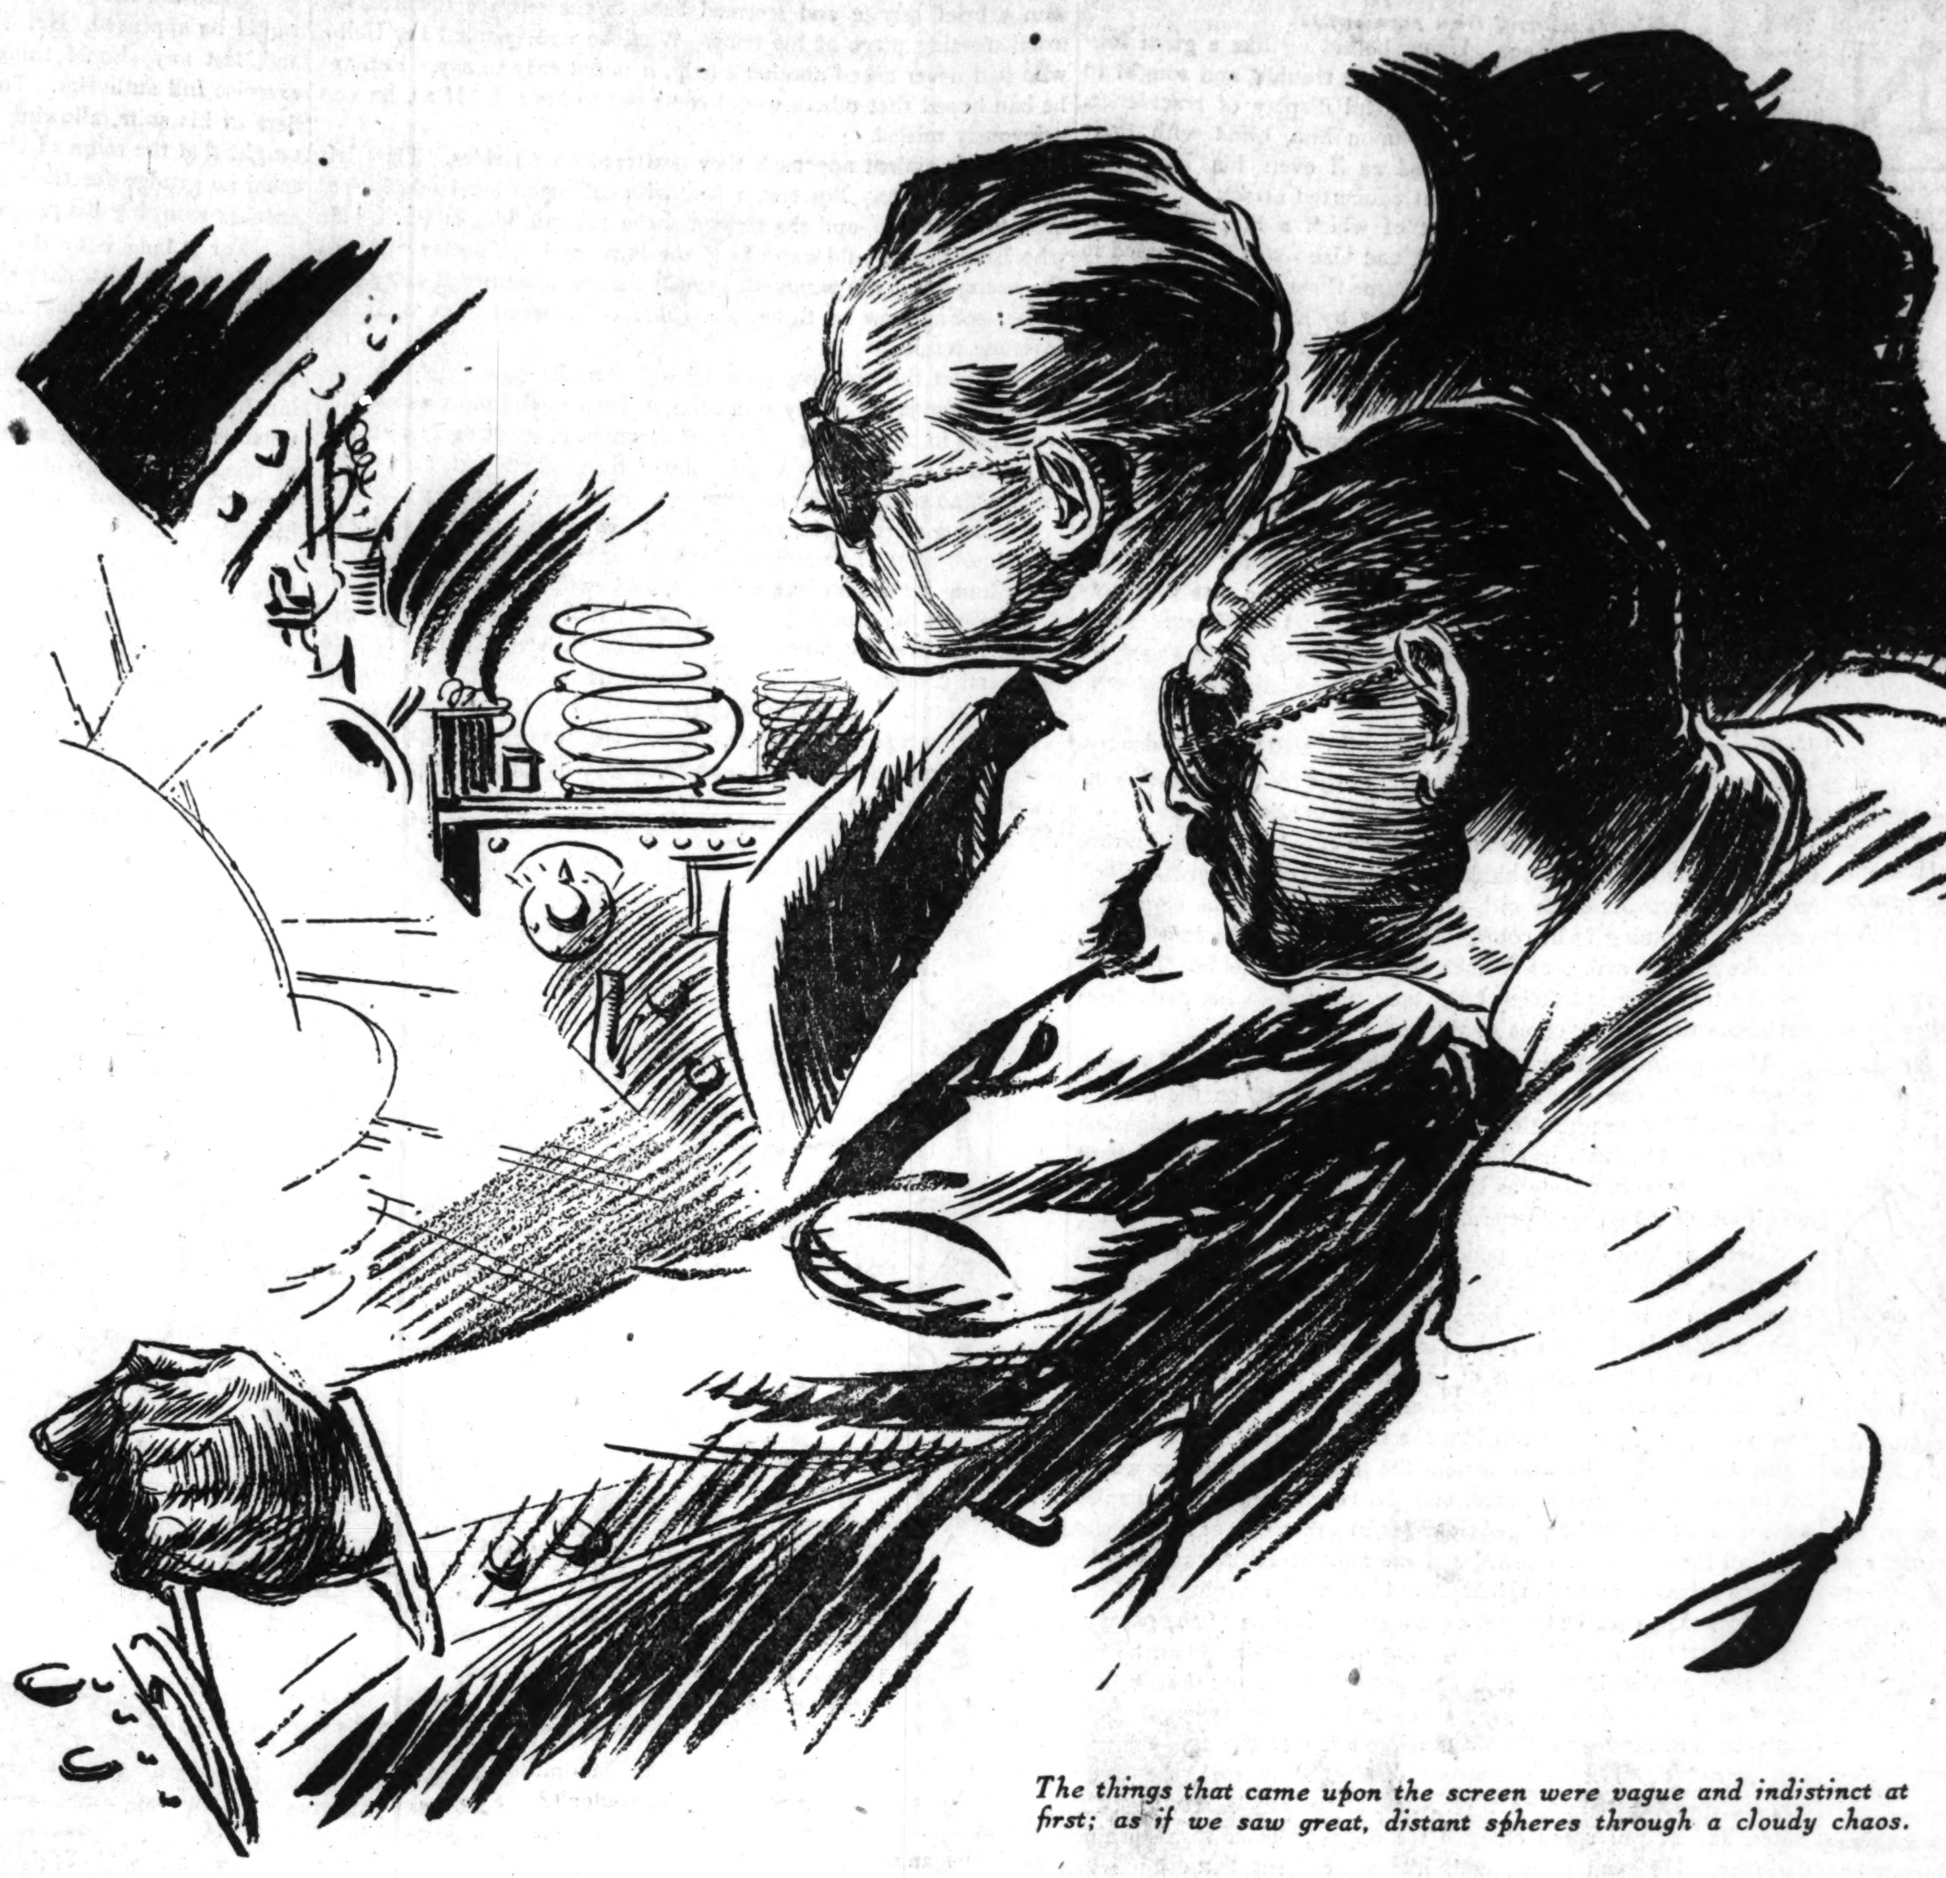
"I might. Once I did."

"Try to find one now."

"I — don't — know," he said slowly. "I think it's dangerous."

"Dangerous?"

"I mean—I don't know what we might see. When I found the earth world before it was by accident. The way it happened was this: I thought I'd try to get Carslake on the screen. He worked with me for a time; the only man, except you, who's ever seen the thing. He sent me his photo; and a note. In the note he made this criticism: 'I think your trouble m getting a definite thing without a special transmitter is only that you personally are not good at visualizing. If you pictured the object clearly it would come. Try to picture me with the help of the old photo.' So I sat down, with the photo to help me. I seemed to be able to picture him fairly clearly then. I set the instrument at between a hundred and a hundred and fifty miles N. E. I believed he was at Lowestoft. But I didn't get him on the tablet; didn't get any clear picture at all; just a muddle.



The things that came upon the screen were vague and indistinct at first; as if we saw great, distant spheres through a cloudy chaos.

"I concluded that the ordinary waves were out of gear; that there was some sympathic disturbance going on hereabouts; a sort of wave storm perhaps. So I decided to leave off trying to get Carslake or any near object for the moment, and to have a turn at the distance waves. I can't measure them, as I've told you; but the length was billions of miles. I suppose Carslake was still in my mind unconsciously. Anyhow I got a picture of a place that was rather like earth; a rocky earth; mountains and mountains and mountains. Carslake was climbing up one of them; climbing up and up and up; and something—some one—was floating down in the air to meet him. At first I thought it was a bird; but it wasn't. It had wings; but it was a woman; a beautiful young woman. And yet it was Carslake's old mother! When I put the spectacles on I saw her like that; old; and not old; the same but different. She seemed to be the two things at once; just as she was laughing and crying at the same time. I suppose she was an angel; but she was Carslake's mother—Carslake's dead mother."

"I don't understand," I said. "How did he come to be there, with his dead mother? He was alive?"

"He wasn't. He had been killed in a train smash, half an hour before I experimented. I found that out afterwards! Dead—and living—somewhere else—in a world something like ours! At least it was one that we could comprehend—and live in. Best, don't you see? The dead don't die. They only go somewhere else. Well, Carslake did . . . Say something, man."

"Shand," I said, "if I hadn't seen what I've seen I should say that you ought to see a doctor."

"I know. It sounds mad, doesn't it? But you have seen. You know it isn't. I don't think I'd go on with the business; only there's your cousin—niece, you say. And there's my reputation as a scientist. I've proclaimed that I can do the thing. If I don't, I shall be jeered at; called an impostor, and a charlatan; or a lunatic. And I shall lose Mary. She and I and this invention of mine—man, we'd have the world in pawn! But if I do show it, they'll go tinkering with the long distances. Man won't leave the forbidden alone. It has been the same ever since the Garden of Eden."

"You needn't tell any one that it will act beyond the eight thousand miles," I suggested; "or whatever the earth is through. If you stop at that I don't see that the discovery is going to do any particular harm. It's confoundedly intrusive! But, hang it all, privacy has nearly gone from life already. You can't conceal your income from the tax gatherer! Or your bones from the X-ray ruffian. I was done the other day to find the mischief in a tooth. If you stop at eight thousand miles——"

"Don't you see," he interrupted, "I couldn't stop at eight thousand miles. Other fellows will discover how to extend it, once I give them the idea; fellows like Wyse and Gunter; the hangers-on of invention who exploit other men's discoveries. Besides, I'm always feeling tempted myself to go beyond the eight thousand miles. Your cousin—well, niece—wouldn't be set on living here, would she? She'd agree to another house; and fresh furniture?"

"Heaven knows what Mary will or won't agree to," I said; "but I should say that she'd jump at the idea; wouldn't want anything second hand. You'll make pretty sure of her refusing to live here if you suggest it! She's that sort. . . . I take it, the point is that you want to clear the waxen tablet of old associations when you start afresh, eh?"

"Yes. I want to feel sure I can clear it. Suppose they do live again. And Eva is waiting somewhere? And that the afterwards is a place with steep rocks to climb?"

"Just suit you," I told him. "And Mary for the matter of that. You'll be a good pair of mountaineers."

"Yes, yes. We should climb all right; but Eva wouldn't; not alone. With some one she'd be all right. Suppose"—he gripped my arm—"suppose she's waiting there, expecting me to come along and give her a hand up the rocks."

"In other words," I said, "you care more for your dead wife than you do for Mary. You aren't content to have the tablet scraped and started afresh."

"Yes, yes. I am for myself. I want Mary. Only—you see Eva would get worried if I didn't come. And if I came with Mary——"

"There'd be a row," I said fatuously.

"No," he denied. "No. She'd only—only look. . . . Just look. . . . Best, it alters things, if there's living again. I didn't really believe in it. . . ."

"A little while ago you said that it was inevitable that the mind atoms must be preserved," I reminded him.

"O! Said! That's argument, not belief. I didn't really believe it; not that personality would be preserved. She believed it. . . . Do you know, I sometimes fancy that belief makes things be! You see the temptation, Best? To put on the distance waves; and visualize Eva. I could do that! It's strange that a man with no concrete memory in general can recollect one thing in particular. I can. Her, I mean. . , . Suppose I do it? Then, if she lives again, I shall find her. . . . Don't stare like a stuck pig; say what you would do."

"I WAS wondering," I said. "There's one thing you mustn't do, Shand. You mustn't wait till you have married Mary before you make the experiment, if you are going to make it at all. If you like Mary best, I don't see any necessity to make it. You have been born into a world in which death wipes the tablet; gives you the chance to start afresh."

"That," he interrupted, "is the whole question. Does it? Does it? I think I wish it did, but—you have never married, you see. I got used to doing things for Eva. If I still can, and if she lives somewhere else and still needs me . . . Perhaps she doesn't. Do you think I ought to look and see?"

"I've told you that I see no obligation to look," I said.

"Do you think it wrong to look?"

"I don't know. Who does know right or wrong, Shand? They are the moral speck of dust that nobody understands!"

"Would you look in my place?"

"I? I am an explorer, you see!"

"You mean you would?"

"I expect so," I owned.

"Then have you the courage to look with me?"

"Turn on the long distance things," I said, "and visualize whatever you choose to visualize."

"I'll fetch her portrait," he said. "That will help."

"Strange," I thought, "how just one woman appeals to a man. I remember when I was a boy——"

I suppose, as Shand says, I am good at visualizing; and that I visualized then, though I was not conscious of doing so.

He fetched the portrait; sat down with it before him, near the machine. He put on his spectacles, and I put on mine. He moved some levers.

The things that came upon the screen—the waxen tablet—were vague and indistinct at first; as if we saw great, distant spheres through a cloudy chaos. Shand altered the wave length a little, and returned to his chair; picked up his wife's photograph again. Then a bright spot began to appear in the cloud upon the screen; and it seemed to grow larger and larger, and brighter and brighter, until it was a great crystal ball. This seemed to fascinate me; hypnotized me, probably. Anyhow I lost the room we were in; lost myself. . . . Presently I seemed to find myself again, wandering in some far country along the bank of a great river at the edge of a dense wood; always looking for a place to get across, or a boat to carry me; and finding none . . . I went on and on and on. The wood at my side seemed always changing; growing dryer and older and drearier; and yet the opposite bank never seemed to change at all. It was always the bank of the Dar, where I wandered when I was a lad; and the house was always the house of Malcom Forrester; and the girl who sat on the tree trunk smiling across at me was always Maggie Forrester, and always seventeen. . . . She was seventeen when she died. . . . Shand said that a fresh hand could scrape off the old writing. Bah! . . . I don't say I'd thought of Maggie often these last twenty years; just on, say, New Year's eves, and on our birthdays. . . . Hers was the 6th of May. I don't think I'd often forgotten that. . . . It wasn't from faithfulness to the child that I'd never married, only . . . well, where she had written fresh writing wouldn't go. Palimpset! Ha, ha, ha! But I believe I never knew before that dream why I hadn't married!

"I'll swim over to her," I said presently. "I shall be young again when I get to the other side."

I put one foot forward to pluge into the river; but unseen hands held me back; and a great voice thundered in my ear, "Pull yourself together, Best! Pull yourself together!"

I woke, and found myself lying back in my chair, staring up at Shand. He was the whitest faced man I have ever seen.

"You saw her?" he asked. "You saw her, Best."

I sat up; stood up; walked across the room to a water bottle; had a drink.

"I went to sleep," I said, "or that bally light hypnotized me. Did you work any confounded trick on me?"

"No, no, no! I suppose the long waves are likely to send people off. Perhaps you have to lose your sensations to see the supersensible. . . . You saw her, too?"

"Who?" I asked.

"Eva?"

"Your wife? No; I didn't."

"I did, Best. I did. She's there; wherever it is; waiting for me. I was just going to her; and then there was a blaze of light. That was the apparatus; got white-hot. It roused me just in time to cut the waves off. A minute later it might have exploded; killed us! Merciful heaven! I said killed us. And there is no death." He gripped my shoulder and almost shrieked. "There is no death." Only another thing you become; another place you go to; and they wait for you—those we called dead!"

"At present," I said, wiping my forehead, "we are what we call alive. 'Now, and in this place'——"

He almost sobbed the next lines. (You should know "The Blessed Damozel.")

Surely she leaned o'er me? Her hair
Fell all about my face . . .

Neither of us spoke for about a minute. He stared at the photograph of his wife. I—she wasn't my wife—stared at a memory of Maggie. . . . Presently at a memory of my niece, Mary. I believed that she cared for Shand, and decided to make a fight for her against fool dreams.

"Here," I said, "are you and I; and Mary. What are you going to do about it, Shand?"

"There is only one thing to do," he said dully. "I shall write to the society; say that a flaw has appeared in my instrument, and that I must postpone the demonstration. Tell your niece that. No. Tell her that I have failed, and accept my dismissal. It's hard to understand, Best. I want Mary; but, you see, Eva wants me. I think if she were here I should want her, too. Anyhow, I belong to her. For the rest of time I am a broken, discredited, and disappointed man. I shall write to the society now. Will you tell Mary? It won't be a painful task. She'll take it with a shrug!"

"You never know how Mary will take anything," I said. "I expect she'll fume. However, I'll chance it."

Mary did not fume; shrugged her shoulders several times; then sat still and stared into the fire.

"You think he has really failed, Dick?" she asked. "That he won't succeed later?"

"I don't think we shall hear any more of his invention, Mary," I said. "It will be kindest to let people forget it."

"They won't. They'll call him a charlatan. Was he mad, or only mistaken?"

"Only mistaken, I think; mistaken in scale. His theory is all right, he says; but nature is too big for him."

"Big old nature . . . Dick? Is he much disappointed?"

"Of course! It would have been such a big discovery."

"Yes. I meant about a little to be discovered——"

"He is disappointed about you, Mary," I told her. "Naturally. He has an inordinate admiration for you."

"Then," she said, "tell him to come to see me. If he's missed his big discovery, perhaps he can still make a little one!"

She smiled kindly at the fire.

"You like him, Mary girl?"

"It does seem rather like it, doesn't it? Anyhow, I've led him to think . . . . Whatever I am, I am not mean."

She glanced at me for a moment; nodded; then looked into the fire again.

I WENT to Shand and gave him Mary's message.

"It seems," I said, "that Mary cares for you. She is a big woman, Shand. If you know how much success, power, importance are to her you will understand she must care for you a great deal to send this message now that you have failed. Shand, you are in this world—Mary's world. Let the next take care of itself!"

He laughed; shook my hand; waved his arms.

"Success and Mary!" he cried. "I shall tear up the letter to the society. Tell her she has inspired me to overcome the difficulty. Best, let's go to the lab., and I'll visualize her; make the waxen tablet copy the waxen tablet of my mind! I'll take the past off that. Mary only shall write! Great Mary! O! Very great Mary!"

We went up to the laboratory. He was wildly excited; kept laughing; and trembling; picked up things and dropped them; put a cigaret in his mouth and forgot to light it. Once he clutched at his heart and staggered; then laughed. "Just indigestion," he said. "Do you know, Best, indigestion will simulate every malady on earth; and there's nothing brings it on like overexcitement. I'm strung up; strung up! No wonder. Now for it. We'd better put on the spectacles. The old waxen tablet was a bit overexcited, too, last night. Mary is only a couple of miles from me; and the short waves are nearly as riotous as the long ones; hard to curb, you know. The tablet may flicker a good bit. It's like the mind. Doesn't always take scraping off kindly. Ready?"

"Ready," I said. "Don't get the distance waves by mistake."

"No fear," he laughed.

But, I think, in his excitement he did. And I think his dead wife was graven deeper in his memory than he knew; and that, when he tried to think of Mary, he thought of Eva instead. For when the picture came out upon the whitey yellow tablet it was not my niece. It was a much less lovely and distinguished looking lady; a very usual, middle class woman with neatly brushed hair; "a little sobersides" I remembered some one calling her. She was almost irritatingly placid and sober in the picture now.

Then suddenly she seemed to see some one—just as one day, when I walked in with Shand—her eyes lit up. She laughed from sheer pleasure; held out her hands.

Then the machine began to crackle and roar.

"Shand!" I cried. "Stop it! You've made some infernal bloomer, man! . . . Shand! Why the devil don't you speak? . . . Shand!"

Before I touched him I knew he was dead. . . . No; only elsewhere!

It was heart, the doctor said. He had always had his doubts about it. The calamity to the machine had excited its inventor more than the weak place in some blood vessel would stand.

I let it go at that; but the calamity to Shand happened some minutes before the calamity to the machine. I had carried him from the room and phoned for the doctor before I remembered that the apparatus would not bear the long distance waves for a great while. I went back to turn them off, but the thing was in flames. The waxen tablet was white hot. I looked at it through the spectacles, but there was nothing on it.

The scientists managed to copy the machinery from the burnt and charred remains, but they could not discover the secret of the waxen tablet. There was a document among Shand's papers which might have furnished the clew, but I burned it. I was afraid that if the machine were reconstructed Mary might use it. Also, I was afraid I might use it myself.

I needn't have troubled about Mary. A few months later she married a cabinet minister. She had always liked him, she told me, but Shand's greatness had fascinated her.

"After all," she said, "it is better to discover the wireless of the heart than the wireless of the eye."

Yes, I think so; and Shand, as I said, has made the greater discovery. . . . And I . . . And I!

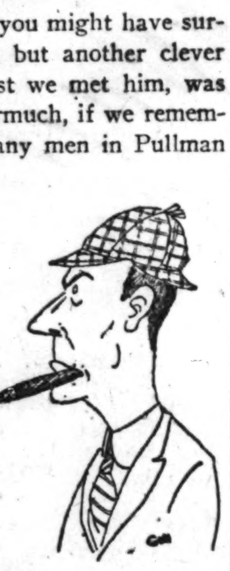
By Gene Markey

THE grim gentleman on the right is not, as you might have surmised, the redoubtable Sherlock Holmes, but another clever Englishman, E. V. Lucas, who, when last we met him, was traveling in this country—and not liking it overmuch, if we remember correctly. Possibly he encountered too many men in Pullman smokers who insisted on telling him stories, as was the case with young Count Henri de Boisgelin, who was in town the other day en route to Paris to write a book on what he saw and heard in these United States.



E. V. Lucas.

But whether Mr. Lucas liked America or not, he most assuredly likes London, and no one writes about it more charmingly. We have long fancied his essays, and though we knew he had essayed the novel, we never had the good fortune to read one until last week, when "Advisory Ben" (Doran) fell into our hands. It is as good as its title is bad: even better than that. If only some of our novelists who can tell stories could tell them with the grace of Mr. Lucas! "Advisory Ben," though it hasn't a terrific plot, possesses that curious magic that makes you keep on reading it. We read a little of it every night for a week, and hoped it would not soon end.

The story is of a lovely girl, Benita Staveley, who, when her father marries a second time, hops out from under the parental roof and hops into business; in fact, sets up a new and unheard of business for herself in London. Over a second-hand book shop, run by two attractive Oxonians, just out of the war (and one of them with only one leg), Ben establishes "The Beck and Call," a service designed to furnish advice and assistance on all subjects, from securing a cook for a country house to matching a piece of silk for a lady in India. There is no end of good humor in this book, and an array of amusing characters, and a delightful romance.

Covici-McGee have recently published a neat and complete "Bibliography of H. G. Wells," by Fred A. Chappell, "with a prologue introducing Mr. Wells to the future." It traces the works of the mercuric H. G. from his first "Text Book of Biology," in 1892, down to his latest novel, "The Dream," just published by Macmillan.

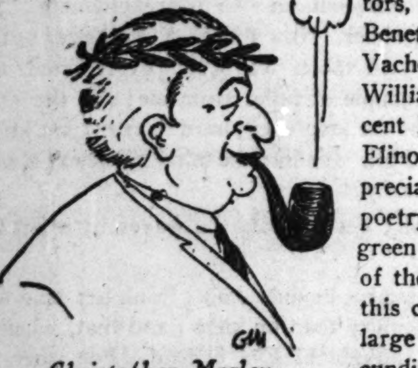
The regret we felt when Christopher Morley discontinued his engaging column, "The Bowling Green," on the New York Evening Post was only tempered by our expectation of some fine novels from his typewriter, now that he is "on his own." But as a farewell gesture comes "The Bowling Green" (Doubleday Page), a jolly little anthology of some of the best verse that appeared in the famous column from 1920 to 1924. And when you find, among other contributors, Hilaire Belloc, the brothers Benet, Captain David W. Bone, Vachel Lindsay, John Macy, William McFee, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Genevieve Taggard, Elinor Wylie, et al., you will appreciate what a lot of worthy poetry has been put between these green covers. Chris Morley is one of the younger men of letters of this country in whom we have a large faith. If his ferocious fecundity with volumes of essays a few years back alarmed some people, let it be remembered that publishers were constantly demanding new books from him. His last novel, "Where the Blue Begins," marks a conspicuous advance in his art, and we shall be looking forward to a bigger and better novel within the year, now that he has the time to write it.



Christopher Morley.

The other day we received a long and amusing letter from him, crowded with his literary enthusiasms, as always, and quite serious as to his plans, which include sailing for Cherbourg, with Mrs. Morley, "four bairns and a nursemaid," the 24th of May, to settle down to a summer of work in France.

"You may be meditating another of your atrocious frescoes," he writes, "therefore, I have been to the local pharmacy and spent a Lincoln denarius to get myself weighed: in my habit as I tread the streets I now weigh only a scantling 182 pounds, and I entreat you therefore not to silhouette me as a G. K. C. or a Bill Taft! I am about to celebrate my arrival at the age and waistline of 34 simultaneously." So we have represented Christopher, in the accompanying etching, a happier if thinner man.

It has for some time been our humble opinion that young Richard Connell is the high ranking potentate of American humorists—at least of those American humorists who fiddle with the short story. There never was a Frenchman, an Englishman, or a Turk who wrote such funny stories as Mr. Connell has put into his new book, "Apes and Angels" (Minton, Balch). But he is more than a writer of funny stories: he is an artist.

There are a dozen books we are clamoring to read as soon as we can lay hands on them. "Ariel" is one, a new and (from what we hear) excellent life of Shelley, by Andre Maurois (Appleton). And Horace Liveright, the publisher, who was in these parts last week, and who does not enjoy being hailed as Mr. Boni, assures us that Edgar Lee Masters' latest, "Mirage," is a great novel: we are eager to read it. But above all we are eager to read "The Autobiography of an Idea," by the late Louis Sullivan. Then, too, there's an armful of new novels to be gone over, as soon as our hammock can be swung under the old apple tree.

AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING

jagged teeth shocking to see. Uzito, bellowing like a giant foghorn, elbowed his way into the thick of the trouble, and sought to quell the disturbance by a more frightful display of truculence. But three of the disputants turned upon him, blind with their wrath, and for a moment it seemed as if even his incredible strength would go down before that concerted attack.

Now the rapidity of movement of which a hippopotamus is capable has to be seen to be believed, and Uzito was well versed in the tricky warfare of his kind. He became three enormous destroying engines at once. True, one assailant by a lucky snap, tore a strip from his shoulder some three inches deep and sixteen broad; it was a flea bite to Uzito. It only served to increase his already furious temper. He turned on that one and nigh rent his life from his body with three cunning, well placed, shearing bites.

While yet the unfortunate staggered at the impact, Uzito whipped about and fairly overthrew a second by sheer iron strength of straining hind legs. He turned upon the last, mouth open in hideous grimace, and perceived there to be no need for further correction. Never was such a chastened animal as he was who now sought to efface his bulk among his brethren. The affair as far as he was concerned was closed. And at sight of their lord's anger the remainder also made haste to be about more peaceful avocations.

Then Uzito, foraging on the outskirts of the reed bed for a toothsome morsel, came upon that which was like to cause his death.

He did not know, and would not have cared if he had known, that those tiny white shapes hidden under a head of dead grass, which he crushed into the earth with one great foot, were the eggs of a venomous lightning swift cobra. He merely heard the long drawn hiss like a flame makes as it licks up the brittle stubble. Then he saw the trembling spectacled hood upreared full in his path three feet above the melling cures of the body.

Uzito paused, and for an instant of time those two stared at each other. On the one side a frankly puzzled interest, on the other a malignant, lidless examination. On the one hand one of the mightiest of four footed animals in all the world, on the other seven foot of electric death with a body as slender as a young girl's ankle and a mouth whose caress spells eternity.

Even as Uzito slowly pondered the meaning of this sudden apparition, even as the hard won knowledge of long dead ancestors warned him to let this thing be, the cobra twice ejected the contents of its poison glands full into the face which loomed above it.

The twin fragile streams of poison hung a moment on the air like fine spun threads, then, propelled over four feet of space with deadly accuracy, plunged full into the staring eyes. On the instant Uzito was blind, and on the instant the flames of hell lit up within his brain. He surged forward, and the cobra became a crumpled mess upon the earth; he surged sideways, and the noise of his torment filled all the earth. He turned and ran amuck. Hither and yon he plunged across the marshes, bellowing like one distraught.

More than once he tripped over the tough stems of the papyrus and the sight of his clumsy struggling was pathetic. Once he ran clear through the circle of his astonished followers, and they, believing it to be their duty, attempted to join his crazy circlings. Suddenly he stumbled over the upstanding ridge of the age old trail and turned down it in clamorous distress. He took the water and the spray soared over the reed tops at the shock. He took the water, and at full speed charged the opposite bank in a burning darkness. He spun about, and, like some great battleship with steering gear deranged, curved to and fro across the river in baffled rage and agony.

One by one the remainder of the school, reaching the water's edge, dropped silently in. Most careful were they to avoid that hagridden bulk, most eager to deny all kinship, for very well they knew the inexorable law, and already the ghouls were ranging themselves on each side of the maddened monster.

They circled about him like evil shadows, wistful yet afraid to make an end. And as Uzito sensed that vile accompanying, his frantic passage became a nightmare jazzing. Once a great twenty foot body slid up beside and made a tentative snap at his unprotected flank. It was more in order to discover what liberties might be taken than definitely to do harm, yet the light touch of those razor sharp fangs tore Uzito as no other living agency could have torn him. He swerved at the pang, and the sheer dead weight of him spun the crocodile as if the huge creature had been but a children's toy. But as he turned to one side another foe swam in upon him and ripped and was away.

He broke water, and now his strident bellowing was tinged with the first fear. He, master of the endless marshes and lord of all that river, knew now his helplessness. With mouth wide open like the half of a great barrel above the surface, he tore from side to side, the foam creaming about his teeth. Again he sank and galloped along the bottom, and only the lily pads showed the direction of his flight, but even the crocodiles followed in haste, and ever they grew more numerous. Now they closed in, almost unafraid, and now the muddy water was abruptly streaked with red.

IT was as Uzito rolled clear over in one terrific spasm that the first hint of returning sight came to him. It was then that he noticed the pain to be abating, it was then that he determined to be avenged.

Even now it was a question whether he would be overwhelmed before the cooling waters should have washed the poison clear from his eyes. His assailants were jostling each other in their foul eagerness, he was ripped in a score of places, his life could almost be measured by minutes. With a giant heave of his massive body he won a brief respite and stormed beneath the surface towards the usual meeting place of his tribe. What he had in mind he, Uzito, who had never asked another's help, it is not easy to say. Perhaps he had hoped that others would come out to his aid. If so, he was grievously misled.

At his violent approach they scattered on all sides. They left him utterly alone. But one, a cow with calf upon her back, looked even towards him, and she strangled the quixotic idea at birth. He who lives in the wild must keep the laws, and the preservation of the young life is the paramount need. So his mate turned away, and Uzito, seeing now as through a thick veil, turned back upon his invisible tracks.

He met the ravening crew behind him and swam literally into their gaping jaws. They immediately became the most astonished crocodiles in all the Nile. To hunt down an unresisting meal is one thing; it is another when your lunch turns upon you with determination no whit inferior to your own and strength more ponderous.

Making a virtue of necessity, and knowing that their opportunity was almost gone, the saurians grappled Uzito actually from all sides. They hung upon him like bulldogs, and two Uzito stamped incontinently into the mud. Upon one he set his foot and the head and tail of him lived for a considerable time. He wallowed to the sunlight and brought his iron jaws about the middle of another with a snap like a bear trap, and no part of that brute lived again.

With nigh perfect sight restored, Uzito wove a circle about the remainder and drove in upon them, and they that remained alive made haste to depart.

Uzito did not pursue. He had other work to do before his rage would be appeased. But first he made his way towards the school and, lest any should think him now of no account, proceeded to exercise full authority. To and fro he chivvied the individual members of his suite, allowing them no rest. Bull, cows, and calves he taught that the reign of Uzito was by no means at an end. He bore them no grudge for their desertion, but he was not minded to have another usurping his position.

For a long hour the river resounded with the sound of their chastisement as that dark shape, which was their undisputed lord, and which yet left an ominous crimson wake, harried them without pause.

At length Uzito thought all was well. At length the sacred ibis felt it safe to return to his reedy perch and the lily trotter to his indefatigable pastime. The crescent of the dying moon shone livid through a thickening mist as Uzito swam contentedly to the scene of his latest and greatest victory. There he halted, plunged from view on a tour of investigation, and found the battered relics of his foes.

Night fell, the plumed papyrus whispered to itself along the banks; white and red and blue the floating water lilies covered the lagoons; here and there the lotus lifted its leaves and flowers stiffly above the surface. Hour after hour at regular intervals the ugly head of the Mighty One bobbed up above the surface as he danced his dreadful dance upon the bones of his would-be destroyers, and ever the great, strange river went twisting away into the fog wreathed distance.

MAGAZINE SECTION

Now Try Boncilla

Exquisite Face Creams

No matter what your age, you can measure the beauty and charm of your complexion by the daily care you give your skin. A few minutes each day invested in skin care will return rich dividends in loveliness.

To give your skin perfect care, use this face cream method. Boncilla Cold Cream for cleansing and nourishing. Boncilla Vanishing Cream for freshness and protection. Both are scented with the distinctive and delightful Boncilla odor.

Boncilla Cold Cream

Every night apply Boncilla Cold Cream freely to the face and neck with a gentle, rotary motion. Wipe off with a soft cloth and repeat this refreshing cleansing, using a lesser quantity of cream.

Boncilla Cold Cream, unusually pure and white, not only cleanses thoroughly but aids in the complete restoration of the skin following the day's exposure. It is especially desirable as it absolutely will not promote hair growth. Finally, but of additional importance, Boncilla jars and tubes contain a more liberal quantity. In jars 75c. In tubes 50c.

Boncilla Vanishing Cream

Each morning, after the usual use of water, and during the day before powdering, apply Boncilla Vanishing Cream smoothly and evenly. Then follow with Boncilla Rouge and Powder and note the freshness, transparency and beauty of the skin.

Boncilla Vanishing Cream, as pure and white as its twin, forms an ideal and effective protection against the ever-present foes of skin beauty. Also, it is greaseless and invisible, and it does not dry the skin. Boncilla Vanishing Cream packages are also liberally large—an advantage you'll appreciate. In jars 75c. In tubes 50c.

Boncilla The Method

The "woman who cares" prides herself upon having a beautiful complexion—a skin or irresistible charm which is free from both major and minor blemishes. To provide this loveliness is the function of the Boncilla Method.

The Boncilla Method, "so easy to use," consists of, first, Boncilla Clasmic Beautifier. Next, Boncilla Cold Cream. Then Boncilla Vanishing Cream. Boncilla Powder completes the treatment.

SIXPENCE By KATHERINE MANSFIELD

Something Had to Be Done About Dicky . . . They Decided It Was the Painful Duty of a Father

CHILDREN are unaccountable little creatures. Why should a small boy like Dicky, good as gold as a rule, sensitive, affectionate, obedient, and marvelously sensible for his age, have moods when, without the slightest warning, he suddenly went "mad dog," as his sisters called it, and there was no doing anything with him.

"Dicky, come here! Come here, sir, at once! Do you hear your mother calling you? Dicky!"

But Dicky wouldn't come. O, he heard right enough. A clear, ringing little laugh was his only reply. And away he flew! hiding, running through the uncut hay on the lawn, dashing past the woodshed, making a rush for the kitchen garden, and there dodging, peering at his mother from behind the mossy apple trunks and leaping up and down like a wild Indian.

It had begun at tea time. While Dicky's mother and Mrs. Spears, who was spending the afternoon with her, were quietly sitting over their sewing in the drawing room, this, according to the servant girl, was what had happened at the children's tea. They were eating their first bread and butter as nicely and quietly as you please, and the servant girl had just poured out the milk and water, when Dicky had suddenly seized the bread plate, put it upside down on his head, and clutched the bread knife.

"Look at me!" he shouted.

His startled little sisters looked, and before the servant girl could get there, the bread plate wobbled, slid, flew to the floor and broke into shivers. At this awful point the little girls lifted up their voices and shrieked their loudest.

"Mother, come and look what he's done!"

"Dicky's broke a great big plate!"

"Come and stop him, mother!"

You can imagine how mother came flying. But she was too late. Dicky had leaped out of his chair, run through the French windows on to the veranda and, well—there she stood—popping her thimble on and off, helpless. What could she do? She couldn't chase after the child. She couldn't stalk Dicky among the apples and damsons. That would be too undignified. It was more than annoying; it was exasperating. Especially as Mrs. Spears, Mrs. Spears of all people, whose two boys were so exemplary, was waiting for her in the drawing room.

"Very well, Dicky," she cried, "I shall have to think of some way of punishing you."

"I don't care," sounded the high little voice, and again there came that ringing laugh. The child was quite beside himself.

"MRS. SPEARS, I don't know how to apologize for leaving you by yourself like this."

"It's quite all right, Mrs. Bendall," said Mrs. Spears, in her soft, sugary voice, and raising her eyebrows in the way she had. She seemed to smile to herself as she stroked the gathers. "These little things will happen from time to time. I only hope it was nothing serious."

"It was Dicky," said Mrs. Bendall, looking rather helplessly for her only fine needle. And she explained the whole affair to Mrs. Spears. "And the worst of it is, I don't know how to cure him. Nothing, when he's in that mood, seems to have the slightest effect on him."

Mrs. Spears opened her pale eyes. "Not even a whipping?" said she.

But Mrs. Bendall, threading the needle, pursed up her lips. "We never have whipped the children," she said. "The girls never seem to have needed it. And Dicky is such a baby, and the only boy. Somehow. . . ."

"O, my dear," said Mrs. Spears, and she laid her sewing down. "I don't wonder Dicky has these little outbreaks. You don't mind my saying so? But I'm sure you make a great mistake in trying to bring up children without whipping them. Nothing really takes its place. And I speak from experience, my dear. I used to try gentler measures"—Mrs. Spears drew in her breath with a little hissing sound—"soaping the boys' tongues, for instance, with yellow soap, or making them stand on the table for the whole of Saturday afternoon. But, no, believe me," said Mrs. Spears, "there is nothing, there is nothing like handing them over to their father."

Mrs. Bendall, in her heart of hearts, was dreadfully shocked to hear of that yellow soap. But Mrs. Spears seemed to take it so much for granted that she did too.

"Their father," she said. "Then you don't whip them yourself?"

"Never." Mrs. Spears seemed quite shocked at the idea. "I don't think it's the mother's place to whip the children. It's the duty of the father. And, besides, he impresses them so much more."

"Yes, I can imagine that," said Mrs. Bendall, faintly.

"Now, my two boys," Mrs. Spears smiled kindly, encouragingly, at Mrs. Bendall, "would behave just like Dicky if they were not afraid to. As it is. . . ."

"O, your boys are perfect little models," cried Mrs. Bendall.

They were. Quieter, better behaved little boys, in the presence of grownups, could not be found. In fact, Mrs. Spears' callers often made the remark that you never would have known that there was a child in the house. There wasn't—very often.

In the front hall, under a large picture of fat, cheery old monks fishing by the riverside, there was a thick, dark horsewhip that had belonged to Mr. Spears' father. And for some reason the boys preferred to play out of sight of this, behind the dog kennel or in the tool house, or round about the dust bin.

"It's such a mistake," sighed Mrs. Spears, breathing softly as she folded her work, "to be weak with children when they are little. It's such a sad mistake, and one so easy to make. It's so unfair to the child. That is what one has to remember. Now, Dicky's little escapade this afternoon seemed to me as though he'd done it on purpose. It was the child's way of showing you that he needed a whipping."

"Do you really think so?" Mrs. Bendall was a weak little thing, and this impressed her very much.

"I do; I feel sure of it. And a sharp reminder now and then," cried Mrs. Spears in quite a professional manner, "administered by the father, will save you so much trouble in the future. Believe me, my dear." She put her dry, cold hand over Mrs. Bendall's.

"I shall speak to Edward the moment he comes in," said Dicky's mother firmly.

THE children had gone to bed before the garden gate banged and Dicky's father staggered up the steep concrete steps, carrying his bicycle. It had been a bad day at the office. He was hot, dusty, tired out.

But by this time Mrs. Bendall had become quite excited over the new plan, and she opened the door to him herself.

"O, Edward, I'm so thankful you have come home," she cried.

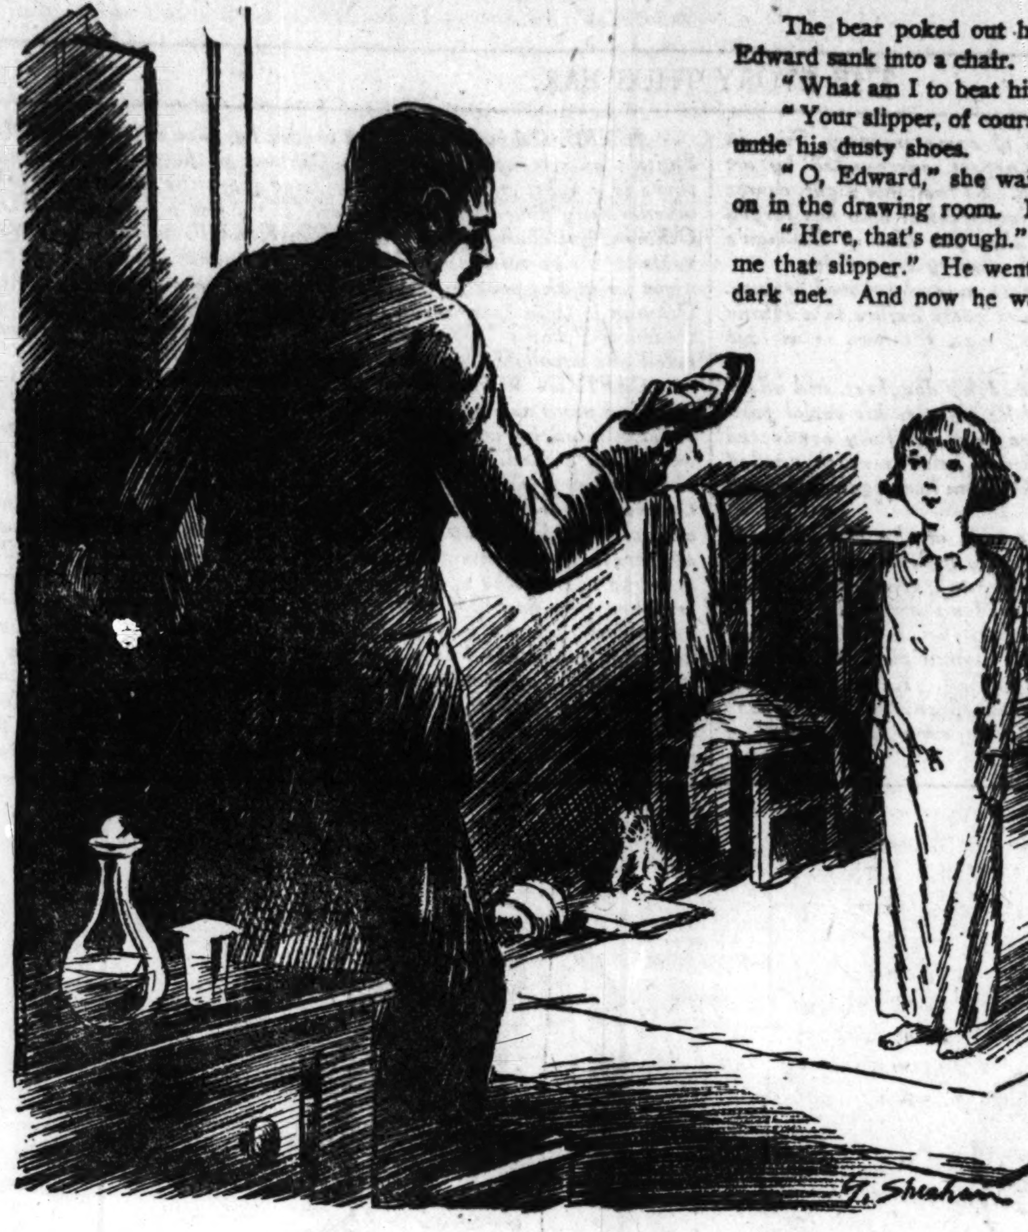
"Why, what's happened?" Edward lowered the bicycle and took off his hat. A red, angry pucker showed where the brim had pressed. "What's up?"

"Come—come into the drawing room," said Mrs. Bendall, speaking fast. "I simply can't tell you how naughty Dicky has been. You have no idea—you can't have, at the office all day—how a child of that age can behave. He's been simply dreadful. I have no control over him—none. I've tried everything, Edward, but it's all no use. The only thing to do," she finished, breathlessly, "is to whip him—is for you to whip him, Edward."

In the corner of the drawing room there was a whatnot, and on the top shelf stood a brown china bear with a painted tongue. It seemed in the shadow to be grinning at Dicky's father, to be saying, "Hooray, this is what you've come home to!"

"But why on earth should I start whipping him?" said Edward, staring at the bear. "We've never done it before."

"Because," said his wife, "don't you see, it's the only thing to do. I can't control the child." Her words flew from her lips. They beat round him, beat round his tired head. "We can't possibly afford a nurse. The servant girl has more than enough to do. And his naughtiness is beyond words. You don't understand, Edward; you can't, you're at the office all day."



G. Sheahan

"Well, Dicky, you know what I've come for."

The bear poked out his tongue. The scolding voice went on. Edward sank into a chair.

"What am I to beat him with?" he said, weakly.

"Your slipper, of course," said his wife. And she knelt down to untie his dusty shoes.

"O, Edward," she wailed, "you've still got your cycling clips on in the drawing room. No, really——"

"Here, that's enough." Edward nearly pushed her away. "Give me that slipper." He went up the stairs. He felt like a man in a dark net. And now he wanted to beat Dicky. Yes, damn it, he wanted to beat something. My God, what a life! The dust was still in his hot eyes, his arms felt heavy.

He pushed open the door of Dick's slip of a room. Dicky was standing in the middle of the floor in his nightshirt. At the sight of him Edward's heart gave a warm throb of rage.

"Well, Dicky, you know what I've come for," said Edward. Dicky made no reply.

"I've come to give you a whipping."

No answer.

"Lift up your nightshirt."

At that Dicky looked up. He flushed a deep pink. "Must I?" he whispered.

"Come on, now. Be quick about it," said Edward, and, grasping the slipper, he gave Dicky three hard slaps.

"There, that'll teach you to behave properly to your mother."

Dicky stood there, hanging his head.

"Look sharp and get into bed," said his father.

Still he did not move. But a shaking voice said, "I've not done my teeth yet, daddy."

"Eh, what's that?"

Dicky looked up. His lips were quivering, but his eyes were dry. He hadn't made a sound or shed a tear. Only he swallowed and said, huskily, "I haven't done my teeth, daddy."

But at the sight of that little face Edward turned and, not knowing what he was doing, he bolted from the room, down the stairs, and out into the garden. Good God! What had he done? He strode along and hid in the shadow of the pear tree by the hedge. Whipped Dicky—whipped his little man with a slipper—and what the devil for? He didn't even know. Suddenly he banged into his room—and there was the little chap in his nightshirt. Dicky's father groaned and held on to the hedge. And he didn't cry. Never a tear. If only he'd cried or got angry. But that "daddy!" And again he heard the quivering whisper. Forgiving like that without a word. But he'd never forgive himself—never. Coward! Fool! Brute! And suddenly he remembered the time when Dicky had fallen off his knee and sprained his wrist while they were playing together. He hadn't cried then, either. And that was the little hero he had just whipped.

SOMETHING'S got to be done about this, thought Edward. He strode back to the house, up the stairs, into Dicky's room. The little boy was lying in bed. In the half light his dark head, with the square fringe, showed plain against the pale pillow. He was lying quite still, and even now he wasn't crying. Edward shut the door and leaned against it. What he wanted to do was to kneel down by Dicky's bed and cry himself and beg to be forgiven. But, of course, one can't do that sort of thing. He felt awkward, and his heart was wrung.

"Not asleep yet, Dicky?" he said lightly.

"No, daddy."

Edward came over and sat down on his boy's bed, and Dicky looked at him through his long lashes.

"Nothing the matter, little chap, is there?" said Edward, half whispering.

"No-o, daddy," came from Dicky.

Edward put out his hand, and carefully he took Dicky's hot little paw.

"You—you mustn't think any more of what happened just now, little man," he said, huskily. "See? That's all over now. That's forgotten. That's never going to happen again. See?"

"Yes, daddy."

"So the thing to do now is to buck up, little chap," said Edward, "and to smile." And he tried himself an extraordinary trembling apology for a smile. "To forget all about it—to—eh? Little man. . . . Old boy. . . ."

Dicky lay as before. This was terrible. Dicky's father sprang up and went over to the window. It was nearly dark in the garden. The servant girl had run out, and she was snatching, twitching some white cloths off the bushes and piling them over her arm. But in the boundless sky the evening star shone, and a big gum tree, black against the pale glow, moved its long leaves softly. All this he saw, while he felt in his trouser pocket for his money. Bringing it out, he chose a new sixpence and went back to Dicky.

"Here you are, little chap. Buy yourself something," said Edward, softly, laying the sixpence on Dicky's pillow.

But could even that—could even a whole sixpence—blot out what had been?

The Affair at Othman's by Will Payne

INSTALLMENT XIII.

The Grand Gesture.

IN the silence that followed his confession, Nelson Barlow had mysteriously collapsed again, the brief restoration of his former self vanishing. He looked gray and withered. When Kendall first knew him his lean face was more deeply lined than a face of that age ought to be; there had been something unhealthy in his bright, nervous eyes. But now he looked positively old, a shell of a man. His face twisted in a bitter distortion as he took a slow look around his distinguished room.

"It's not much, Kendall," he said. "But a man hates to leave it—for good. I've made a great mess of it all through. Let me alone tonight. I'd like to look at a few of the old books and things. I'd like to sleep in the old bed again and shave myself in the bathtub in the morning. I always liked that. I'll go to the police with you in the morning." Simply as an urchin, he put up his hand and wiped the tears from his cheeks. And then, for a moment, he debated whether he should tell Kendall something more; but finally let the impulse pass.

Kendall had to swallow down the lump in his throat. Surely it was sad, when a man began with so much that was bright and pleasant and promising—and brutal, all things considered, to drive him further. But there was something inherently unstable about this man, and Kendall had Flora to think of.

So he suggested, as gently as possible: "Let's put it down on paper. I'll write it out."

"Very well, if you wish," Barlow replied indifferently.

Kendall got paper, pen, and ink, and wrote out the statement as briefly as possible, without omitting any vital point. Barlow read it over without comment, and signed it. It was a sort of death warrant, and he stared down at the paper an instant, then looked up at Kendall.

"You're not to use that until morning. I want to be left alone tonight."

Kendall had feared that Nelson would insist upon keeping the confession, so he conceded this point readily: "I'll say nothing to anybody tonight." He folded the sheets and put them in his pocket. "Shall I call for you here in the morning?"

"No; I'll meet you over there. Nine o'clock. Will that suit?"

"I'll be there at nine."

This was a bitter business. The least said and the sooner it was over with, the better. Kendall knew Nelson wanted to be alone now. They shook hands silently, and the reporter went out—with a certain awe in his mind.

NELSON turned his head to look at a small bookcase which held some treasured volumes; his eyes moved on to the two beautifully blue vases on the mantel; practically whatever he had saved up in the fourteen years since leaving college was in this room; a sort of Robinson Crusoe surveying what he had retrieved from the wreck. But he did not move toward any of the objects.

Welbasky had released him about noon. After a bath and change of clothes, he had gone up to the club which he most frequented. There was something deadly in the air up there, as though some invisible barrier had been erected between himself and his fellow members. He could stand close to them, say "Hello," and so forth, but always as though he talked to them through bars. He seemed to have a sort of leprosy so that men feared to touch him. A candid friend soon gave him the explanation. His embezzlement and forgery had not been published in the newspapers, as yet. But the contemptuous president of the cartridge company had made no secret of it, since the police knew the facts and suspected Barlow of killing Othman. The president had talked quite freely, and that was just the same to Nelson as though it had been published in the newspapers. The people who made up his world knew it. Probably he would be expected to resign from his clubs. Embezzlement, forgery, and a powerful suspicion of murder made a tall social handicap. In the court that he really cared for he had already been tried, convicted, and sentenced. Done for!

But the murder was solved and Flora Marsden exculpated! That was what Kendall had to think about in his threadbare lodgings. She would remain in detention that night and the newspapers would be busy with her name in the morning; but by ten o'clock her release would come. There was one nettle, namely, Barlow's constitutional instability. Might he get panic stricken and try to back out of it?

The reporter was at police headquarters a little before nine next morning, to wait for Nelson; but the moment he appeared, before he had asked for anybody, he was told that Captain Welbasky wished to see him at once; had just telephoned his lodging.

The captain handed him a sheet of note paper on which was written: "I killed Othman. Phillip Kendall has the confession. Nelson Barlow."

"Shot himself some time last night," said Welbasky. "His body was found a little while ago, and that." He nodded toward the sheet of paper.

Kendall thought his nerves, by that time, were fireproof; but his hand shook as he got the folded sheets from his breast pocket. It appeared odd now that he hadn't thought of this denouement, but it really had not occurred to him. Some way, shooting himself seemed almost as much out of Nelson Barlow's character as shooting Othman. He told Welbasky what had happened the night before, and gave him the signed confession.

The policeman read it over slowly, evidently matching it up in his mind, and laid it on the desk. "You best sign as a witness," he observed drily, and watched while Kendall affixed his signature.

Welbasky picked the document up again, glanced down the second sheet, folded the sheets together, tapped the desk with the sheaf, deliberating, brooding. This ended the Othman murder so far as the police were concerned. Here was the signed and witnessed confession of the murderer, who had sealed it by his own self-inflicted death. And it meant the prompt release of Flora Marsden. Humanly, Welbasky wanted to release her, to open the grim cage, and let the pretty bird spread her wings in the free air. But he was a policeman. He turned his brooding eyes to Kendall and announced, with contempt:

"The man lied. He didn't kill Othman."

"Why do you say so?" Kendall demanded.

WELBASKY ran a hand down his sleek yellow mane, and replied, grimly, all policeman: "You believe Miss Marsden. I don't. There was always a hole in her story. I've made no point of it so far, but it was always there. She says she was on the stairs, maybe forty feet away in a bee line, when she heard a sound like a door slamming or a piece of furniture falling over—a muffled sound. By her own account that would have been when he was shot. The butler heard it, too, and came out in the hall to listen. There was one door, a good, ordinary house door, between her and the shot. A pistol don't sound that way through one door at a distance of forty feet. It's a crack, sharp, explosive.

"I made no point of that in talking with her. I wasn't trying to trip her. But I did ask her particularly about the door. When she struck Othman and ran, the door was closed. It opens outward from the room. She opened the door and ran out. Othman was a bit dazed for the instant, but there was some idea of pursuit in her mind. So she shut the door after her. She's clear and positive about that. You see my object in going over that carefully, for if the door was open she must have identified the sound as a pistol shot. But she's sure she shut the door after her. She couldn't possibly have shut the door after her without seeing Barlow if he had been behind the door. Do you see? Her story squarely contradicts his.

"He says he went downstairs in the rear elevator, let himself out of the servants' door, hid the pistol, and came up again in the rear elevator. But he didn't. From the first, that automatic elevator at the rear of the house was a capital point. At the beginning I checked it up. If Barlow's story was true, that elevator would have been up at the fourth floor where he left it. But it wasn't. It was down at the first floor where it usually stood. Jenks went up in it after he washed his hands. He says so, and he couldn't have got up any other way. That running out of doors to hide one gun and running back again, when he had a second gun in his pocket, then running down to the library to hide the second gun, in a house full of servants, with a risk of being seen any minute, sounds mighty fishy anyway. But the door and the elevator show his story is a lie."

Contemptuously, Welbasky dropped the confession on the desk and smoothed down his sleek hair again. "I don't want to hurt that young lady, Kendall. I'd be glad to see her go out of here free as air. I'll turn this thing over to the district attorney. It's up to him now. If he's satisfied, I've nothing to say. But if he asks my opinion I'll tell him this confession is a lie; Barlow never killed Othman; at least, not at all in the way he says he did."

With more emotion than Kendall had yet seen him exhibit, partly, it semed, an emotion of anger, the policeman exclaimed: "Don't you see how it runs against her? Of course, this stuff has to go to the newspapers; Barlow confesses he killed Othman and commits suicide. If the district attorney brings Miss Marsden to we'll nail it to her. You see where that leaves her. She deni when she's guilty; an innocent man, attempting to shield her, himself and leaves a false confession. What sympathy will she Sympathy was always her trump."

Again Kendall was bound to respect the policeman, and th was no denying the cogency of those points of the door and the e vator. Poor Barlow, futile even in his death, going out of the wo with only an ineffectual lie! Somehow, way down in his heart, Ke dall had feared something like this; there had been an ineradic doubt that Nelson could be the means of saving Flora; somehow other the man would have to fail.

WHAT had happened to Nelson Barlow was simple enou Always, at bottom, he had been fond of Flora Marsden. H self-respect had suffered a shattering blow. His friends and as ciates, the whole world that he cared about, knew he was a thief a a forger, and cast him out with contempt. There was an instinc urge to recover his self-esteem. Kendall's statement of the posi of Flora Marsden offered a means of doing it. He could clear her taking the crime upon himself, confessing to the murder, and thus sacrificing himself for an innocent and beloved woman, make his e from the stage in the manner of heroic tragedy. That appeal powerfully to his vivid, dramatic, unballasted imagination. He ma the grand gesture, signing the confession. An hour after Kend left him starkly facing the inevitable consequences of that act, would perhaps have equivocated, evaded, put it off somehow. B the signed confession was already in Kendall's pocket. He could withdraw. He couldn't face Welbasky and the whole endless torme of stone walls, iron bars, cross-examinations, conviction, and consig ment to hell on earth. In sheer baffled desperation he blew out brains, and died in failure as he had lived.

In part Kendall apprehended this, but he now had Flora to thi of in a more disadvantageous position than ever, for if the distric attorney refused to accept Barlow's confession, his suicide wo react upon her. As one immediate result of such refusal, a fo charge of murder would be lodged against her. A desperate ca required a desperate remedy.

"Give me a couple of good men, will you?" Kendall asked. "O'Rourke for one. I want to search a flat on Forty-fifth street."

He told Welbasky then how Jenks had been going back and forth to Mrs. Josephine Smith's and sketched Mrs. Smith's part in the story. With no faith in any theory that involved Jenks, but by way of a boon to a condemned man, the captain granted the request. With two capable aides, therefore, Kendall started for Forty-fifth street.

But Mrs. Josephine Smith had other callers that morning. She and Marie Marsh were dressed for the street, and about to leave the little apartment, when there came a ring from the vestibule downstairs. Mrs. Smith pressed the button to unlock the lower door and opened the door into the hall, then she and Marie stood awaiting the caller, who could see that the ladies were ready to go out and would, therefore, make the call brief. But whatever other careless conjecture Mrs. Smith may have had in mind respecting this early ring at her bell, she was not in the least prepared for the pair that actually came into sight at the open door, stout, hard, resolute Mrs. Kate Chadwick, in a ridiculous hat and a coat like a farmhand's ulster, accompanied by a uniformed policeman whose mild air rather suggested an attache of a juvenile court. Mrs. Chadwick, getting the address from Stamford Marsden, had come to recover her abducted ward.

But the first sight of the ward seemed to disconcert the policeman. What he had in mind was a truant juvenile. This young woman certainly looked of age. Mrs. Josephine Smith looked like a woman who knew her rights and was prepared to defend them. The net result of the conversation was that Marie Marsh said she was twenty-two years old, had come with Mrs. Smith of her own free will, had been well treated, and wished to remain there. The somewhat crestfallen policeman could only advise the resolute country woman at his side that in such a case he could do nothing. He suggested somewhat vaguely that Mrs. Chadwick would have to get herself appointed the young lady's guardian. Mrs. Chadwick, defeated in the first encounter, remarked grimly that she would come again.

Mrs. Josephine Smith did not doubt that she would, which gave her something unpleasant to think about. Her capable mind was engaged with it as she and Marie set out on their delayed shopping tour. Mrs. Chadwick would be coming back. Mrs. Smith's situation was already rather delicate, and this square jawed country woman from Maine introduced another hazard. Fortunately Marie never demanded attention or conversation from her companion, being happy to walk along the streets in bright winter weather, looking at the buildings and the traffic, and peeping into shop windows, so Mrs. Smith was able to cogitate undisturbed with only a mechanical attention to their course.

First, they visited Mrs. Bertha Littleton's beauty parlor in the Kingsel Apartment building, where Mrs. Smith purchased, from the proprietor, a box of face powder and two or three other like articles. She then led Marie over to Fifth avenue continuing down that thoroughfare and stopping now and then at a shop. For one thing Mrs. Smith bought a handsome traveling bag, directing that it be delivered to her flat on Forty-fifth street that afternoon. But if the most capable detective on the force had shadowed them from beginning to end, he would have seen nothing but just two women out shopping, buying ordinary articles such as women shoppers are always requiring.

NOW when the car containing Phillip Kendall and the two men from Welbasky's staff crossed Lexington avenue in Forty-fifth street, Mrs. Smith and Marie were coming out of the oak street door. A moment later Kendall recognized them on the sidewalk. But that was all the better, since what he wanted was the flat, not the women, and if the women were out he would be spared the bother of using the convenient search warrant which can always be had at short notice to give legal color to intrusion into a private dwelling. Adept Sergeant O'Rourke had no difficulty in opening both the inner vestibule door and the door to Mrs. Smith's flat. They had the place to themselves, and began searching.

The apartment contained a small sitting room, two smaller bedrooms, a miniature bath, and a kitchenette, all neatly but simply furnished. It occupied the rear half of the third floor of the building. The double doors in the north wall of the sitting room, now fastened with a stout bolt, evidently communicated with the apartment which occupied the front half of that floor, so that the two flats could be thrown together and used as one. That arrangement aroused Sergeant O'Rourke's curiosity. Listening at the double doors convinced him there was nobody in the front flat. He slipped the bolt; there was no fastening on the other side; the door swung open.

The searchers stepped into a bedroom, quite twice as large as Mrs. Smith's sitting room and different in character. A beautiful silvery blue rug covered the floor. The walls were delicately papered

THE STORY THUS FAR.

FREDERICK OTHMAN, a man of some mystery, lives in New York in a house of forbidding aspect, surrounded by art treasures and other evidences of wealth. To him, one night, comes

NELSON BARLOW, a young society wastrel who has forged and embezzled under circumstances that put him in Othman's power. From Barlow Othman worms a story concerning

STAMFORD MARSDEN, a business man of reputed probity. The tale has to do with a girl, abandoned years before in a Maine village, and a child, supposedly Marsden's. Othman is in love with

FLORA MARSDEN, Stamford Marsden's daughter, and offers to help Barlow out of his difficulties if he will use his social position to bring about the match. There is a skillfully conducted courtship, in the course of which Othman extends much needed financial aid to Marsden. Meanwhile Othman has acquired control of a paper on which

PHILLIP KENDALL, a distant cousin of the Marsdens, is working as a reporter. Kendall, hopelessly in love with Flora, is not at all pleased when Othman directs him to investigate the story about her father's past. He finds Marsden's supposed child in Maine, however, and presently this girl, known as Marie Marsh, turns up in New York in the care of a certain Mrs. Smith, who seems to have inclinations toward blackmail. Kendall suspects that Othman is manipulating the threatened scandal to increase his influence over the Marsdens. He is sure of it when he recognizes

JENKS, Othman's valet, as a man he once saw leaving Mrs. Smith's apartment. He accuses Othman of perpetrating a fake, there is a fight, and Kendall is ejected from the house by Jenks, murderously flourishing a revolver. Flora has promised to marry Othman, but changes her mind when Kendall, in desperation, reveals to her certain things he has learned about the man. On the night when she goes to Othman's house to break her engagement Othman is found murdered in the room in which his greatest art treasure, Titian's "Daphne," is hung. Flora admits having quarreled and struggled with Othman, but tells CAPTAIN WELBASKY, of the police, that she left before anything more serious occurred. Jenks, the valet, offers an alibi, substantiated by witnesses, to the effect that he had been sent out on an errand. Barlow was in the house at the time of the shooting, and when the papers proving his forgery are found at Othman's, indicating a motive for murder, he is arrested. Then a revolver is picked up in the Othman driveway, a woman witness appears with a convincing story of having seen Flora Marsden stooping over at the spot where the weapon was found, and Flora is taken into custody. All the time Kendall has been working ceaselessly on the theory that there has been a jewel robbery and that Jenks has had a part in it. He has trailed the man to Mrs. Smith's apartment, and finds him doing other things that seem to him suspicious. He is amazed, therefore, when Barlow, released after Flora's arrest, announces that he committed the murder and will give himself up again to the police in the morning.

Mrs. Chadwick had come to recover her abducted ward.

THE AFFAIR AT OTHMAN'S - - - - - - By Will Payne

The canopied bed in the corner would have distinguished the show window of an antique shop. A luxurious and exacting lady might have claimed this room as it stood, only it was badly in need of airing and seemed to have been long unoccupied. The small blue and white bathroom had the same air. One of the stories that Pat Cullen had told about Othman came to Kendall's mind. This might have been its scene; and such stories as that might account for Mrs. Josephine Smith's relations with Othman.

This intrusion into the front room came after they had thoroughly searched Mrs. Smith's apartment proper. They were still searching the front bedroom when Mrs. Smith appeared in the double doorway to her own sitting room. Kendall was aware of her before she spoke, by some change in the light, and looked around. Marie Marsh stood in the sitting room behind her, round eyed with surprise.

"Looking for something?" Mrs. Smith inquired with mock politeness.

It was then past one o'clock. This expert, microscopical searching had been going on for more than three hours. They had found nothing. It was about the last throw. Kendall had been thinking a good deal about Mrs. Smith. He thought she was a crook and that one crook will always betray another for a price. And he was desperate, the last strands of precious time slipping through his fingers. He felt in his bones that tomorrow would be too late.

"I'd like a talk with you," he said.

MRS. SMITH turned back into the sitting room. Following her, Kendall pulled the door to behind them. Docile Marie Marsh slipped out of sight.

"Let's go back a little," the reporter began. "Frederic Othman had some valuable jewels. They were a part of the Russian crown jewels that bolshevist agents carried to London. There was a lot about it in the London newspapers at the time. They were going to subsidize a radical newspaper and so on. But the best part of the game disappeared somehow, according to the newspaper accounts. They were smuggled over here and Othman bought them. A man whom the papers called Karoff was assassinated immediately after leaving Othman's house. That's what an advertisement in the Forum last Saturday meant."

Mrs. Smith was listening without a sign, her intelligent gray green eyes on the reporter's face. As he paused she observed, with a straight face, "Jewels are always interesting to a woman."

"Last Saturday night Jenks borrowed your typewriter. He carried it to Othman's house from here. I saw him."

"Typewriters are not so exciting," she remarked.

"Late yesterday afternoon he left Othman's house with the typewriter and came here. The jewels were in the typewriter case. That's what he borrowed the typewriter for—something he could carry out of the house without suspicion. You can stick a peck of unset diamonds around the typewriter in one of those cases."

"Jewels again," she murmured.

"Jenks is a thorough crook," the reporter went on. "He shot Othman. He isn't going to get out of town; I promise you that. The police have never taken the least stock in this jewel business. They're not looking for jewels or thinking of them. Give me Jenks and I'll forget the jewels, too."

The intelligent gray green eyes rested steadily upon him for a moment; evidently a brisk activity was going on in the brain behind them. Then a slow, satirical smile spread over Mrs. Smith's sallow, unhandsome face.

"It's a generous offer," she said, "and I accept it. Jenks is yours. Forget the jewels. Forget your name if you want to. Treat Jenks kindly. He's always been used to a good home." She laughed outright.

But Kendall persisted earnestly: "It's the most generous offer you'll get. You know where those jewels are. Jenks came here with them in the typewriter case yesterday afternoon. I saw him take a southbound Madison avenue car. Nobody except you and Jenks knows where they are. Give me Jenks. You can do it. I'll forget the jewels. When he's locked up for the murder of Othman, you can snap your fingers at him."

"I can do it now. See?" She snapped her fingers. The mocking smile spread over her homely face again. "I'd snap them at you, only you're such a nice young man. But if you want to save those blockheads a little more trouble, I'll tell you, man to man, there are no jewels here. If you'll promise not to tell anybody," she laughed, "I'll tell you something else about those jewels, in confidence. They're not anywhere except in your imagination."

He shut his jaw and glowered at her, repeating, "Jenks is not going to get away!"

"I hope not," she said; "I enjoy his company. You amuse me, too."

The austerely pious air with which she first met him was now completely laid aside, like a discarded mask. Nothing but mockery was to be had from her. O'Rourke and his companion finished their search of the front room, and found nothing. Mrs. Smith laughed at the trio as they departed empty handed. Always empty handed, and this was almost the last throw!

WHEN Kendall left the Fofty-fifth street building, Lawyer Edmund Hayes was talking with his client in the house of detention. The district attorney had declined to accept the confession of Nelson Barlow as a solution of the Othman murder; the discrepancies, as pointed out by Captain Welbasky, were too glaring. Nevertheless, for a short time the law withheld its hand; no formal charge of murder had been entered against Flora. The law was not without a sense of dramatic values. Barlow's suicide and confession were fresh from the press—a sufficient sensation for that day's public consumption. To charge Flora Marsden with murder immediately on the heels of that might look precipitate; and it would be sure to confuse the audience. Besides, the district attorney, like Welbasky, was quite willing to hold off a while in a confident feeling that she would soon confess and save further trouble.

Edmund Hayes, by this time, was thoroughly acquainted with the evidence in the case. His round, ill drawn face, with its noble brow and nubbin chin, remained as nearly expressionless as possible, and nothing was to be made of his depthless light blue eyes; but he felt that he was dealing with an extraordinary and baffling client.

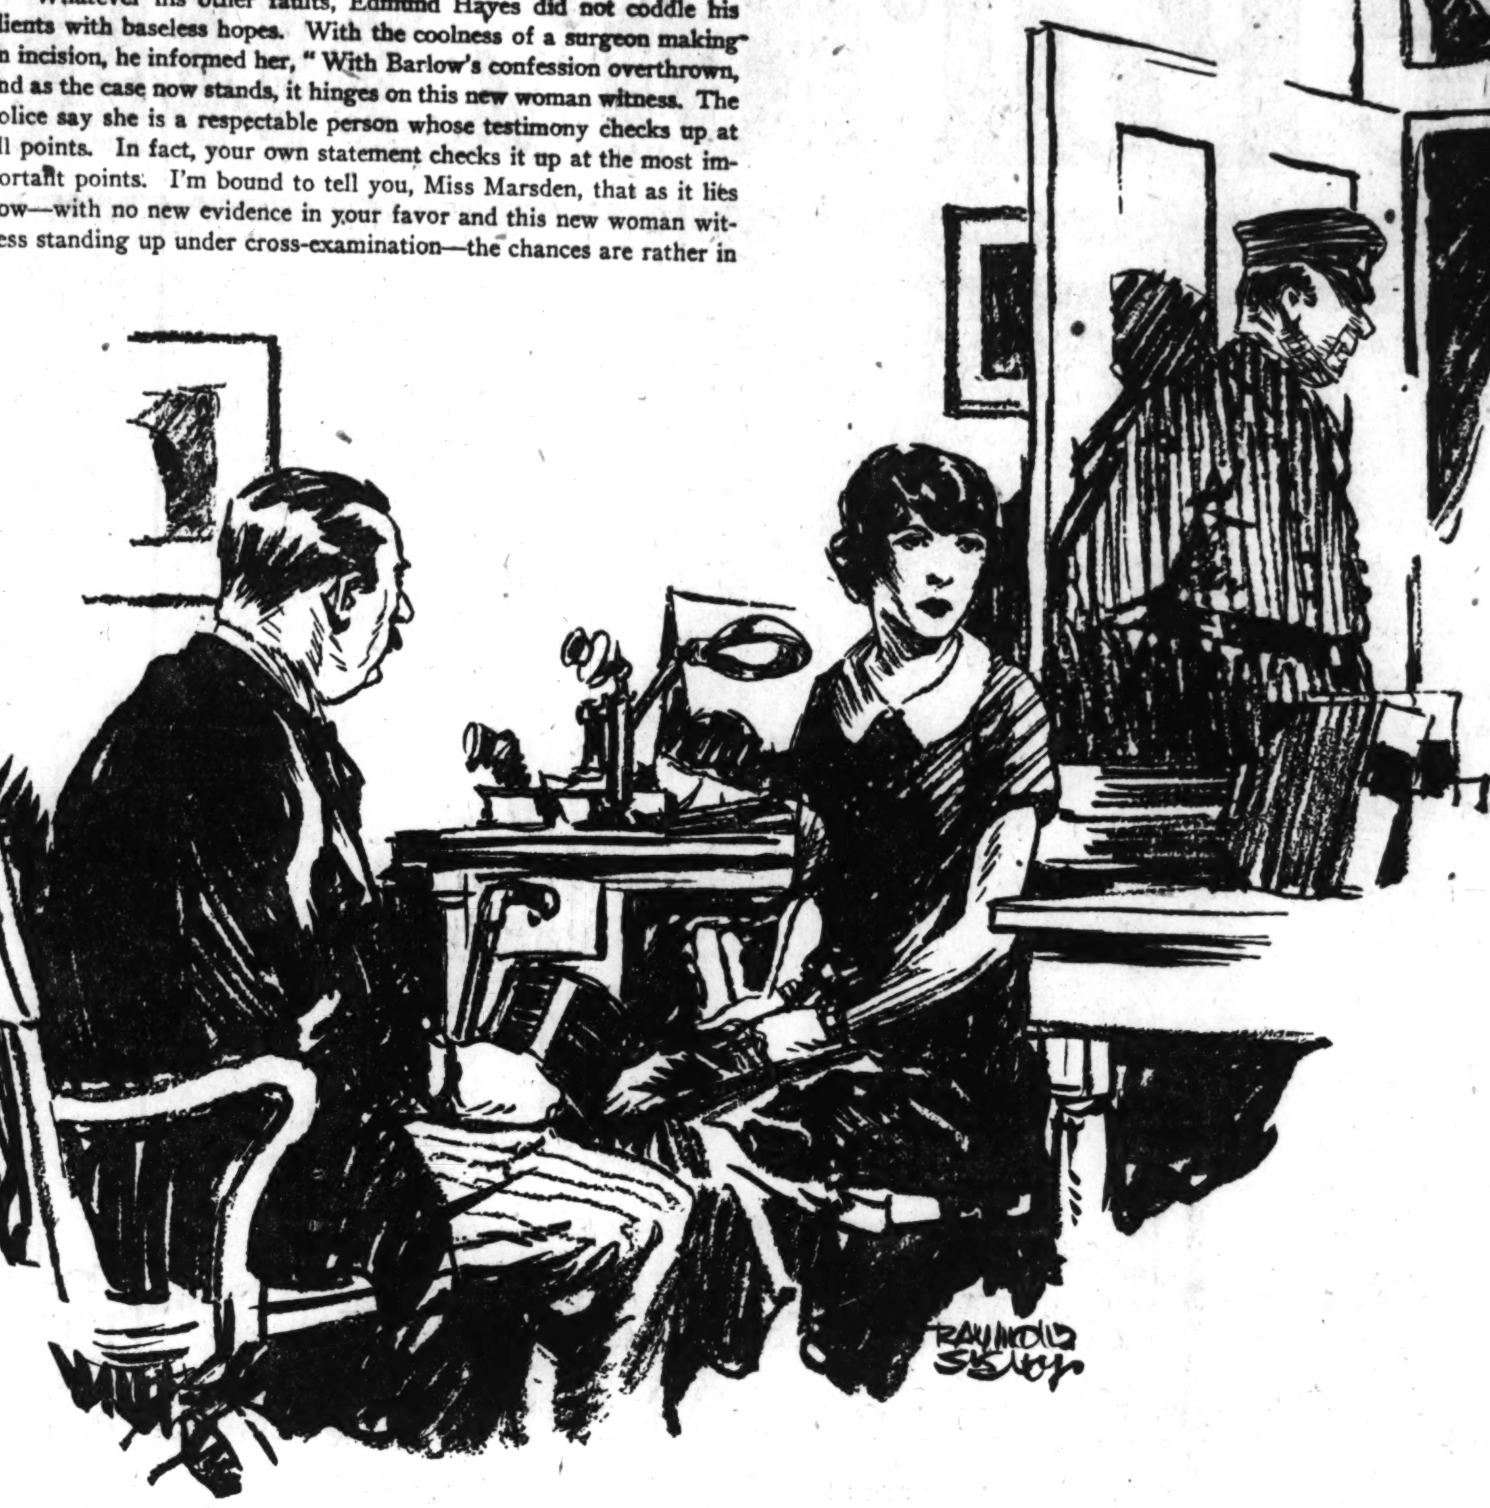
"Then you seem to remember, Miss Marsden, that you turned round and shut the door behind you," he said, coming back to that crucial point. "Your memory appears to be clear on that."

She knew it was inexpedient for her to remember that, and thought it over again before answering with a certain helplessness: "All I can say, Mr. Hayes, is that I have that picture of it in my mind. I told Captain Welbasky so at first, and it still seems clear to me. I suppose I shall have to say that, as I remember it, I turned and shut the door behind me."

Mr. Hayes waited a moment and observed, "That statement from you, with the other discrepancy, would overthrow Barlow's confession, I fear."

She had a notion that this lawyer, whom she didn't much like, was putting her down for a willful young person who deliberately threw away her chances; but she could only admit, "I suppose it would."

Whatever his other faults, Edmund Hayes did not coddle his clients with baseless hopes. With the coolness of a surgeon making an incision, he informed her, "With Barlow's confession overthrown, and as the case now stands, it hinges on this new woman witness. The police say she is a respectable person whose testimony checks up at all points. In fact, your own statement checks it up at the most important points. I'm bound to tell you, Miss Marsden, that as it lies now—with no new evidence in your favor and this new woman witness standing up under cross-examination—the chances are rather in favor of a conviction. I think you can see yourself how it would look to a jury, supposing the jury believed this woman who says she saw you stoop down where the pistol was found. I don't wish you to deceive yourself."



"Othman attacked you, seized you, and so on. If you say that you then shot him in self-defense, you are in no danger; I'll guarantee that."

Flora's murmured "No" was an admission that she should not be led to deceive herself.

Hayes proceeded with his surgical operation: "If you confirmed Mr. Barlow's confession in the matter of the door, I believe we could overcome the difficulty about the elevator." He smiled at her, but she did not care for his smile. "I needn't tell you that your presence in court is a host. Juries are human. When they see you and hear you they'll want to acquit you. But you must give them a fair chance to do it. So if you corroborate Mr. Barlow in the matter of the door, I think we can manage the elevator. But a flat contradiction about the door from your own lips, you see, would be hard to overcome. We pretend that these things go by dry rules laid down in the books; but in fact they go a great deal on sympathy and emotion—and prejudice. A contradiction of Barlow from you would count for a lot more than a contradiction from Welbasky. I want you to understand it as it is, Miss Marsden."

Again she murmured assent.

"To put it in one way, the only danger you are in comes from yourself. Othman attacked you, seized you, and so on. If you say on the witness stand that you then shot him in self-defense, you are in no danger; I'll guarantee that. Much the same way with Barlow's confession. It will be your denial that overthrows it. The danger is from you, you see. I think you will understand that as you think it over."

She felt that this lawyer had a poor opinion of her disastrous denials, and wanted her to say that she shot Othman, or did not close the door behind her. She knit her brows in a puzzled little frown as she answered:

"Why, I'm no fanatic about it, Mr. Hayes, about telling the truth, I mean. I suppose I've told a million lies first and last. Everybody does. I'm no bigot about it. But it's all so dark and confused, this murder of Mr. Othman. I didn't tell Captain Welbasky the truth because I didn't want to bring Nelson Barlow into it and I didn't want to tell about Mr. Othman grabbing me in his arms. So I didn't tell Captain Welbasky the truth at first; and he tripped me up in a minute. It's all so dark and uncertain, you see. I feel that if I begin telling anything but the truth I'll get tangled up and found out. As though I were lost in the dark, and if I start wandering round I'll break my neck. So all I can do is just stand in my tracks and tell the exact truth. That's the way I feel about it."

Mr. Hayes thought it incumbent upon him to make the appropriate gesture by saying: "Of course, I would have you tell nothing but the truth." However, it seemed to her he said it rather ill naturedly, as though the blunt way in which she brought up the point were ill mannered. He added, "You must have seen this new woman witness when she identified you."

"There was a woman with Captain Welbasky and another police officer," Flora replied. "I noticed her as I walked through the room."

"Had you ever seen her before?"

"Not that I remember."

That was disappointing to the lawyer, because it corroborated the woman's statement that she had never seen Miss Marsden before Friday evening. All around that new woman witness looked like a tight stone wall. Hayes wished his client to understand just how tight and fatal she looked to him.

"As I see it now, it all hinges on her, Miss Marsden. Please make no further statements about the case to anybody, except to me. If you should—get any new light on it, you can send me word at any time. Meanwhile we can't attack this new witness until the police disclose her, and they'll not do that until they lay a formal charge against you. I understand that will be done tomorrow. Of course, there would be no trouble if you shot in self-defense; and if you corroborated Nelson Barlow about the door that would go a good way toward offsetting the woman witness. But, meanwhile, we must wait for a formal charge and a chance to look up this woman."

She knew the question was foolish, yet couldn't help asking it, in a toneless sort of voice, "The charge would be murder?"

"No doubt," he replied. "It couldn't well be anything else. You will be permitted to send for me at any time; and I have their word that they will use you well."

WHEN she was alone the lawyer's cool and dry "No doubt; it couldn't well be anything else" rang in her ears. And she tried to accustom herself to it by whispering the word "murder," a word of horror, that seemed to shut her out from life more inexorably than these walls did. She had an impression that Mr. Hayes regarded her as a sort of blockhead who might save herself from danger, but wouldn't. There were moments when she suffered the painful illusion of having already been shut off from life and buried alive in stone walls for a long while. But in fact she had been alone hardly half an hour when a summons came to meet another caller.

Leaving Mrs. Josephine Smith's with a desperate feeling that this was near the last throw, and that it had missed fire, Kendall turned back to police headquarters. He knew that only a blockhead would do it, yet he must try—doggedly keep on trying as long as he had breath in his body. Steadfast Captain Welbasky admitted him to the small private office, and he threw himself into the attack:

"I didn't find anything, captain. I know you've been square with me all through—and with her. But I want you to take a straight look at it again. If you do that you'll know, as well as I do, that she's innocent. She's no fool. She can think as well as you or I. She knows what she's facing. She understands exactly what this new woman's evidence means to her. And she knows perfectly that if she says Othman attacked her and she shot in self-defense, any jury will free her. She knows, too, that if she denies it and is still convicted it will go hard with her. She has everything to lose by denying it and nothing to gain. Only a lunatic would deny it if it were true. She must be innocent; her denial must be the truth. There's no other explanation of it."

Welbasky considered the point and gave a decisive little nod. "No court will take that view of it. This evidence will convict her in spite of her denial."

"Exactly!" said Kendall. "And she knows it. That's the point. By denying it she sticks her head in a noose. Then why would she deny it except that the denial is true? What a court will say and what a human being will say are two different things. I'm talking to you as a human being. What I ask is this: Don't put a formal charge of murder against her yet. You've got her now; you can hold her; justice can lose nothing. But murder's a terrible word, in a scandalous case of this kind, to stick to a young woman's name."

"The murder's been done," said Welbasky, grimly.

"But she didn't do it. I know she didn't. You must know if you think it over; for why should she deny it and ruin herself? I know, and you know, that a case like this doesn't happen just in a courtroom, or just in police headquarters. What counts most happens in the public mind. A hot enough public prejudice will as good as hang anybody. If millions of minds start painting a figure black, black it will be, no matter what a court says."

"I doubt it," the policeman growled.

"It's so," the reporter affirmed. "This is a play, a drama, staged for the whole city—why, yes, for the whole continent. It's got all the elements that would excite an audience over a stage play—Othman's wealth, a cloud about him, these scandals the papers are printing; then a beautiful young woman belonging to an old, distinguished family; then the mystery about the murder itself; then Nelson Barlow's suicide and confession. Everybody is stirred up about it. Millions of dramatically excited minds, working together, will stamp a character upon her, make her name a type. Why, after half a century the name of Josephine Mansfield has dramatic significance to a great many people who could hardly recall a single public man, except Grant, who was on the front pages with her when one of her lovers shot another. That's what I want to hold off from her, captain. Don't let it loose on her. Don't put the formal charges against her yet. There is some other explanation of this murder. There must be. Wait a while."

The plea disturbed the policeman, and he showed the disturbance, in a case that ought to be clear, by retorting impatiently, "Once you get into all this damned sentimental rot, there's no getting out! I don't run the newspapers, Kendall. I don't run the public. I have troubles enough trying to run this office, particularly when there's a mulish young outsider butting in. I can't take the newspapers and public into account. My job is to hunt up evidence and turn it over to the district attorney. That's what I've done in this case. It's up to him now. Talk to him if you want to." In fact, with that disturbance in his mind, Captain Welbasky grew quite angry. "You ought to know all that's out of my hands now and stop bothering me about it! In fact, the district attorney is going to lay a formal charge against her tomorrow, and I've nothing more to do with it!" And having blustered, he added, as a sort of complaint: "She ought to confess and save herself, and up."

Kendall took the sentence in silence for a moment, then said dully, "Well, let me see her again."

That was why Flora was summoned to meet a second caller.

Period Frocks Will Punctuate Summer Afternoons and Evenings

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The tailored mode is a kind of alarm clock. It is associated with mornings and seldom does it go off for afternoons. Of course, just now this assertion must be modified, for here in town the average fashionable woman is found at the restaurant tea hour in either tailored suit or tailored frock. When one speaks of afternoons, therefore, one refers to the summer variety.

It requires, indeed, no gift of prophecy to foretell the character of those frocks which we are going to don for garden parties and afternoon bridge. They are to be feminine—feminine as an excuse or a vanity bag. They will exist as an antidote for the walking stick and the boutonniere, the fob, and the sack coat. And their complete mission will be to obliterate that long span of years between the period when a fond lover spoke of his affianced bride as "a creature of such infinite sensibility, one endowed with such supreme graces of mind and person," and this present era when the most soaring rhapsody of love is "She's a good sport."

There is no news about the frilly afternoon. For many seasons past we have been plodding along the same Victorian road. The only difference between today and yesterday is an intensification of purpose. This year, what with our shawls and our scarfs, our ruffles and our lace, we are even more feminine than ever. Then, too, the contrast between the tailored effects of morning wear makes this insistence upon fluffy afternoons all the more dramatic and significant.

Several of the frocks on today's page give a good idea of what they are going to do about the formal summer afternoon. Take the frock at the right, for example. Perhaps you may not concede the justice of the surmise that it takes all those swallows to make a summer dress, but, even though you should be so recalcitrant, you will subscribe meekly enough to two principles for which this model stands. One of these is the popularity of chiffon, the medium selected here, and the other is the charm of the period silhouette.

The period frock has been installed in our wardrobes this many a year. Today, however, its popularity seems more firmly fixed than ever before. All winter long, both in New York and at the various southern resorts, this type of gown has been steadily advancing in favor. Thus several months ago at the Club Royals, one of our smartest dancing places, I was inevitably impressed by the number of fashionable girls who declared their allegiance to the fitted bodice and the bouffante skirt.

How does one account for the sustained fashion of this type of dress? The answer involves no great strain upon the intellect. It is simply this—to slim graceful youth there is nothing in the world so becoming. We all admit the faults of the mid-Victorians. We realize that they played croquet and went to archery meets. We have heard that they read "Lucille" and that they were given to weeping over locks of hair. Nevertheless, when it came to devising a frock for the slender young figure—well, they did those things better in the days of the parlor album than we do in the day of the parlor radio, and we can do nothing better than to accept the sum of their dress philosophy.

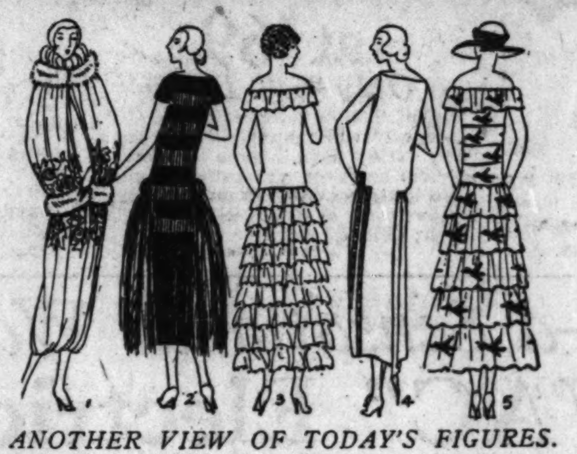
This frock I have just indicated is true to the spirit of those early days, both in its off the shoulder line and in the infinitude of ruffles which bedeck the full skirt. As regards the latter, ruffles are certainly one of the most respected bits of trimming of the summer afternoon or dance frock. Both chiffon and organdy creations find, in fact, that they can get along very well without outside help if they just ruffle along. The only admission of weakness comes as a rule from the bands or pipings that outline these frills. Thus this frock repeats the black of its printed design in the tiny edges of black chiffon on each ruffle.

Perhaps, as I have suggested, you may not be ornithological when it comes to dress. To say the truth, too, this thing of four and twenty blackbirds baked in your fashion pie is a trifle daring. This, however, constitutes no vital objection to the dress. It simply is a courageous member of the printed chiffon tribe, and if you do not relish the blackbirds winging their way over the white chiffon, you simply make a more conservative choice in pattern. The important thing is that printed chiffons are to be much worn this coming summer for both afternoon and evening. So much is the case that a friend of mine in Paris writes me that the fashion mecca, always cold to this type of frock for evening wear, is now doing the printed chiffon for 9 p. m.



ANOTHER VIEW OF TODAY'S FIGURES.

In this model we find one of those summery frocks which adapt themselves equally well to daylight and moonlight. One can wear this type of thing to the garden party or one can wear it at the evening dance.

In the center of the page we are giving another testimony to the popularity of the chiffon dress following mid-Victorian principles. Here cream colored fabric is used over a self-toned crepe slip, and not one intrusion of color is permitted to break the Alpine spell. On different lines, but in the same omnipresent material, is the charming model second from the right. This frock is found in pink—still the most fashionable of evening tints—and its double girdle is in crystal beads. The same frock would be equally delightful in green chiffon with bronze beads. By observing this latter formula we should be entirely in line with the most fashionable prejudice, for green—and especially green combined with either bronze or gold—has been much exploited for evening wear throughout the last few months.

This woman trails another of those Spanish shawls. Certainly by doing so she violates no modern system of ethics. The Spanish shawl is still with us and there seems to be only one break in the monotony of its appearance. This consists in the fact that whereas a former etiquette consisted in dipping a long point in the back, we now just draw it in a graceful circle about the shoulders.

On the page my chiffon frocks employ only local talent, with the exception of the beaded girdle on the one draped model. This is, of course, an exceedingly fashionable way of going about the subject. Yet it is quite as fashionable not to throw chiffon entirely upon its own resources. Still, as during the winter months, we trim many chiffons; and still we trim them with lace, with clipped ostrich, with marabout and beads. Lace in particular seems to have lost none of its former magic, and those chiffon frocks which repeat their own lace borders on the scarf or shawl are going to sway us all summer long.

There has been so much said about the matching scarf of the summer afternoon and evening frock that one almost overlooks the shawl. Yet such lack of emphasis is manifestly unfair. As a matter of fact, many of the fashionable scarfs have grown up into shawls—voluminous mantles which sweep down from the shoulders and often parallel in the back the hem of the gown.

To my way of thinking, the matching shawl is much lovelier in its effect than is the scarf, and when I say this I find I am thinking concretely of two of the most exquisite chiffon models I have gazed upon this season. The one was in pale yellow and its molded bodice presented as a rival trimming to the deep flounce of matching lace on its full skirt one shoulder strap of white gardenias. This was completed by a shawl which, also in yellow crepe and also bordered with lace, covered the wearer's bare arms and completely encircled her figure in the back.

The second model was a white chiffon made on the same period lines and this, instead of employing the familiar lace, showed a deep border formed by single flues of white ostrich plumes. As each of these floated out from the fairylike anchor of a single rhinestone, the result was one of incalculable grace and airiness—especially so since the self-fabric shawl showed the same ethereal wisps of feather and the same twinkle of rhinestones.

Ostrich, clipped ostrich, and marabou—these are undoubtedly the favored trimming paragraphs in the text of summer evening wraps. On the page, however, I show a lovely cape taken from a recent fashion show, which testifies to the fact that some exquisite fur is sometimes the choice of our most discriminating designers. In this case the gray chiffon, made on a foundation of gray silk, is collared and girdled in chinchilla. A tracery of silver embroidery is the final embellishment.

It goes without saying that "Thou shalt chiffon" is a commandment which has not robbed us entirely of our freedom of choice. Tulle and moire and taffeta and gros de Londres—all these manage to be quite as active as ever. Here again, however, we may trace the sway of the period frock, and here, through every variation of neck line and trimming, we may read the lesson that in our afternoons and evenings we are going to play hookey from tailored guise. Patterns by Clotilde 1934—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 40 inch material, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1679—Child's dress with bloomers. Size 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 2⅛ yards of 32, 36, or 44 inch material, with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1835—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2 yards of 36 inch material, with 8¾ yards of binding.

How to Use the Patterns

APRONS are something that any woman who does her own housekeeping must have, and there seems to be an endless variety of ways of cutting them. This pattern, No. 1835, is pretty, with the front and back all in one piece, and the back ending at the waist line and buttoning at each side of the bottom to the sides of the apron—thus holding it well in place.

To make the strap part that goes over each shoulder fit well, a dart is taken up on each shoulder.

The apron is really easy to cut and make, and will be pretty made of a plain color, with bound, faced, or piped edges of a different color; or the apron material can be figured, using a plain color for the finishing edges. Patch pockets add to the usefulness of this apron.

The material should be double in the back where the buttonholes are made, and a facing will make this right.

Pattern No. 1679 is a one piece slipon dress for a child, and bloomers are included in the pattern. The dress is slashed in the center front and these edges bound; the sleeves may be made full length or short, the long sleeves being gathered into wristbands and the short ones trimmed with bands that are pointed on the upper edges, matching the band on the bottom of the skirt.

Pongee, trimmed with a contrasting color, would be pretty; say light blue, tan, or brown. In fact, almost any color would look well. This contrasting color could be used as a piping to finish the points on the trimming bands. Neck and opening could be bound and the sash edges also. Chambray, gingham, percale, or cotton poplin could be used, and any one of these materials would make up prettily.

Many women don't like to shring the lovely looking new material and it is not to be wondered at; but it is generally a wise thing to do, setting the color at the same time. If you want to aid in keeping the dress from fading don't hang it out in the sun and wind; if it is hung out, take it in as soon as it is dry. Both wind and air have a tendency to fade wash materials.

After the pointed trimming bands have been cut out, lay the pieces on a cutting table or lap board, and trace a line around each point, one-half inch below the edge. Be sure to do this accurately. Then, when ready, turn the edge in on this traced line, clipping it at the bottom of each point just enough to allow for the half inch turning.

The bloomer leg bands should be made of the same material as the dress trimming bands.

Pattern No. 1934 is a one piece, slipon dress, cut in two pieces. There is a shaped band around the neck, to which the dress is gathered. This band is crossed on the shoulders, and is stitched to each side of the waist—front and back. Whether the armholes are finished with short sleeves or no sleeves is optional.

The side edges of the front and back parts of the skirt extend beyond the stitching of the seams, forming cascade draperies. A casing through which an elastic is inserted is placed at a low waist line, and the width of the skirt at the bottom, for size 36, is about 1½ yards

This design is especially pretty for one of the lovely changeable taffetas, or for a crisp organdy—and the colors are so lovely it is difficult to choose—rose, green, yellow, orange, and lovely blues, tans, greens, etc.

Then there are silk crêpes in many different weights. Probably the uses to which the dress is to be put will guide one in choosing.

In setting the dress into the band at the neck, find the middle of the dress, also the band, and pin together, and pin at each end—pulling the gathering thread up to fit, and laying the gathers evenly between the end pins.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER

The average age of civil war widows is 74.25.

Mary Garden, the opera singer, has kept the same maid for fourteen years.

Jeanne Gordon, young contralto with the Metropolitan Opera company, collects porcelain china banks as a hobby.

By finishing second among all contestants in the Cincinnati boat races, Mrs. Ethel Hanley of Muscatine Ia., becomes the champion woman speedboat driver in the world.

Mrs. Cowan, the first and thus far only woman member of the Australian parliament, has introduced a bill in that body making it legal for women to hold office as ministers of the crown.

The proportion of polygamous marriages to the total number in Turkey is now less than one to a thousand.

Miss Lydia Hutchinson, Canadian dog team driver, has won derbies held at Le Pas, Manitoba; Banff, Alberta, and Quebec.

That there are more women than men in the world is the conclusion drawn by a noted satistician, who estimates that the excess of women is well over 25,000,000.

Police desk sergeant at the Los Angeles central police station, Mrs. B. K. Stevens, is believed to be the first woman to hold a job of this kind.

Lady Poynter, wife of Sir Ambrose Poynter, famous English architect, has become a full fledged house decorator in London, where she has opened a shop.

Miss Ichikawa Fusae, Japanese social worker, spent several months in this country studying social problems in a practical way by working as a maid and cook in many cities.

The United States patent office in Washington has listed 5,000 patents issued to women in the last ten years. Inventions by women now range from hairpins to bombs.

Fully nine-tenths of the women in China cannot write their own names.

How Worrying Spoils Your Face

Next Time You Indulge in a Fit of the Blues, Take a Look in the Mirror.

by Antoinette Donnelly

> What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

One of the most observant scientists analyzes the effect of worry on the face thus: "The lips, cheeks, and lower jaw all sink downward from their own weight. Hence, all the features are lengthened. The eyes become dull and lack expression. The eyebrows not rarely are rendered oblique, which is due to their inner ends being raised. This produces peculiarly formed wrinkles on the forehead, vastly different from those of a simple frown, though in some cases a frown alone may be present. The corners of the mouth are drawn downward, which is so universally recognized as a sign of being out of spirits that it is almost proverbial."

If you are in doubt about the picture this draws, next time you indulge in a fit of the blues take a look in the mirror, and see if the scientist has overdrawn it. In addition, study the color of the complexion and see how it no longer has a healthy glow, how the lips become pale as the skin sallows. This effect on the skin of the face and color in the lips is due to the damage worry does to stomach action, heart, and circulation of the blood.

Women Worst Offenders.

It is a well known fact that women suffer in personal appearance more than do men from the worry habit.

Having observed the effect of this particular beauty destroyer, don't worry about it. Just then and there decide to change the trend of your thoughts.

If you are a worrier, don't expect to acquire miraculously and suddenly a wholesome mental attitude. It does not come that way. It only comes by persistent and conscientious effort to see straight, to keep the values of life clear, as Dr. Jesse Feiring Williams of Columbia university puts it.

To help to see straight, it would better be realized in the beginning that a hurried, driven, anxious, or depressed state, and the fears, worries and long distance apprehensions are distinctly injurious to health of both mind and body. And remember, too, that a healthful mental state can be developed just as surely as muscles. But it takes time and patience to acquire mental control.

Try to Banish Regrets.

We are not of the Pollyanna tribe who believe one can get through life without worrying part of the time. That would be going to the state of the lower animals who are not concerned about where next week's food supply is coming from. But we believe one can so direct her thoughts and so order her life as to reduce the strain on nerves to normal.

We worry over such foolish things. Our mouth corners go down not with the strain of accomplishment but with regrets and recriminations over something we did badly or something we should not have done. Then, we worry about the opinion of others more than over the impropriety of our own conduct.

Dr. Williams offers the mistakes we make as experiences on which to build not stumbling blocks, and lessening worry about what one has done by reflecting briefly: "What is done, is done."

Calm, clear resolutions are needed to replace the incoherent, aimless wanderings of the mind.

"You cannot drive out morbid memory by simply repeating, 'I will forget it.' One thought can be driven out only by another.

"Selection of a proper subject for mental examination or engaging in work of an interesting kind will replace the undesirable worry with an acceptable activity," says Dr. Williams. "This choice must be conscious, intelligent, and directed."

Dissipating Mental Energy.

The person who suffers the form of worry which impels getting up to unlock the door to make sure it is locked is advised to let a burglar carry the whole house away rather than subject the nervous system to such activity.

It is important to give thought to the morrow, the doctor advises, but one should practice doing carefully what one has to do and then dismiss the matter from the mind.

Confidence in self, in one's own power, therefore, is of tremendous aid and can be gained by learning to do each thing to the best of one's ability. Worriers are people who lack this faith in themselves.

For the worrier who indulges in fears and apprehensions about the task is recommended the simple business of sizing up the work, deciding to do it, and then jumping to it immediately. Spend as little time as possible deciding what to do. If a mistake is made, what of it? Others make mistakes. If you worry about the

NO-1 SHOWS HOW BRAID AND SILK ARE MITRED.
NO-2 DETAIL OF SIDE SHOWING HOW BRAID IS PUT ON GRADUALLY COMING TOGETHER AT SIDE

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, Chicago Tribune.

A HAT IN THE MAKING.

FOR this attractive hat fifteen yards of golden brown braid about five-eighths of an inch wide are required. Three shades of Venetian silk are used for the folds—red, old blue, and gold—each nine inches long and cut on the bias. The frame and lining complete the hat.

Cut each of the colored silks in three long strips two inches wide. Join two of the red on the machine, and bind the edge of the brim, having one-half of the width on top and one-half on the under side of the brim, starting at the head size at the side front and bringing up over the long point and around the edge and back to the head size. This takes about one and one-third of a strip.

Start to sew the braid to the upper brim, starting at the head size and bringing around to the corner of the low side; then along the brim up to the high side, and down to the head size again.

Start the braid one-half inch back of the edge wire, making the red silk look life a half inch fold. Cut each row of braid as it reaches the head size, and be sure to miter the corners.

When the upper brim is filled in proceed to join the blue silk, which also requires a strip and a third. Fold in half, bringing the folded side up, and lay carefully on the facing. Baste this in place, starting at the head size, working to the point, and down and around.

Next join the gold silk and proceed to place it just as the blue. This makes three folds on the edge of the hat about three-eighths of an inch apart. Fill in the rest of the facing with braid, just as the upper brim was filled, cutting each row as it reaches the head size. Miter the corners.

Lay a strip of red silk flat on the crown from the front to the back. Get a crown with a ridge if possible, going from front to back, or one can mark it with a pencil to get a good line.

After the red silk is basted in position, take a blue silk strip, fold in half, and place one either side of the crown from front to back and back to front, showing about three-eighths of an inch of the red. Then fold and place the gold silk and make a fold on each side of the blue. Then fill in both sides of the crown with the braid, from the front to the back until completely covered, cutting each row of braid as the bottom of the crown is reached.

Put a strip of braid around the bottom of the crown for a finish—then sew the crown to the brim firmly.

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

A maid always serves from the left side of the diner, so that he may use his right hand in helping himself to food.

VEGEX

THE food which gives to the body in delicious tempting appetizing form what modern highly refined, polished and processed foods lack—

Vitamins, Mineral and Organic Salts

These vital elements so necessary to true health are found in abundance in VEGEX. Relished by old and young for the flavor it adds to favorite dishes, the beneficial effects of VEGEX are sure and certain, no matter by what method it is made a part of the diet:—in soups, gravies, stews, sandwiches, hot or iced drinks, salads, with cheese, sliced tomatoes or hundreds of other ways.

VEGEX
THE VITAMIN YEAST EXTRACT
VEGEX added to dishes makes culinary surprises.
VEGEX as a drink stimulates but soothes.

VEGEX IS a pure vegetable concentrate, the base of which is made up of millions upon millions of tiny yeast plants which attain their full growth in an hour. No other food is as rich as VEGEX in Vitamin B content—it is more than a food and greater than any tonic.

How Worrying Spoils Your Face

success of an undertaking, you prevent success. Get into the frame of mind that it is today that counts, not yesterday with its mistakes and tomorrow with its unknown. Then make today count.

Worrying over the opinion of others is a prevalent habit. If a criticism is good, use it. If it is silly or unfair, forget it. Women are more peculiarly sensitive to criticism than men. They will nurse a slight or mull over a fancied wrong until they actually impair their mental health. They will indulge in the melancholy pleasure of playing the martyr to the utter ruin of their looks.

Work the Cure.

Hysteria and neurasthenia result from worry. Women are more subject to these ills than men, which would prove their lesser ability to throw off anxieties and fears by plunging into the work of the day.

There is something of desire to be heroic at least above commonplace in the eyes of others in persons who worry over things done badly, and those sensitive to criticism.

Now, what is the matter with accepting yourself as unheroic and commonplace; in other words, trying to get a slant on yourself in relation to life?

To do this, begin with the smallest duties you have. Concentrate on them to the exclusion of every other demand. When you are dressing to go out, say, concentrate on this preparation. Don't be fearful that you will be late, keep somebody waiting. Plan your time systematically to avoid such worries. Empty the pan under the refrigerator before you begin to dress. Remember you did it, so when you get away from the house that worry is lifted.

The ability to settle down to one thing and to keep the mind fixed on that one thing is an exercise in mental control highly recommended to the worrier.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

J. E. W.: SEVERAL CORRESPONDENTS have asked the same question about Mary Pickford—does she rub vinegar on her ankles to keep them slender? I asked Miss Pickford about it recently. She was quite amused at the rumor. She said she never had tried it, but if there was anything in it she might. So it appears Mary cannot recommend vinegar as an ankle reducer from personal experience. Funny, the yarns that get out on these celebrities, isn't it?

BOBBY: I READ A PREDICTION in the paper t'other day that in 100 years from now there will be no such female as a long haired one. It is much safer to make a bobbed hair prediction 100 years off than six months or a year. It strikes me, though, the shearing is going on quite as merrily as ever. Some hairdressers are hoping for the gool old days when they could charge extra for shampooing an extra heavy head of hair. But the majority of them seem to me to be waxing prosperous and extremely cheerful over the present cropped vogue. If you feel that way, why not go ahead and have it bobbed? You might as well be in the parade. When you are young, your hair grows surprisingly quickly. So you need not worry on that score.

ANNA: TO REMOVE THOSE CIGARET stains from the fingers use powdered pumice stone mixed with peroxide of hydrogen, and scrub with a nail brush. To prevent the return of them? Throw away the cigarets.

CLARA: TWENTY-ONE AND weigh 175 pounds. Five feet four inches in height. There is strong probability that yours is a case for thyroid treatment under medical direction. If I were you, I would consult with a physician, and if he says you need better food regulation and exercise, write me again and I will mail you the necessary instructions.

DANDRUFF: WASH YOU HAIR frequently. Be careful to use only your individual hair brush. Don't let any one else use yours. Brush your hair morning and night for five minutes. Send me s. a. e. and I will mail you a booklet on care of the hair which includes a dandruff remedy. But I think you will find the brushing and shampooing enough for your mild case.

A. W.: THE NUMBER OF TIMES the hair should be washed depends entirely upon the amount of dust or dirt it accumulates. Once in two weeks is not overdoing. If the hair is dry, rub olive oil into the scalp at night. Drop it on the scalp with a medicine dropper or part the hair and apply it with a bit of cotton dipped in the oil. Send s. a. e., please, for other instruction on care of the hair.

EMMA: WHY NOT TRY THE yeast treatment for your complexion ills? I know instances where it was most effective in clearing up the skin. Any good make bought at a grocery will do. Yeast is essentially laxative. Try one small cake a day, divided into two doses. Take it in a liquid, such as water, milk, beef tea, fruit juice, or spread it on crackers or bread. The laxative action is not impaired by cooking fruit. Bananas are perhaps the most constipating of all fruits. An orange before breakfast is sufficient to maintain the intestinal health of many persons.

MRS. J.: A MENU FOR AN ENTIRE day for an active adult? For breakfast, orange juice or small helping of cooked fruit or grapefruit, a small serving of cereal, a slice of toast or one muffin or one roll with butter, and a cup of coffee. For a change, take an egg and bacon instead of the cereal one or two mornings a week. This would average about 700 calories. Luncheon may consist of a salad, bread and butter or a roll, tea or coffee, and dessert—about 700 more calories. For dinner, vegetable soup, average serving of meat, potato, two green vegetables, no bread or butter, a salad, and a light fruit dessert. This would approximate a total of 2,500 calories for the day.

IN A MOMENT POSLAM STOPS SKIN SUFFERING

Some skin remedies work so slowly that you grow discouraged before you get relief. But Poslam is so CONCENTRATED that it ends itching and burning instantly and speedily drives the eruption away. Yet it is so gentle that it can be used freely even on a baby's tender skin. At all druggists—50c.

We recommend the daily use of

POSLAM SOAP

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

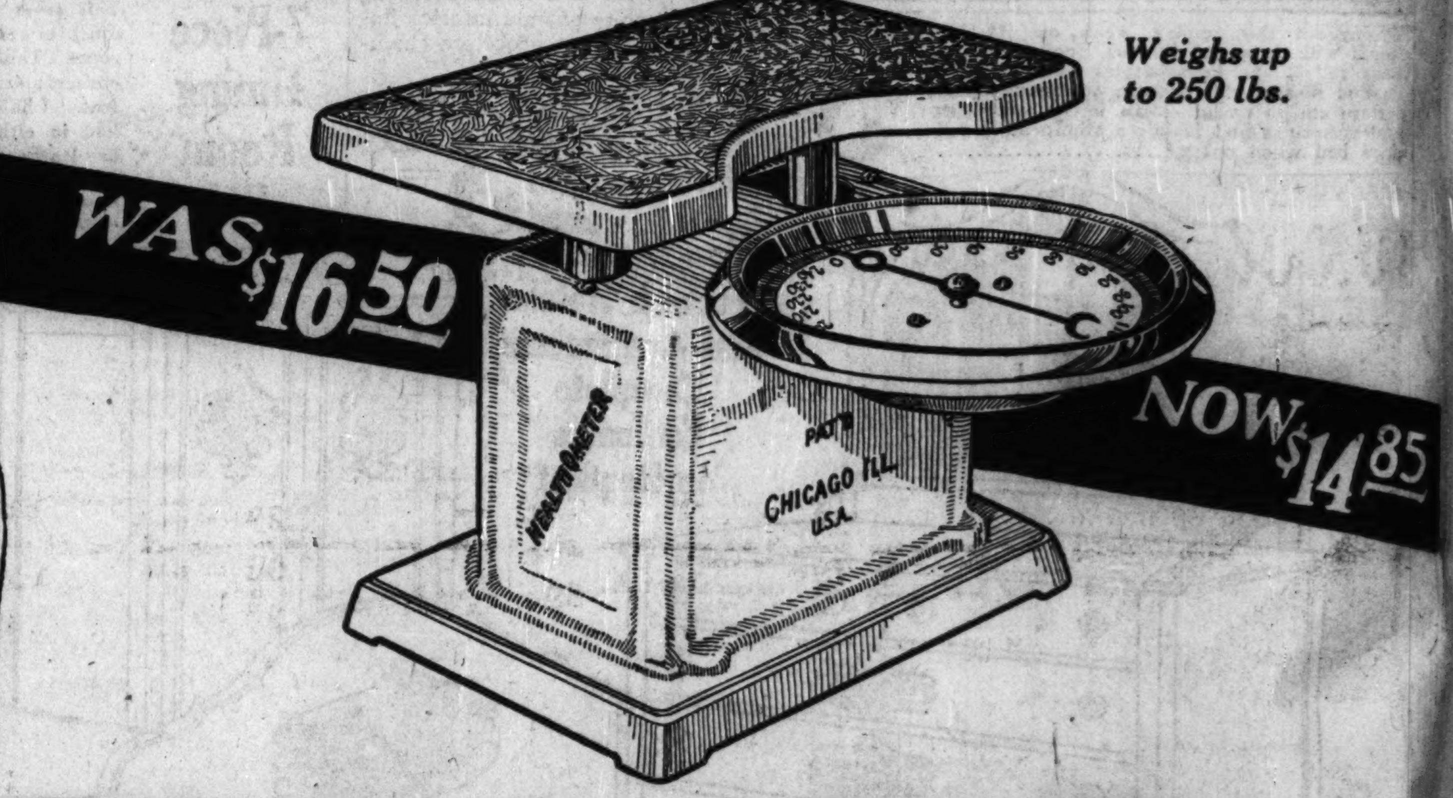
For Men Who Want to Keep Fit



A "Weigh" a Day is Your Way—to the charm of Health and Beauty

Why not resolve to cultivate the charms of health and beauty now, today—this better way. You, everyone, from girls and boys in their twenties—to men and women of youthful or full maturity, secretly yearn for this new bodily loveliness. To attain it you must "watch your weight" daily in your home on the Health-o-Meter.

Know your weight! Let the Health-o-Meter be your reliable pilot, daily guiding you in all of your health-building habits, exercises, diets or treatments. For to KNOW your weight is to know your health, the first requisite of your bodily beauty. A "weigh" a day, on the Health-o-Meter, is YOUR way to health.

Health-o-Meter
GUARANTEED
Automatic Bathroom Scale

Guessing your weight, to check your progress of health and beauty—to halt abnormal weights—is DANGEROUS. All medical authorities say "watch your weight!" Do it every day. Avoid the jolting, sudden realization of abnormal weight—the warning signal of bodily ills. Why seek real health and beauty blindly, alone—when the Health-o-Meter will guide you daily? Get yours NOW!

Thousands of folks now use it daily! Many more are going to. This ever growing popularity has reduced our costs—all of which actually result in the lowering of its price from $16.50 to $14.85—a saving of $1.65 per Health-o-Meter. It looks and works like twice its price.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE STRAIGHT LINE FOR MIDSUMMER.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—"It is entirely a matter of curves, my dear," as Venus de Milo remarked. There is the in curve and out curve to be taken into consideration, while fashion is saying: "Hew to the straight line, let the curves fall where they may." This is just another one of the many paradoxes that exist in the world of clothes.

One hears of nothing else but the fashionable straight line, the straighter and narrower the better, but the moment you get beyond the a, b, c of clothes it becomes a problem of curves, as difficult and intricate as the incommensurable arc. One might say the base of all clothes is the curve, and the straight line is a paradox, which it actually is. When a woman attempts to modify the naturally beautiful curves of her figure in one of those tube dresses the result is always the same: it is the tube which becomes modified, not the figure. This is probably the reason why Paris couturiers are themselves modifying the tube and not leaving the modifications to nature's haphazard and often unbecoming methods.

One curve that is banished from the salons of Paris couturiers is the flaring curve which goes with the knee flounce. Last spring, in Paris, the feminine promenade on the Champs-Elysees favored this curve from knee to ankle above all others; if you did not have a little curve from your knees down you were simply out of it, and, in September, on 5th avenue, in New York, the same condition existed.

This particular curve had its advantages, in decidedly modifying the effect of bow legs, for, with a flaring skirt, it is difficult to tell whether nature has put a concave curve on the in side of the calf or not.

Paris fashion creators have found a better way than the knee flounce for producing this pleasant disguise, and that is the flatly circular skirt which begins on the logical point of the hips. I have just been seeing Molyneux's summer collection, and it shows a great many of these circular skirts made of crepe de chine—usually figured—or of georgette and chiffon in several tiers. The effect, when walking, is indescribably graceful and will make the most awkward woman look more attractive as she moves. This same increase in gracefulness is sometimes achieved by plaits, but it is not quite so successful as by the circular movement. The secret of keeping the circular movement flat is to use soft material, and you may use as many layers of it as your fancy dictates. Yvonne Davidson is making whole dresses having three or four layers of varicolored crepe de chine or crepe georgette.

Another one of fashion's curves to which attention is devoted is the back curve, which is just another way of saying that curves are moving backward. An increasingly important trend of fashion is toward flaring backs. Molyneux achieves the flaring backs on the midsummer clothes in an interesting way. He favors long capes with shaped shoulders, the cape being held closely about the body, and in order to produce a flare at the back he places on these straight long capes another cape which extends to the hips and which flares jauntily in the proper place in back. Sometimes these upper capes are split down the center back, so that there are two distinct sides. Molyneux also uses the flaring jacket backs in a great many of his dresses; we have the traditional dress front, with its belt, and the back, from shoulders to hips, is exactly like the back of a jacket.

While we are watching to see which way the Directoire movement of spring will jump, whether it will leap into the highest popular favor for autumn, or whether it will plunge back into oblivion, this flaring back is a good thing to keep an eye on. It is the favored flair of Jeanne Lanvin and others who may be classified as fashion makers.

Madeleine Vionnet is showing a great deal of this back flaring movement, but she is doing it by means of those inimitable little shoulder capes which she places on her crepe and satin dresses. They are cut in the characteristically intricate Vionnet fashion, which is far too involved for even the expert in clothes to analyze without studying the garment at close range.

However, when you are thinking of curves for your spring and summer clothes do not forget the back curve. It covers, for one thing, a multitude of sins in one's own curves: it adds height to the short, grace to the tall, and slenderness to the plump. It looks considerably like a universal panacea for one's all sartorial ailments. It is not exactly that any more than the old fashioned patent medicines that were supposed to cure everything from toothache to consumption actually performed their service, but it is an excellent aid to securing a graceful and fashionable effect.

To come back to the straight line dress, it is above all ideally suitable to the slender, willowy figure of youth, and when worn by a young girl it can be trusted to take on just the right measure and kind of curve. Our artist has sketched in the first figure a straight line dress for the debutante from Martial and Armand. This dress is of dark blue tussalga, a hand woven Rodier fabric, which is really a soft and beautiful alpaca, and which is used a great deal for midsummer dresses in Paris. This dress, as you see, is cut practically straight and has little indication of belt. It is dependent for its attractiveness upon the delicate embroideries done in cross stitch of vivid wool and silk. The dress itself is nothing more than a fashionable shift, and the couturier's art is revealed by the expert manner in which the embroidery is placed.

The second figure in our sketch shows the suit of which this dress is a part, and the little hip length jacket which is worn with the dress is cut with the same supreme simplicity and straight line as the dress itself; it is harmonized with the dress by the matching embroidery. With this suit is worn a separate collar, which illustrates the inimitable Paris touch, and which no French woman would consider leaving off. In this case the collar is little more than a neck band and a double flaring ruffle which charmingly frames the youthful face above it.

The third model illustrates what the Parisian calls a race gown, and fully half of the summer dresses I nud in the salons of Paris couturiers are these race dresses, because all fashionable Paris

DORIS BLAKE'S ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Most Certainly Not.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have gone out with a young college fellow for quite a while. I am 18, but do not look upon my men friends as all wanting to marry me. I am too young, and am just having a good time while I may. Although this chap and I go to dances, grills, theaters, etc., I go out with others, as well. For no reason at all we drifted apart, though every time I see him I treat him as if nothing had happened. Last week he came in unexpectedly and spent the evening, telling me he had missed me. Since then he has asked me to go out. Do you think I would lower myself by going out with him? Would it give him a chance to say that I was ready to go out with him at any time? And what generally do you make of his attitude?
"HONEY."

Of course, you would not lower yourself by accepting the young man's invitation, Honey. Where did you ever get that foolish notion? You must not get yourself into the habit of analyzing the actions of friends that way. It is not fair. The boy cares for you—maybe not deeply enough for constant company, but then you say quite frankly you go out with others. So don't hold it against him that he has let you have your freedom to go with whm you please.

Old Enough to Decide.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 28 and engaged to a young man of 32. We love each other dearly. My family object to my going with him for the reason that he is foreign born, while I am an American, and say we will not get along well together. Also, my mother's objections are based on the fact that he is so much shorter than I am—about four inches—and we do not make a nice looking couple, but I am sure this will not tend to spoil my happiness, as he has a fine character and is a gentleman in every way.

"He has been in this country for fifteen years and has become quite Americanized, but still retains quite a foreign accent, but I love him just the same.

"Please advise me as to whether it would be wise to go against my parent's wishes, although I am old enough to know my own mind. WORRIED."

Worried, while I do not like to advise any girl to go against the wishes of her parents, I feel that you are old enough to know what you wish to do, and as you are the one to marry the man you naturally are the one to be satisfied. A fine character is a much better recommendation than a fine appearance, my dear.

It's Fifty-Fifty.

"Dear Miss Blake: A boy friend has asked me to take dancing lessons with him. Is it proper for him to pay for them, as he wished to do, or should my parents do that? Should my parents ever thank a young man for taking me to nice places, or should they feel that I honor him by accepting his invitation? DOUBTFUL."

Your parents should pay for the dancing lessons, Doubtful. Not the boy. They might say some time to the boy when the occasion warrants that it is nice of him to give their daughter a good time. But no formal thanks are necessary. I don't know as I like the expression "honoring the boy by accepting his invitation," because it is pretty much a fifty-fifty arrangement, after all, isn't it? You wouldn't go out with him if you did not think he should show you a good time. Time enough to use that expression if the boy assumes you owe him kisses or other favors for his entertainment.

Learn to Dance.

"Dear Miss Blake: I will soon be 17, and have been quite friendly with a girl about the same age ever since I was a young boy. This girl has told me that she cares for me, and I have told her the same thing. I have asked her to go out with me several times, but it seems she always has an engagement with her girl friend to go dancing. I cannot take her dancing as I do not know how to dance. I would like to know how I can get this girl to go out with me, and if it would be proper for me to ask her to show me how to dance in my house, as I do not like to go to a dance in order to learn. My mother has no objection to this plan. SIXTEEN."

I would suggest that you go to a dancing school and learn how to dance there. When you have learned the steps, have your mother invite the girl to your home and ask her to dance with you that you may get some practice.

Give Him a Smile.

"Dear Miss Blake: What is the proper thing to say when a young man says, 'Thank you,' after dancing with you? If I just met a man at a dance and he takes me home, what should I say before he leaves me? Is it wrong for me to ask him to come to the house some time? M. H."

Just bow and smile graciously. No comment is necessary from the young lady. If a young man escorts a girl home after a dance that indicates he favors her sufficiently to justify her inviting him to call at her home some evening. Besides, it is considered quite the proper thing, you know.

'Twas Too Late.

"Dear Miss Blake: Is it proper for a young girl after coming from a show to invite her friend into her home? A short time ago I attended a show with a friend and I arrived home about 1 o'clock. As I live in a suburb I did not invite this young man to come in and he was hurt over the same. Please tell me what to do after this.
"INQUISITIVE."

At that late hour, it was better not to invite the young man. Aside from the lateness of the hour as far as you and Dame Grundy were concerned, there was the young man's long ride back to town. It is not well to deprive these young suitors of too much sleep, Inquisitive.

Have a Twinkle.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a schoolgirl, and at the dancing school I go to, the boys hardly ever choose me to dance. It may be because I am shy, but I don't know. I wish you would tell me something to talk about and any other reason you see for their not liking me. BLUE EYES."

First thing, Blue Eyes, I'd try to master the terpsichorean art so that your dancing would make you a desirable partner. I'd fix myself up just as pretty as possible for the dancing lessons, and then I'd study the ways of the popular girls and try to see what you lack in your manner. It may be just that you are shy. But you can overcome that in time, I'm sure. It is not so much what you talk about—at first, anyway, as how you appeal personally. I'm inclined to think young men more susceptible to the twinkle in an eye than in a brain.

No Way to Do.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl, 18, in love with a young man, 20. A few weeks ago we planned to elope and get married, but somehow we did not. Since then we do not talk to each other. I dearly love this man and am quite sure he cares for me, but I do not know how to start our friendship again. Please give me some advice. PUSSY."

If the renewal of the friendship is going to end in an elopement, don't renew it, Pussy. Besides, I cannot believe that the boy's influence is for the good if he would persuade you into considering marriage so flippantly. Or, maybe you were the one who suggested the idea of eloping? Were you? Well, anyway, just be thankful you did not do it. It is no way to approach so serious a thing as matrimony, dear.

Only Teasing You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl, 18. I have been in love with a young man one year my senior. He has told me he loves me dearly. Lately he does not believe me and doesn't tell me anything. How can I make him believe me, for I do not tell anything I am not supposed to. I know you can help me for you have helped many girls. JANICE."

Now I wonder how you can make the doubting Thomas believe you. I have a private opinion he does not doubt you. Just says he does so as to hear you say over and over again you care for him. Some young men are like that, Janice. It is rather a form of teasing than doubting.

ETIQUETTE in DIVORCE

Whether or not you approve of divorce, it is a simple fact that divorced men and women are included in nearly every circle of society today. Such members cannot be ignored; and there is acute need of counsel on the etiquette which society adopts towards them.

How should a divorced woman sign herself? How should one address an invitation to her?

What should one do when a former husband and wife meet by accident in one's drawing room?

What happens when the daughter of one's former husband marries—does one invite him to the wedding as a guest? Should he give his daughter away?

These are only a few of the puzzling problems of divorce taken up in Vogue's new Book of Etiquette.

The foundation of good breeding; formal and informal entertaining; distinction in dress, speech and correspondence; alterations in present-day social usage; and many other questions are set forth in Vogue's new Book of Etiquette. By the editors of Vogue, the acknowledged court of authority in America on all debatable niceties of good form. Just published. 591 pages. Possession of this book also entitles readers to consult the Vogue Information Bureau on individual personal problems by mail, telegraph or telephone.

What Do People Talk About?

Asks DORIS BLAKE

Psychologists' Report Man's Preferred Topic Is Business; As for Woman—Well—Hers Is Man.

WHAT do people talk about in their off hours? The weather, sports, lodge, amusements, business, prohibition, bobbed hair, themselves?

Does the Broadway trend of conversation run in the same direction with that of Keokuk, Ia.?

Several years ago the psychologist, Henry T. Moore, analyzed a number of conversations heard in various places, and found that men conversed more frequently about business, money and amusements; women about men, clothes, and decoration.

Recently, M. H. Landis and H. E. Burt, psychologists at the Ohio State university, Columbus, reported to the Journal of Comparative Psychology the results of a similar analysis made in 500 conversations in that community, with a view to comparing them with the record of those heard on Broadway, where Moore made his observations.

Their investigations include persons in restaurants, at baseball games, in theater lobbies, in front of store windows, on the university campus, in barber shops, in churches and on the street.

Business Man's Favorite.

The conversations were classified under ten headings: Business and money, men, women, clothes and decoration, sports, other amusements, college work, health, self, and the weather. The results agreed in general with those observed in Broadway.

Men's most frequent topic is business—49 per cent in Columbus and 48 per cent in New York. If sports and other amusements are combined, these topics have a frequency of 15 per cent at Columbus and 14 per cent in New York.

The third topic of men's conversation is men—12 per cent in Columbus and 13 per cent in New York.

Man, or men, is the absorbing topic with women, with clothes and decoration—to promote further talk about them undoubtedly—running second; 32 per cent for the men and clothes, 19 per cent in Columbus. In New York the figures were: Men, 44 per cent, and clothes, 23 per cent.

Hides His Emotions.

Curious, no evidence is produced in these figures taken from the Journal of the American Medical Association to indicate that love has anything to do with conversation of either sex. But that may be explained on the ground that a man, the one man, is the same thing to a woman. Also, it proves that men do not air their emotions in public. Rather, we would think that in his life we are things so far apart that he never even mentions us.

Other women come third on the list of women's favorite employment of an idle hour in the percentage of about 15.

Would that indicate the gentle art of gossip dying out? Are we less interested in what other women are doing?

In mixed company, the report shows that men most frequently talk to women about amusement, next business and money. They further seem to talk to women considerably about themselves—17 per cent—which, we are told is more than when talking to other men.

One of the sex, commenting upon this, hints that the psychologists picked men somewhat too modest to serve as legitimate laboratory specimens, 17 per cent seeming ridiculously low.

"The autobiographical strain is much more prevalent among all the men I know," says he, "and they hold it with a good deal of consistency, whether or not the company is mixed."

Amusement First with Women.

Women, the psychologists report further most frequently converse with men about amusements, secondly about clothes, and to a considerable extent about themselves and about men.

The results were classified also as to the social status of those concerned. Business people talk about business and money, in 70 per cent of cases as compared with 43 per cent for industrial workers and 9 per cent for students. Industrial workers talk chiefly about men and themselves, and students talk chiefly about other men, their opportunities, and amusements.

Only 8 per cent of student conversation overheard dealt with actual college work, it is observed.

The infrequency of conversation about the weather was one of the incidents noted. Although health was one of the subjects catalogued, it is interesting as well as consistent to note that it held little interest for those who are well.

Little Serious Discussion.

The scarcity of serious discussion of general topics is commented on by the psychologists. There were not half a dozen of the entire 500 interested in the weather, their health, or general topics.

Moore had previously noted the same thing, but attributed it to the levity of Broadway. However, the same conditions are revealed under diverse conditions.

The classification was made on the assumption that the natural trend of an individual's conversation is to quite an extent an indication of his or her fundamental interests and enthusiasm. Therefore, it is assumed that man's greatest interest is business and money, his next greatest sports and amusements. Woman's leading interests are men and clothes. And it is to be observed that persons play a small part in man's thoughts and a large part in woman's.

Strange They Forget This.

Is it possible, we ask, that the women examined were all of the lean variety? Our experience is that no luncheon table conversation is ever conducted without a promise, be it ever so half hearted, to begin to diet. Either that, or a recital of how many pounds have been lost since the last meeting.

The decoration classified as the other half of clothes presumably includes whether or not to be shingled, facialed, manicured, permanent waved or mud bathed. An impressive percentage, we feel, is due to the pursuit of beauty themes.

Rhoda had been told to keep away from the "gentry" —but she couldn't let Will Shepard drown in the surf

A short daily serial!

THE SEA WALL is a love story of the Virginia Coast. Rhoda, poor and almost friendless between the "gentry" on one side of the bay and the "Ginney Folk" on the other, is an unspoiled and lovable heroine. You'll enjoy this romance, with its bits of tragedy, its mystery, and its fine love story of two men and a woman. It is a tale of the sea and the world and the salt marshes, of the "gentry" and the oystermen, of loneliness and of love. Start it now and continue it tomorrow in The Tribune.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

THE SEA WALL

A New Daily Serial by Eleanor Mercein Kelly

A HINT of MYSTERY in the FIRST INSTALLMENT

START IT NOW!

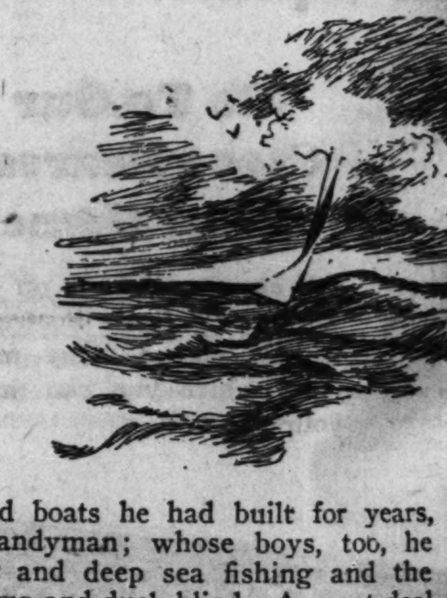
RHODA could just vaguely remember a time when the sea was not the dominating influence of her life—a crowded, fretful sort of time, when there had been no outdoors to play in, only a floor and a stair, where one was always having to get out of the way of grown-up legs. People were to Rhoda then very much as trees walking. And the continuous noise made up of hundreds of little noises, was not unlike the steady wash of the sea. There had been some one else, besides her father, who petted her, played with her, and punished her by turns—but toward the last only her father, who did none of these things. And then the sea, closing in about and almost above her, with ships passing in far procession along the sky line, and storm and sun marking one day from another, and the sails of the oyster fleet dipping here and there like great friendly gulls; and twice in the week the packet from Norfolk, their only link with the outside world, passing close to the Siren Rock, near enough for Rhoda to see the people on board; who never saw her. She took good care of that.

There was always quite a gathering at the wharf on packet day. Rhoda liked to watch them through her father's glasses; gentry, farmers, Negroes, and Ginney folk, the four classes which made up her world.

She herself never went to watch the little steamer unload; why, she hardly knew. Her father had not forbidden it. Her father forbade nothing. He was too deep in his book; or else he was lying half asleep in his deck chair in the sun, deep in something else; dreams, or memories, perhaps, or simply idleness. It is an easy country to idle in.

Rhoda had made her own little rules and inhibitions at an early age. One was, never to appear in public on the side of their peninsula where the gentry lived—they are still called "gentry" in the older parts of Virginia. And with the gentry she and her father had nothing to do.

Their little peninsula was practically an island, cut off at high tide from the shore, the pine woods on its lower part standing for hours each day with their feet in water. On one side of this peninsula, a few old great houses surrounded the inlet; on the other side lay Ginney, a vague, indeterminate region of beach and salt marsh and bay, inhabited by an amphibious race of oystermen, fisher folk, and seafarers generally, who have lived there distinct and apart for at least as long as the great houses have stood, perhaps longer.



Among the Ginney folk, Rhoda was not so much a stranger. It was they who supplied the hermit and his child with food, clothes, books, and other things of which her father stood, alas, in constant need, known to Rhoda as his "medicines." And it was in the Ginney country that Chief Doane ruled supreme, a big, powerful fellow with splendid shoulders, and the curling blonde beard of a viking, and crinkling blue sailor's eyes that were at once childlike and shrewd. Doane was known as the "King of Ginney" even among the gentry, whose wharves and fences and barns and boats he had built for years, beginning as the neighborhood handyman; whose boys, too, he had taught sailing and swimming and deep sea fishing and the essentials of sportsmanship in swamp and duck blind. A great deal of a man, this great sea gypsy, who deserved the prosperity which had fallen to his lot. For the Doane boats had long been famous even beyond Tidewater country; and it was known that he had an interest as well in all the lobster pots and oyster dredges that gave the Ginney folk rather more than livelihood.

Doane Rhoda loved. He was all she had to love, her one intimate and companion. It was he who had made her a little flat bottomed boat in which she could row herself safely over to visit him, in good weather, whenever she felt lonesome. Later he had replaced this with a fine dory, air compartments fore and aft; later still with the fastest little sail canoe on those waters, which she learned to handle as cleverly as the Chief himself, in any weather. And it was to Doane that she had gone, a wide-eyed, grave little creature of seven, to say that when her father took too much "medicine it made him act so queer" that she was a little bit afraid.

Thereafter the man had taken her affairs into his own hands, supplying medicines and other things as he saw fit; arranging, too, a series of signals for the child to fly when she needed him.

On the gentry side there was some brief curiosity about the wild man who appeared to be occupying Charlie Shepard's old shooting shack on the Point; a strange, bearded creature with clothes that hung on his gaunt form like a scarecrow's. Once a daring picnic party landed on the Siren Rock at low tide, and waded ashore through weeds and slime to investigate. But when they came to the mud plastered log shack they found, rather to their relief, that it was closed and locked, even the windows boarded up, manifestly unoccupied. It did not occur to them that just inside the boarded door a man crouched, shivering, having heard their voices afar off; whispering to himself, "That ought to be Bob Cary's laugh. And Kitty with him, little Kitty! Will they know me? What will they do?"

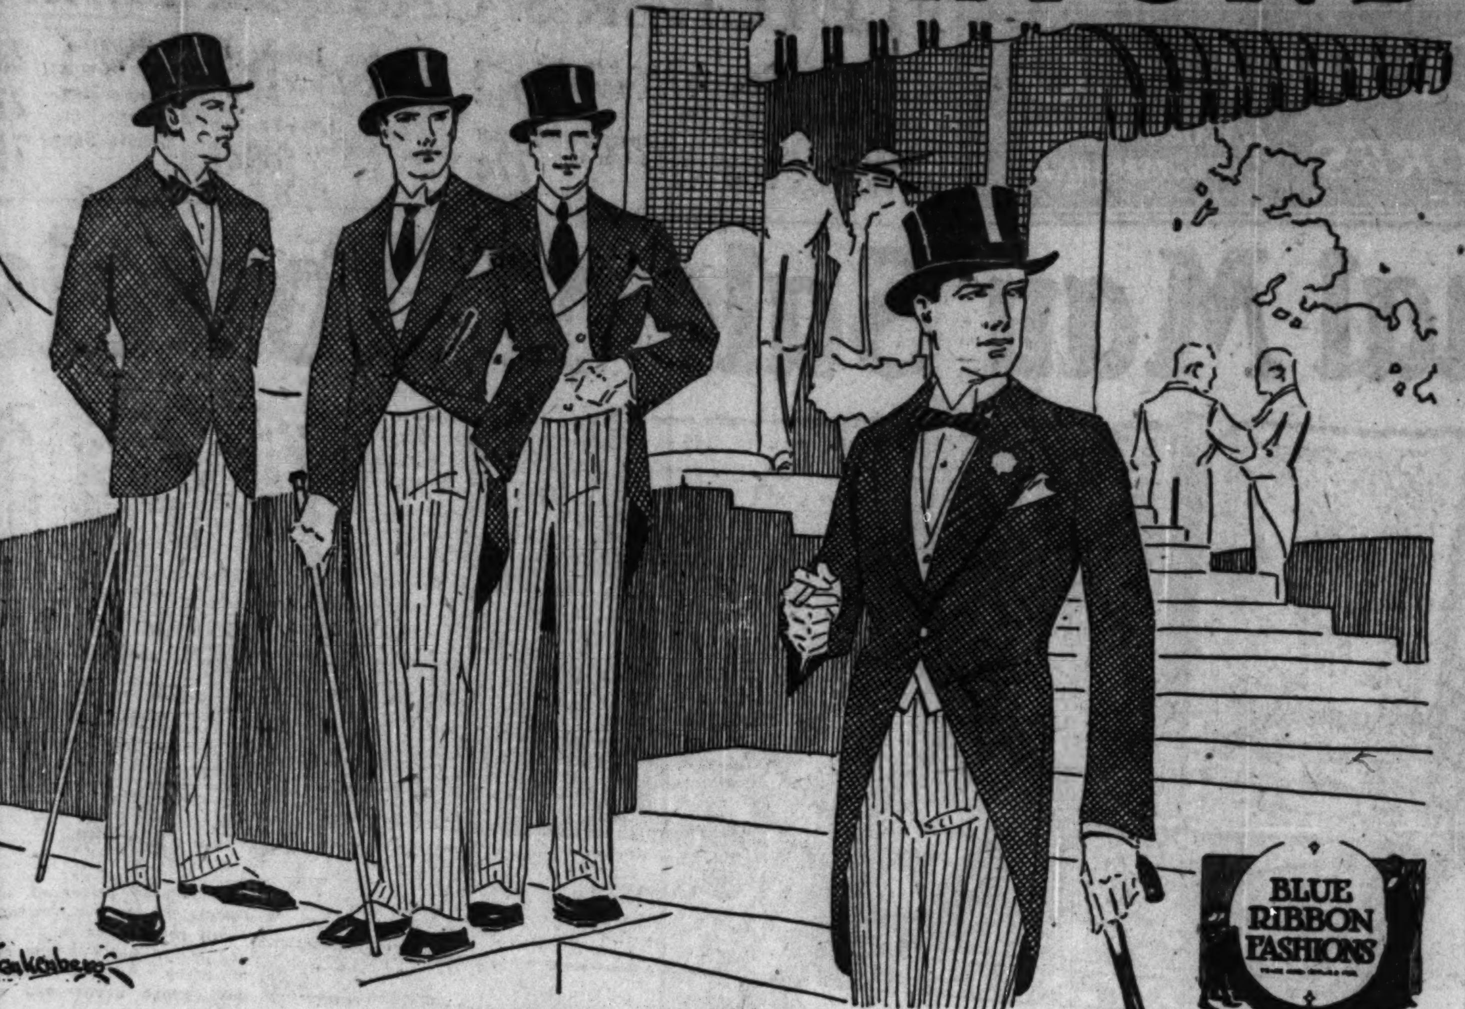
MEN'S FASHIONS



WHAT TO WEAR AT A SMART SPRING OR SUMMER WEDDING

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

BY A. T. GALLICO.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It's a lucky man this time of the year who does not have to attend a wedding in some capacity, whether as chief actor, the bridegroom, or best man, giver away of the bride, usher, or merely as guest. Whichever part he plays, he must be correctly attired, for a wedding is an event that lays stress on sartorial elegance.

Our words today are designed for the aid of all citizens who find themselves in for a spring or summer wedding, and are in doubt as to what to wear. Gathering from the number of letters we have received requesting this advice, our suggestions here should be timely. We shall take into consideration daytime weddings only, as the evening wedding is not fashionable. If some relative or friend should by any chance invite you to an evening ceremony, remember that the full dress suit, with its proper accessories, is the only correct dress.

As for the day wedding, whether it be ten in the morning or four in the afternoon, the formal day attire is the only wear. The details of this depend upon whether the wedding is formal or informal. A large church wedding, for instance, would call for the most formal of day dress, while a small simple ceremony in a private house, or in a country garden, which is often done, does not demand so extreme a formality in the matter of dress.

For the bridegroom and the best man at a formal day wedding the conventional cutaway coat of black or oxford gray, with striped trousers, gray striped or black with white stripes, is the proper dress. At this time of year a smart style favored by younger men is the wearing of plain light gray cheviot trousers, with either the cutaway coat or the short black jacket. However jacket and gray trouser combination is more to be recommended for a guest than for bridegroom or best man, unless the wedding be one of the informal variety.

At any spring or summer wedding a guest is correctly dressed in the short black jacket, with the light gray trousers, or with any of the striped trousers that are worn with cutaway. At country weddings the bridegroom and best man may wear such a costume and be entirely in keeping with their more important positions. As for the ushers, they should always be dressed alike, and if they decide to all may wear the jacket instead of the cutaway. It is a good effect to have the bridegroom and best man a little more dressed up than the ushers and so if the ushers wear jackets, the bridegroom and best man would do well to wear cutaways.

The waistcoat of the smart wedding outfit may be of the same material as the coat, with white facing, or—and this is a better style for the spring and summer months—it may be of colored linen or worsted. Linen vests of white, tan, or pearl gray and worsted waistcoats of taupe, light gray, or light shade of brown are much in vogue with either jacket or cutaway. They may be either single or double breasted. In the case of the vests the same suggestion about having the ushers uniformly attired may be applied—also the bridegroom and the best man. If you are only a guest you may wear any one of these vests without interfering with any one's color scheme.

The shirt of a formal wedding outfit should be plain white, stiff or plaited bosom, of linen or pique. A striped or colored shirt may be used for an informal costume, but if a colored shirt is worn the cuffs should be white. The collar may be wing, poke, or turnover, the wing being the smartest for a formal outfit. The turnover is all right for wear with the jacket. The type of collar which is most becoming should be the one chosen. In the case of the ushers one style of collar should be decided upon and worn by all the ushers.

The neckwear of the ushers should also be uniform in style and coloring. The possibilities are bow, four in hand, or throw over. Black and white effects are popular, or plain light or dark gray, self-striped or figured, or plain ties of pastel shades.

Another part of the wedding outfit that the ushers should have uniform is shoes and spats, if the latter are used. In the spring white spats are sometimes used with the smart wedding turnout. They give an attractive touch to the festive attire. Black patent leather oxfords are the proper footgear to be worn with spats at a wedding. Tan or light gray spats may be used instead of white if desired.

If high shoes are preferred, buttoned kid or cloth tops with patent leather lowers are correct. For the more informal weddings low black calfskin shoes or patent leather oxfords without spats may be worn.

Socks should be plain black or gray silk or lisle, or, if low shoes are worn they may match the trousers as far as possible. Gloves may be light gray, or fawn suede or mocha, or gray, fawn or white buckskin, or white glace. Gloves give still another chance for the uniformity of the ushers' costumes.

The only correct hat for a wedding is the high silk hat, with both cutaway and jacket. For an extremely informal affair a derby may be worn, while in the summer a straw hat or soft felt may be used.

If the wedding is to be a simple garden or house ceremony in the summer where the bride wears a hat instead of a veil, the bridegroom may substitute for the formal day dress a white flannel suit, or white flannel trousers with double breasted blue jacket, or other dark coat, single or double breasted. The double breasted blue coat is an especially smart garment combined with white flannels for the summer wedding, where formality is cast aside.

If a guest knows that the wedding he is to attend is to be one of these simple ones, he may wear this same kind of costume. The rest of the wedding party, the best man and ushers, should also wear a similar outfit. The variety may be achieved in the color of ties and shirts.

Human Efficiency Depends upon Food

Write us about your bodily ills! we will direct your diet by mail.

Absolutely Different!

THE human body must be as efficient as the machines of a factory. And today Science has proved that the body's fuel is responsible for personal force and vitality. Not only will proper dieting maintain an attractive figure—reducing obesity or adding weight to the thin—but it will prove the remedy for many serious ills. Rickets, scurvy, inanition, gout and many other serious diseases are acknowledged to come through errors in diet. The truth is that many more could be placed at the door of food.

Our course of treatment is based upon the use of natural foods, unchanged chemically by the hand of man. No person has ever been able to beat the Lord, but by working hand in hand with Nature the body will take away those things which it has produced—called disease. It costs nothing to investigate.

We Are Food Experts

Our researches of eleven years have proven to us that every disease of the human body, barring accidents, is caused by what we eat, drink or breathe. Every tissue, gland, organ, or part is constructed of certain elements which we derive from our food, water and air. It is the lack of these necessary elements which cause ill health.

Rheumatism, arthritis, chronic stomach and intestinal disorders, pelvic conditons, goitre, paralysis from apoplexy and other types, and on through the entire list, will respond to correct eating, drinking and breathing.

Our Home Direction

If you are living outside of Chicago we are offering you the advantage of our extensive experience, and through the direction of your case at home we will restore you to health and to attractive bodily proportions. We will carefully direct what you shall eat to overcome the disease or condition now present. Exercises to aid the elimination of the disease will be given.

Moderate charges are made upon monthly basis. Further particulars may be had upon application.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

goes to the races from May until November. I expect at home we would call them just afternoon dresses, or perhaps country club dresses, if we named them. However, like the rose, it does not matter what they are called.

The dress shown is of brown crêpe satin, with panels of brown silk lace. The girdle and the double yoke which is dropped over the shoulder in the manner of the second empire are of pale pink crêpe de chine, piped with brown. You will notice that the side panels begin at the girdle, and that the two back panels begin much lower on the skirt. It is this placing of the panels, the shoulder yokes, and the girdle which make this dress a real Paris contribution.

On the fourth model you may see the Parisian idea of a midsummer suit for hot weather. This suit is made of dark blue crêpe he chine, and the coat, from the hips to its three-quarter length, is a wool lace dyed to match the dark blue crêpe de chine. The skirt also is made of this lace from below the hips to the hem, and is worn over a slip of dark blue crêpe de chine. A suit such as this is extremely practical and decorative at the same time. It is easy to make and not at all beyond the powers of the home dressmaker. There is also no question at all about its smartness, for the greatest of great Paris houses are showing this type of suit made of dark blue, brown, or black crêpe de chine, having three-quarter length coat and simple dress or skirt to accompany it. Not only this, but I have seen the same suit being worn by women who form the standard for smartness at Cannes and other Riviera resorts.

A pretty way of adding interest to a two piece suit such as this is to make your blouse three-quarter length, same as your coat, and make it of figured silk, belted or tied by a sash of plain material. I have seen this long blouse made of plain material, also in vivid shades, or in white. However, white has the disadvantage of requiring constant cleaning or laundering, whereas figured silk is equally attractive and is not in need of constant care.

When the weather gets too hot for even the thin jacket which is shown in our fourth model you are beyond the point where a jacket may be worn at all, and that is the time when you will be interested in a model such as is shown on our fifth figure. I selected this model because it seemed to me to be about the most attractive midsummer dress I could find. It is made out of cream colored cotton lace and is banded with green organdy. The split sides are a spring contribution to fashion, and the full side front panels which are set in from the hips give an air of delicacy which adds a great deal to the costume without destroying its slender line, a line difficult to achieve successfully with thin fabrics. The dress is beltless, but is not so trying as the regular beltless dress because of these hips panels. The organdy sash ties form the only fastening, and there is no need for either buttons or hooks and eyes. A pale green organdy slip is worn under this dress, and it is made to slip on over the head, having no fastening of any kind. The shoulder straps are also of green organdy, and the slip is cut narrow with gathered insets at the sides to make walking easy.

Make sure it is a Simmons mattress by finding the Simmons label

So much of the value and lasting comfort of an honest mattress is hidden under its ticking, that you need more than your eye to guide you when you go in to buy.

That is why we label every Simmons mattress—so you can be sure of one vital quality never visible from the outside.

That quality is cleanliness. A mattress must be clean inside, built of fresh new materials, to be safe for you to sleep on. Many mattresses cannot meet this test.

With the cost of new cotton and other mattress materials advancing steadily, the temptation to use second-hand, "reworked" materials salvaged sometimes from dumps and junk yards has become too strong for some makers to resist.

What's under the ticking?

The danger of contagion to the buyer, the dirt and filth are all covered up with an attractive "art" ticking. The resulting cheat is sold at a price below what a mattress of new materials must bring.

For makers of honest, competitive mattresses, Simmons has only the warmest friendship. For the cheating "substitute" mattress, against which you need to be on guard, we are always on the warpath.

There is one sure way to avoid such doubtful bedding and get Simmons quality, economy and years of luxurious comfort. That way is to look for and find the Simmons label on any mattress you buy.

Many prices—but all clean

The label is there, in plain sight, trademarked, impossible to imitate. It identifies every mattress in the wide Simmons range of styles and prices, whether it is a Purple Label, Blue Label, Red Label, Green Label, Brown Label, Yellow Label, White Label or Gray Label.

It is your guarantee, not only of fresh, new ticking outside, but also of clean, new materials inside the ticking.

The price you pay is always the lowest at which a mattress built of such safe, new materials can be sold. Comfort, health and lasting quality make a Simmons the cheapest mattress you can buy. Leading dealers everywhere sell them.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

FUZZY WUZZY GOES TO CLOUDLAND.

BY RAYMOND KELLY.

FATHER and Mother Bear were sitting on the doorstep of the den and Fuzzy Wuzzy was sitting between them. He had played hard all day and had eaten a big supper. So even though he didn't feel exactly sleepy it was pleasant to sit with his head in Mother Bear's lap and keep one eye closed while he watched the moon rise with the other.

"The moon looks just like a big yellow balloon," thought Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I wish it really were a balloon and that it would come sailing up here on the mountain to take me for a ride."

The more he thought about that the nicer the idea seemed to him, until finally he wanted that ride so much he really believed the moon had a big balloon basket tied to it so that the Moon Lady might have a place to sit while she guided the moon through the clouds and between the stars. And so the little bear wasn't really so much surprised when the moon stopped right in front of the den, and the Moon Lady reached out her beautiful white hand to help him into the basket. He wasn't afraid either, for he could tell at a glance that the Moon Lady loved little bears.

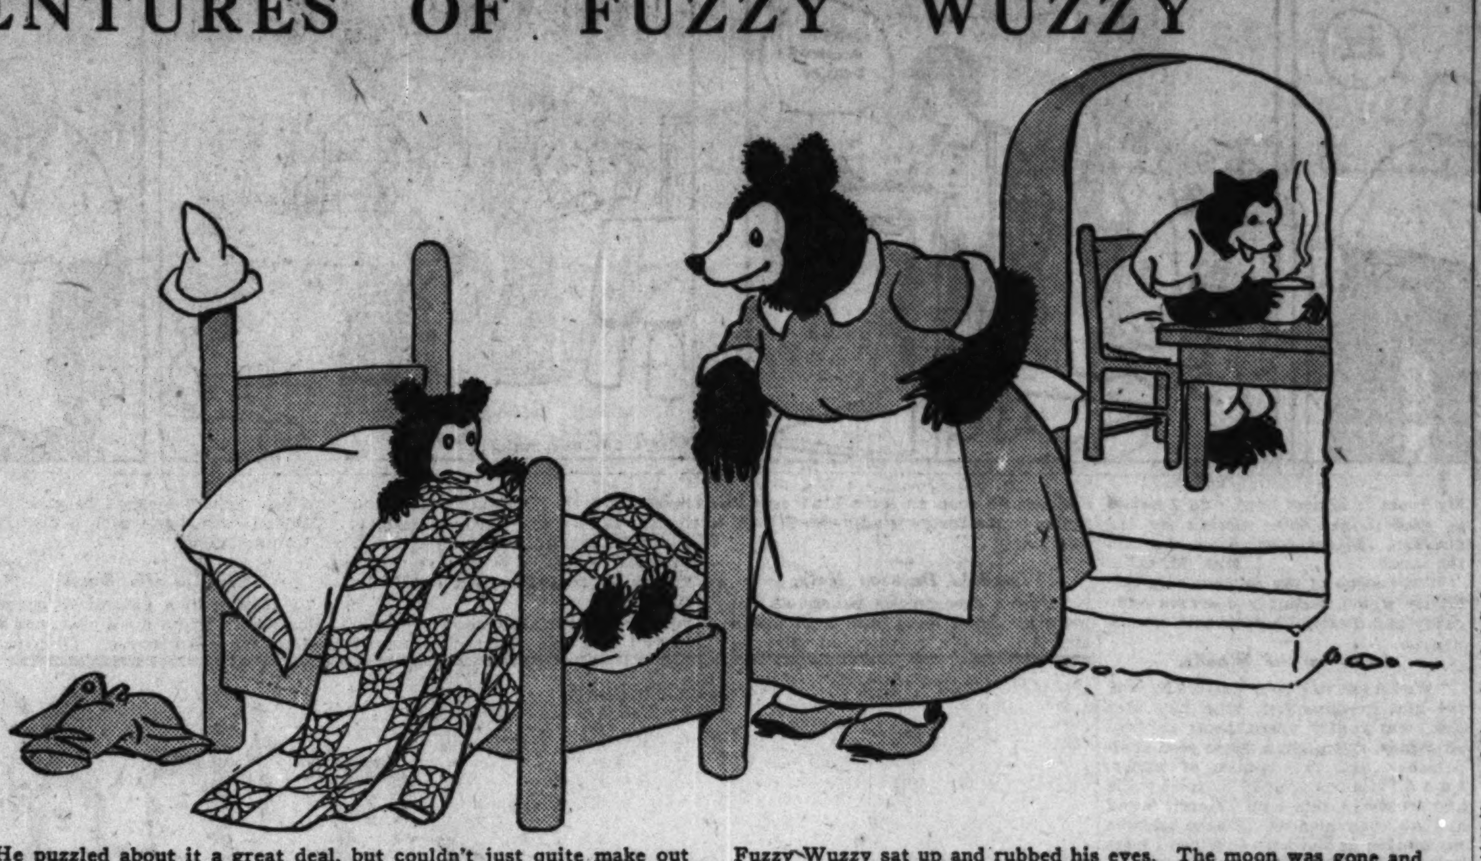
There was a little chair in the balloon basket that just fitted Fuzzy Wuzzy, and there was a glass floor through which he could look down on the world where all the other little bears were fast asleep. It was all beautiful and Fuzzy Wuzzy loved it. He loved too to watch the Moon Lady's face and her beautiful white throat with its necklace of glittering stars.

The Moon Lady saw that Fuzzy Wuzzy liked the star necklace, so she took it off and let him play with it when he got tired of looking at the trees and towns and mountains that seemed so small from up in the air. The Moon Lady was singing and Fuzzy Wuzzy sang with her.

High, high, upward we go
Over the beautiful world,
Far 'neath us there below
Flowers in sleep all are furled.

Until day's dawning bright,
O'er the ocean of night,
With its islands of stars, we shall sail.
In the Great Milky Way,
We shall joyously play,
And drink cream we scoop up in a pail.

The cream tasted good and so Fuzzy Wuzzy drank every drop of it. The air he sipped between mouthfuls of cream was good too, and Fuzzy Wuzzy thought it smelled like good things to eat.



He puzzled about it a great deal, but couldn't just quite make out what that smell was. Finally though, he worked it out. It was the smell of pancakes with crisp bacon and maple sirup. Yes, the little round clouds were pancakes and the long striped ones were slices of bacon. Cloudland was surely a fine place for little bears.

But suddenly the moon basket began to shiver and shake, and Fuzzy Wuzzy sat up and rubbed his eyes. The moon was gone and he was in his own little bed which Mother Bear was shaking to wake him for breakfast. So then Fuzzy Wuzzy knew he hadn't been to Cloudland at all, but to Dreamland, which is every bit as nice and was built especially for good little bears and children.

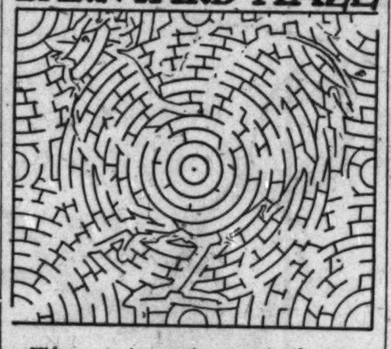
We have given you the first and last letters of ten words of three letters each. You are to supply the middle letters of these words so that you will have, reading downwards in the center column, the name of a spring flower.

BARNYARD MAZE



There are two entrances to the maze, as you will see. From one of them you can pass in and about the maze, and come out again where you started. Find this path, and then trace it with a soft or colored pencil, and see if you can trace the outline of something always found in a barnyard.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Billy had recently moved into the house next door to Harry, who was considered quite a fighter. Hostilities broke out on their way home from school and Billy dared Harry to fight.

"I'd lick you good," boasted Harry, "only my dad'll find it out and lick me."

"How'll he find it out?" asked Billy.

"He'll see you goin' home all mussed up, your clothes torn, your nose bloody, your eyes blacked, an' prob'ly a couple of your teeth knocked out." G. H.

Robert was given free access to the cooky jar while visiting his aunt for a week, with the result that when she went to get some cookies for tea there was none left.

"Mercy!" she exclaimed in dismay. "Are they all gone so soon?"

"O, yes," answered Robert, more proud than abashed. "Cookies are my eatingest thing." E. L. R.

Bobbie had just moved to the city from the country and found great difficulty in getting acquainted with youngsters of the neighborhood.

One day he came in much excited and said, "Mother, I have just got related to two boys." K. H.

John and Charles were debating on who would sit in the front seat of the new car.

Marian, who was sitting in the rear, suddenly said: "What's the difference where you sit as long as you're in?" L. B.

Aurelian, who had just been ill, was ready for his bath, prepared by his mother, when he chanced to glance in the mirror. "Why, mother, I haven't any look on my face any more," he exclaimed.

Upon closer inquiry mother learned he meant he hadn't any color in his cheeks. O. E. M.

Ellen was boasting that her brother in the eighth grade had won a debate.

"Ho! Ho!" laughed Jack, "I've got a sister clear in college."

"That's nothing, what of it?" retorted Ellen.

"Well," exploded Jack, "don't you know that college is the wisest place on earth?" E. L. R.

AN APPEAL FOR INVALIDS.

ISN'T it a joy just to be alive and to get out into the fresh air, now that spring has come at last? There's not one of us who doesn't feel happier, looking forward to outings in the country, happy hours in the parks and at the beaches, and all the rest that goes with spring and summer.

But how about those to whom all this happiness is a hollow mockery—hollow, that is, unless we help? Last week Mrs. L. M. was kind enough to offer a wheel chair through this department—and I wish you could have seen the applications—widowed mothers working themselves gray to support crippled children; young girls and boys robbed of their youth by their loyal efforts to support ailing parents. And there was only one wheel chair.

If a member of your family has been enabled through restored health to give up the wheel chair, may not one of our applicants have it? It would be splendid, particularly now, when fine weather is calling and Mrs. L. M.'s offer has raised hopes.

Please do what you can to make this spring time happier for poor sufferers.

She Has No Coat.

"I am writing to you in behalf of a young woman who needs a spring or winter coat. She has been confined to the house much of the winter. She hasn't had a new coat for years, and she has made over her only one for her little girl. Her size is 38, but she is so thin she can wear a 36. I will see that she gets it. MRS. L. S."

I hope you will be helped in bringing to this young woman the comfort she needs so badly.

Asks for Others.

"Do you think some of your kind readers could help a needy family near me? There are three children, a boy, 12, and girls, 8 and 5, badly in need of clothes. The mother and father have been sick most of the winter. The mother wears size 44; the father, shirt 14½; suit, 40. I will make over anything in clothing, as they have no sewing machine. I would appreciate some quilt scraps. MRS. A. L."

You are to be commended for your own good work in this family's behalf, and I hope someone will aid you.

Their Coats Outgrown.

"Is there some kind reader who in looking over her children's spring clothes has found some coats, too small, that she will give away? My husband has been out of work for three months with a broken leg, and the children—a girl, 7, a boy, 6, and the baby, 3, have outgrown their coats, and we cannot afford new ones.

Misfortune Their Lot.

"I am a young mother with a girl, 5, and three boys, 6, 3, and 1. My husband makes $25 a week and pays for his board in the city and our rent and groceries, but that leaves nothing for clothes and other things. My little girl got a rusty nail in her foot about six months ago, and it took all the money we had saved and could borrow to pay for the hospital and nurse. Please help me to find some one who has a spring and mattress and any old furniture or pieces of rug not in use. My room is almost bare, and I would be glad to get some clothes for the children. Please forgive me if I ask too much. MRS. M. O."

Won't some of my readers help this family which certainly deserves sympathy and material help in misfortune.

Lives in the Woods.

"Would you ask your readers to send me and grandmother, who has been sick nearly fifty years, some salmon, pineapple, salt pork, a dozen seed Irish potatoes, and two pounds of barley. I am a little boy shut in by mud roads and woods in this land of corn bread and no conveniences. Please address my mother as she writes for me. I have bronchiad trouble. LITTLE CHARLES."

You'll have those things, little Charles, as soon as some kind reader writes to me for your address—I trust soon.

Invalids Deserve Help.

"I am a tuberculosis patient at this institution and have been kept inside all winter by the weather, but will soon have an opportunity to get out in the air. My clothes are hardly presentable, and I thought perhaps you could assist me. I wear a 38 inch suit, and anything in that line will surely be appreciated. P. D."

You invalids certainly deserve all the help you can get, and the sympathy besides. I shall be glad to give your address to some one with a discarded suit and clothing.

Clothes His Need.

"I have been a patient in a tuberculosis sanatorium for a year, and will be here for the summer. I am sadly in need of clothes, which I am unable to buy. Maybe some kind friends will give me aid. I need summer pajamas, large size; trousers, size 36, and shoes, size 9. J. G."

Your address will be given to any one who can supply the things asked for.

Now comes the world's most simple method of tooth preservation

PYORRHEA—Don't fear it. There is now no need to be a chronic sufferer. The remarkable new way world's leading medical and dental authorities now advise. What it does and how. Step out of the danger zone of tooth troubles and decay. Why teeth grow yellow—how to whiten them. Some amazing results.

THIS offers you a new way to sound teeth, to freedom from most tooth troubles—a way endorsed by virtually every leading dental authority throughout the civilized world.

To suffer from chronic pyorrhea now is folly. To have yellow, unhealthy teeth, is unnecessary. Upon the advice of foremost physicians and dentists over 20,000 people a day are adopting this new method. Results are amazing.

Free test now offered

Pyorrhea, tooth decay, nearly all the commoner tooth troubles start in the crevices between teeth.

There are 102 such crevices that no ordinary method of prevention can reach. That's why most people have tooth troubles. Why so many of us have yellow, ugly teeth.

Food lodges in those crevices. Then germ life forms. Bacteria thrive in this decaying food. The protective dentine softens. Soon the teeth start to go . . little cavities, then the scourge of pyorrhea.

Bad breath, digestive disturbances, self-poisoning follow too. The average person's mouth, say authorities, is germ laden—thus every time you swallow, you carry countless disease germs into your stomach.

That's why physicians are so insistent upon tooth care today. Scores of ailments and diseases are traced to the teeth

* * *

Science has found a simple combatant—a newly discovered method that works prevention without medicaments.

What it is

You must clean out those crevices. Remove the decaying matter in which germs thrive.

Medicaments won't do it. Neither will ordinary tooth brushing. A recent test on 100 people showed that after three full minutes of brushing with old-time tooth brushes, 76 did not even partially remove intercrevice accumulations!

Today dentists urge the use of a special type of brush called Dr. West's Tooth Brush.

It does what no other method has ever yet attained: Clears food accumulations from between the teeth, reaches where no other method has ever reached before . . . cleanses both inside and outside—cleans out inter-tooth crevices.

In thousands of tests results were almost beyond credence. Yellow teeth gave way to natural whiteness. Spongy gums were strengthened and made firm. Decay was largely avoided.

Under this method, authorities say, pyorrhea and the common tooth disorders of to-day should disappear from the nation in a few years.

Amazing results in one week

In one day, you'll note a marked improvement in the color of your teeth. In one week they'll be whiter than you ever thought they could be.

Your breath will be sweeter. Your mouth will feel amazingly much better. If you are in danger of pyorrhea, you will have combated this menace effectively, stepped out of the danger zone.

Use any good dentifrice that you wish. Antiseptics also keep away germs. Consult your dentist regularly—that is most important of all. Use no old-time method of brushing.

Make the test

Today step into any drug or department store. Ask for Dr. West's Tooth Brush. Use it according to directions for one week. Then note results. It will give you a new conception of tooth cleanliness, of whiter teeth, and offers you a test without risk or obligation.

20,000 people every day are adopting this new method on the advice of physicians and dentists

Old methods of treating tooth disorders have been supplanted. Yellow teeth can be whitened—made 10 shades lighter in a few days, and kept that way.

Pyorrhea is caught at its source and prevented. No one need court that scourge in this day of modern scientific attainment.

Bad breath should stop instantly, because the cause is removed.

Authorities say that in a few years, under this new method of cleaning out the inter-crevice breeding place of germs, ordinary tooth troubles of the present time should almost entirely disappear from the nation. No growing child should be denied the benefits it brings, they say.

These remarkable results are accomplished with a new-type brush, a patented design. It costs no more than old-time brushes, and less than many. Isn't it worth while then to use it in place of less scientific ways?

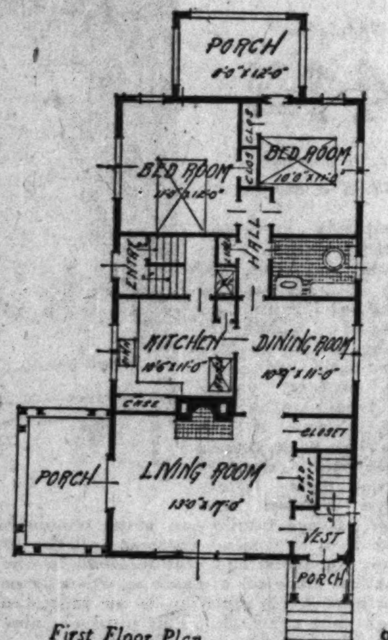
TWO APARTMENT HOUSE.

QUITE unusual for a building of this type is the two apartment house illustrated today. Outwardly it has every appearance of a single dwelling. This makes it much more desirable than the average two family buildings crudely and frigidly designed and put up by modern carpenter methods. In addition to the superior appeal of this particular house is the indisputable truth that it costs no more to build than ugly ones. Presenting a pleasing sense of hominess which carries it a long way in renting prospects is the one pictured today. A building like this is sure to be well worth the money invested in its erection and maintenance. It is not likely to be one of those hopeless places whose windows always flaunt a "To Let" sign. Such an attractive house may be built in residential districts or suburbs, as it cannot detract from the good appearance of the neighborhood, which is the objection voiced by property owners against the average apartment house.

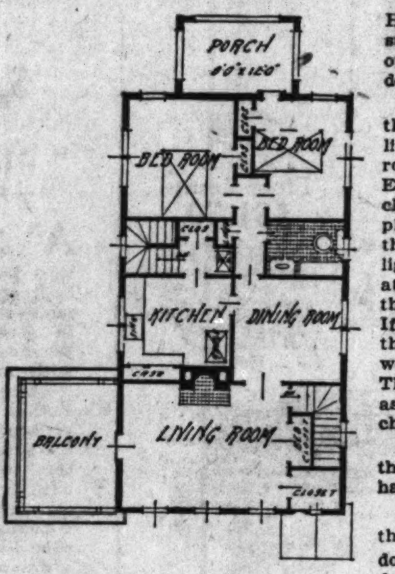
In many cases the owner, instead of building purely as an investment, saves rent or upkeep costs on another house by occupying one apartment himself and renting the other. By this means the taxes, fuel and general running expenses are regularly taken care of.

As may be noted by a glance at the floor plans, the arrangement is a model of compactness. There are two convenient apartments of five rooms each. The design is delightfully laid out, so that the living quarters and the bedrooms are in two distinct groups. This makes them as divided as though they were on separate floors, without necessitating the annoyance of having to climb stairs to get from one set of rooms to the other.

All of the rooms are well lighted and of uniformly good size, suitable for an average family. There is ample space for the general run of furnishings, so that they may be placed comfortably and not present a crowded aspect. Glorifying the living room is a real fireplace, set into the center of the wall opposite three windows. Another feature of the living room is the bed closet, which makes possible the accommodation of an overnight guest. In addition to this there is another closet adjacent to the living room which may be used for coats and wraps. Besides the three windows opposite the fireplace there are double French doors leading, on the first floor, into the sunroom, and on the second, on to the open porch. This porch might be built up easily and inclosed like that on the first floor, so that both apartments would have sunrooms. The two rooms, when the doors are opened wide, give the impression of one large pleasant room.



First Floor Plan



Second Floor Plan

Separated from the living room by French glazed doors, at one side of the fireplace, is the adjoining dining room. This room, in which there is a good double window, is handily located with regard to the kitchen. The kitchen is just the right size for conveniently preparing meals. Beneath the double window is the white enameled sink. Built into a nook, formed by a projection from the living room fireplace, is a commodious pantry case. The range on the second floor, is located just outside the kitchen in the rear entry. Here, too, are placed the refrigerators, where they may be iced more readily than if they were inside. By this arrangement the ice supply is likely to last longer, too, than it would were it nearer to the heat of the range. is placed in the corner beside the dining room door. On the other side of the door, on the first floor, is a small closet for brooms, etc. A similar closet

Having the rear stairway inclosed instead of built on to the outside is another feature which adds to the residential quality of this house.

In the back part of the apartment there are two bedrooms and a bath. A little hall, leading from the dining room, opens into all of these rooms. Each of the bedrooms has a good sized clothes closet and three windows, placed on diagonally opposite walls, so that cross ventilation and plenty of light are assured. A sleeping porch, at the rear of the house, is reached through a door in one of the bedrooms. If desirable, a door could be cut into the other room too, so that the porch would be accessible from both rooms. The porch could be glazed and used as a sewing or sun room, or for a children's playroom.

On the opposite side of the hall from the nicely planned bathroom is a handy linen closet.

For the exterior, the plan is to have the house finished in shingles, stained dove gray. Trims around the windows, the well-proportioned front entrance, and the railing of the upper balcony are to be painted old ivory. The shingled roof is to be variegated in tones of deep blue green. Decorative shutters, vine trellises, and boxes filled with colorful flowers are to be painted a deep blue green to match the roof.

The dimensions of the main house are 23 feet 6 inches by 42 feet 6 inches. At the porch the width is 33 feet. The house could be built, easily, on a 50 foot lot, allowing space at one side for a driveway leading to a double garage in the rear.

HELD FAST.

DEAR ONE: It's all right—I want to see you—as quickly as you can come. The awful doubt and pain are over—now I know for the first time how much true love can forget and forgive.

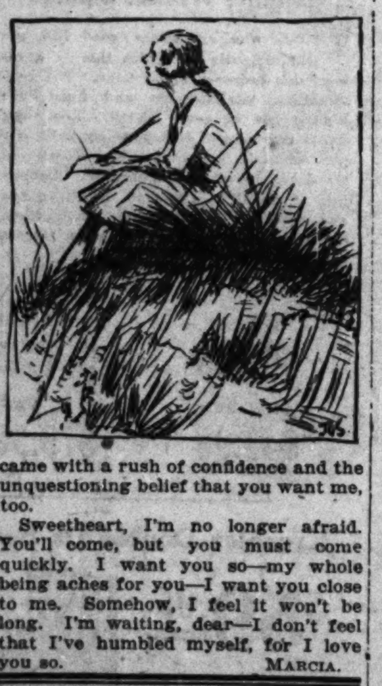
Those first days after we parted so angrily were more terrible than I can ever say, but it's unnecessary—I'm sure you've suffered too, for now I realize that you must feel the same, beloved, else my own love could never be so intense.

O, my dearest, weren't we foolish? I can't think clearly—was it my fault or yours? All I know is that whatever it was it was too trivial to remember—it's all a wild dream to me—a dreadful hurt, a panic of jealousy, quick, angry words—then days of hopeless misery.

I want you to remember what we so often talked of—the changed aspect of this precious old world after we met. My heart was warmed to everything and every one—the hardest things were easy—everything was made for sunshine and love—love of you. A song trembled on my lips all day. Darling—that song begs to come back. And after that hideous hour when you rushed away, I couldn't believe it. The doubts and fears and misery, the conviction that you no longer loved me, the terror of losing you—I shudder when I think of it.

Life without you—what would it be? Without your smile and tenderness and manliness?

And after two days of that terrible thought, it came to me suddenly that I had the power to call you back. It came with a rush of confidence and the unquestioning belief that you want me, too.



Sweetheart, I'm no longer afraid. You'll come, but you must come quickly. I want you so—my whole being aches for you—I want you close to me. Somehow, I feel it won't be long. I'm waiting, dear—I don't feel that I've humbled myself, for I love you so.

DR. CALDWELL'S
SYRUP PEPSIN
Keeps him in good health

Clogged-Up? Here's Quick Aid

NEVER mind what you are using now for constipation. For all you know there is a better remedy! The next time you are clogged up try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a laxative successfully used for 30 years, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Mrs. John A. Goins of Butlerville, Ind., constipated all her life, her stomach injured from years of pill taking, is now functioning daily since taking Syrup Pepsin; and Mr. David O'Connor of Canton, Ohio, suffering steadily for three years, got relief after a few doses. The list of successful users of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is naturally large as over 10 million bottles are sold annually.

Formula on Every Package

Get yourself a bottle at a drug store, the cost being less than a cent a dose. Take a spoonful at bedtime for a few nights and we guarantee that the most chronic constipation will be relieved, or refund your money. A few doses in succession soon train the stomach muscles to act for themselves. Many, however, take it once a week and in that way keep the bowels regularly open. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, unlike harsh physics such as calomel, "candy cathartics," salt waters and powders, is a simple vegetable laxative composed of Egyptian senna and pepsin with tasty aromatics which are entirely harmless.

This Remedy Guaranteed

It has been accurately proven that a constipated person is only 75 per cent efficient. It slows you up; makes you dull and lazy. The Entree to a Wholesale Furniture Exhibit

Many a housewife would give much for the privilege of visiting and selecting from a strictly wholesale display of furniture and floor coverings. Naturally such a display contains many more items than a retail store.

You have this opportunity. PECK & HILLS, through cooperation with your local furniture dealer, extend you an invitation to visit their wholesale exhibit at your earliest convenience.

Ask Your Neighborhood Furniture Dealer for Your Card of Introduction

This Card, from your dealer, gives you the entree to eight floors of the world's finest furniture and floor coverings. It not only enlarges your selection, whether you are seeking a single piece or the furnishings for an entire home, but it permits you to buy through your neighborhood dealer and thus support your home community.

This plan offers fundamental economies to all. It enables the manufacturer to reduce his distribution and display costs. It adds to the dealer's volume of business without adding to his stock, and it reduces his operating expense. It brings you economies as a result of all these savings.

FREE BOOK

Clip and mail to PECK & HILLS, 1353 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and receive a free copy of our 32 page book, "Correct Care of Home Furnishings," telling just how to keep all kinds of furniture in the best possible condition.

Spanish mackerel are caught in the bay, and the king fish industry thrives in the gulf stream where the shy pompano, the common grouper, bonitoes, and barracudas swim between dolphins, sail fish and sharks, also turtles, and do not know how many other monsters. I observed the king fish fleet on the horizon on my first morning here, and have daily acquired bits of information, some of which is fairly pushed in one's face by anglers' clubs.

One of the places I naturally went to for information on this subject was a fine fish shop—the best in Miami—on the bay, or on the front or water's edge of Miami. I quizzed the seller who was handling his fish in a neater fashion than any man in the trade I have ever watched. Limousines constantly drove up, and both men and women came in for their fish, often with a man guest for whom they were planning a fish dinner. I did not see any of them going to the shop next door, and I did not wonder when I got the stench there from mixture of ice and fish, when covers were lifted. O, this fish selling business! It is so hopeless if managed in a dirty way, and it so often is.

Pompano was selling at 75 cents a pound, to my astonishment. The explanation given was that the price had to be the same as that of the New York markets, or the fishmen would send their light catches north. Those I saw buying pompano were not such as would mind the price, while I found out why the price of broiled pompano was high in the hotels. If I remember rightly it has sometimes been a great deal less than 75 cents a pound on our own markets, as in New Orleans where the Gulf of Mexico pompano is more less abundant.

Choosing for Himself.

One of the buyers was a man of commanding place in the world, a world traveler and evidently one who placed eating among the greatest and most pleasant of the privileges of life. He was one also who liked to attend to the choosing of the raw materials for his table himself. I tried as slyly as I could to draw him out while he waited for his crawfish and pompano to be put up.

"Do you know what those are?" he said brusquely to me, pointing to a small pile in the refrigerated case of something that our fish sellers so often call shrimps. This fish is also baked, and I presume it is good with a superior mashed potato stuffing mixed with cooked vegetables like gland came to my aid, with some others, and I said, "prawns," registering a success, while he was most scornful of the practice of calling these "coarse things" shrimps, as we so often do, yet he admitted they made a good cocktail.

The crawfish of this coast, called also the Florida lobster, are more like the French langouste, or spiny lobster, than like our northern lobster. I bought as small a one as I could buy—one pound in weight—perfectly cooked, and went away to enjoy it at a restaurant where I paid for the cover of bread and butter to go with it, first asking permission to bring in my own luncheon. I felt endlessly adventuresome from my morning's fishing experiences, capped by this delectable snack. It was, indeed, delicious, and seemed to me far preferable to the usual Newberg service of it.

Shrimps Delicate and Tender.

During the summer perhaps all people on the southern waters revel in the shrimps, delicate and tender, and with no fishy taste about them. The objection I have to them, as I have been able to get them here prepared by the eating places which specialize in them, is that even an order of plain shrimp is dressed with far too much sand. Exquisite things treated thus brutally disappoint an intelligent eater no end.

The man who was so scornful of prawns wanted stone crab, and was complaining because he had not been able to get it. He advised me that the crawfish was better cold than when boiled, because it got tough with the boiling. That depends on the cook, I wanted to tell him, but, after all, I do think it best cold and plain.

Broiled Pompano.

From all the information I got from those in that fish shop, I judge that no one thinks of doing anything else than broil the pompano, after splitting it and putting on it a great deal of butter. Fifteen minutes was given as the time for the cooking, while the recommendation for Spanish mackerel, which was selling for 30 cents a pound, and also seemingly caught by all the amateur fishermen about, was that it be broiled for half an hour.

The Grouper.

The grouper seems to be the fish most universally used here for the minced carrot, onion, green pepper, etc., which raises fresh haddock to such fineness as a dinner plate.

Biscayne Bay Yacht Club Chowder.

The following recipe was given to me by Miss Jefferson Bell of the Miami Herald: "One-half pound of salt pork, diced, and fried delicately with two large onions, two green peppers (seeds and membrane removed), one can of tomatoes, eight pounds of fresh fish (grouper or snapper), three quarts of water, and one quart of milk or one tall can of unsweetened condensed milk mixed with water. The milk should be added just before the chowder is ready to be served. I add a quantity of minced parsley when nearly done and a bit of cayenne pepper and salt to season. This is the chowder they serve at the annual chowder party of the Biscayne Yacht club on Key Biscayne near the old Florida light. The recipe is by Herbert, chef on W. J. Matheson's yacht Calabash. The chowder is cooked in huge pots in the open and is served piping hot with sea biscuits and hot coffee. Before it is served to the guests the commodore tastes it to see that it is right. It is a picturesque affair and has been kept up thirty-seven years. I also make an excellent fish chowder, using this recipe and the canned fish flakes. Potatoes kill the flavor in chowder."

Here is something to consider: I have always liked potatoes in fish chowder, but shall, when I get to a stove of my own again, try out this recipe. It happened that I had clipped a description of this thirty-seventh annual chower before I got the recipe or met Miss Bell, and here is a bit of the description:

"At double rows of tables under the sheltering palms that line the shores of Key Biscayne, where year after year Commodore William J. Matheson is host to the Biscayne Bay Yacht club and its guests, the yachtsmen spread their lunches, which were supplemented by the steaming, savory chowder served from huge iron kettles in the palm thatched hut, where it was cooked over camp fires."

A fish chowder was the favorite picnic supplement on old gala days in New England—Fourth of July picnics and such—when residents of a town resorted to a grove, built temporary tables, and so forth. These groves were usually by lake or stream, and there was only a gasp between the fish on the hook and the fish in the chowder. It is pleasant to one brought up on fish chowder picnics to find them flourishing today.

An Adapted Maine Chowder.

A group of those spending their winters in fine homes in Coconut Grove, which seems a part of Miami or is, have the nice habit of meeting once a week for a picnic supper. A man from Maine makes a fish chowder, or he does this with the help of his family, who prepare the vegetables—onions and potatoes—which are cooked in layers with the fish [grouper for haddock] and then finished with a generous quantity of milk and a little butter. But the fat mostly used is that from gently tried out salt pork added when the fish and vegetables are half cooked. There were twenty-one of us the evening I shared this chowder and it was excellent, and more like the fish stews of southern France than most one gets. It was not in the least mushy, but was more than half liquid, with solid pieces in it. This was excellent heated up the next day, I was told.

Miami Fish Chowder.

There seem to me some excellent ideas in the following part of a recipe taken from a local collection of recipes: "Grouper is the best fish to use, although any of the white coarse grained fish are good for chowder. To economize buy a four pound grouper and cut steaks from the center part, using head, shoulders, and tail portion for chowder, or buy small grouper."

The rest of the recipe is much like that for other chowders, with a recommendation for heating up some the next day. If rightly managed, a heated up fish chowder is an excellent luncheon dish.

Kingfish and Others.

The kingfish—so common here—steaks of it broiled—seems to me remarkable in that it has a dark flesh like mackerel but that this cooks white. There is also a king mackerel and a trout that is held in esteem. Its roe is egged and crumbed and fried. The bluefish is much like the trout. The sea bass sautéed in butter is esteemed, and I have listened to a number of bits of talk about this or that fish being the finest to eat of any that swims.

COME UP TO COLORADO

THE PLAYGROUND OF THE NATION

"You haven't seen the West until you've seen Colorado"

Of the 59 mountain peaks in the United States, 14,000 feet high or over, 46 are in Colorado. There are two National Parks—Rocky Mountain and Mesa Verde—and fifteen National Forests in Colorado. Auto highways and scenic railroads make this vacation wonderland easily accessible to the visitor.

$41.00 ROUND TRIP Chicago to Denver

Effective June 1—Return Limit Oct. 31

Plan to enjoy at least two weeks in Colorado this summer. Denver is the Gateway to 12 National Parks and 32 Mountain Monuments. The large number and variety of trips you can take in Colorado are limited only by the length of time you can stay.

Blossom Week in Michigan

APPLE, Pear, Peach, Plum and Cherry trees are all in bloom this week.

Mile upon mile of paved roads bordered with acre after acre of orchards in white, tinted with the most delicate of nature's colorings—the air full of their rare perfume. That's what awaits you in Michigan this week.

Come any day, or make it a point to spend Blossom Sunday, May 18, or come on Wednesday, May 14

BIG PAGEANT

Crowning of the Blossom Queen

Come direct to St. Joseph and Benton Harbor. From these towns routes have been marked taking you through the wonderful orchards and vineyards.

Paved roads all the way—only a few hours' drive—or a night's ride on the Graham & Morton boat—less than three hours by Pere Marquette trains.

See Oregon!

Enjoy a perfect vacation where the summers are cool!

IF YOU have not yet arranged for your summer vacation decide today to spend it in the wonderful Oregon country. There are low excursion rates from your city and you will find the trip, either by rail or by motor, intensely interesting and instructive.

There is no vacation like one spent in the big outdoors where the ozone from the mountains, primeval forests, and the sea, invigorate and build up both the body and mind.

Then, too, you can enjoy your favorite sport in Oregon—fishing, motoring, golfing, mountaineering, camping in evergreen forests, or just resting by the seashore. Agricultural and commercial opportunities may interest you, too.

Arrange to reach Portland by June 11-12-13, the dates of the famous Rose Festival, when millions of roses decorate the streets and the public buildings, and are lavishly displayed in one of the most spectacular pageants held in the United States.

Decide now that your vacation shall be spent in Oregon—in the Pacific Northwest—the land of Opportunity. If you require any information about rates, hotel accomodations, sport, or of any other character, write to us today.

For beautifully illustrated booklet on Oregon's resorts and resources, address Portland Chamber of Commerce, Room 613 Oregon Building, Portland, Oregon.

Colorado Springs

Manitou and the Pikes Peak Region

—the Logical, Easily-reached Vacation Spot Where Days Are Bright and Nights Are Cool

You know instinctively that cool nights mean sound sleep every night in the Pikes Peak Region. But you must see the bright days, breathe the pine-spiced air and feel the exhilaration of a vacation in this famed scenic region to know what a real Colorado vacation can mean—at a price you want to pay.

Such a vacation pays dividends in rest and rejuvenation. And it is only a few hours away by comfortable trains, or famed national motor highways.

Colorado College, Broadmoor Art Academy and Missouri Military Academy Each Have Summer Courses in Ideal Surroundings

Summer educational courses in Colorado Springs don't mean strength-sapping work. They're more like pleasant recreation.

Colorado College offers six weeks' course in college subjects, music and art. Broadmoor Art Academy offers exceptional opportunities under instruction of nationally known artists. Colorado Camp is the summer school of Missouri Military Academy for boys from 8 to 18 years.

The Chamber of Commerce will answer any question in detail—send literature—if you write your name and address on margin of this advertisement and specify subject in which you're interested.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

A "trouble shooter" is not always a married man (as suggested by a subtitle in this picture). Sometimes he's a fellow who monkeys with electricity. Tom Steele of the Ajax Power company was the man they hollered for when wires got crossed, fuses blew out—or any other ailments to a power plant, the nerve system of which is electricity.

The Ajax, according to the scenario, was only a small company which had a mighty competitor and, if I got the story right, there was some feeling over a certain tract of timberland both wanted. The government decided to let them contest for it, and set a day when both companies should send men racing to the recorder's office over a given route. The land would go to the company whose representative was first to sign the recorder's book.

You'll understand what a grand chance this provides for Tony, the famous Mix horse, to do his stuff. And he does it, too! The beautiful beast is right there with the thrills from beginning till end of the story.

Story by the Hattons.

This latter, by the way, was written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, and is by all odds the best vehicle Mr. Mix has had in a long time. The subtitles are cleverer; the situations are more intriguing; there is, on the whole, more sense to "The Trouble Shooter" than one has been accustomed to find in recent pictures starring the hard riding, noble, loving Tom.

For some reason or other this star never gets much of a chance at sheiking. Who the conscientious objector is—no can say. There's always a girl in the case, but as a rule she's made just as scarce as possible. Kathleen Key's Nancy Brewster, however, crops out pretty frequently.

Miss Key departs from the saccharine, clinging type of screen heroine usually called on duty to pose as foil for a male of the clean, open spaces. As Miss Brewster she's a spoiled daughter with a mind of her own. Her father "Engaged Like You Say?" Smiles Pola, "O, Fun-ny!"

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—"I lo-ve Rod La Roque! pair-haps. Would it be so strange? All women lo-ve Rod."

Thus spake Pola Negri, registering the enigmatic smile that makes the fans sit up and cry for more. that makes the fans sit up and cry for more.

"But engaged, like you say? O, fun-ny, very fun-ny." Exit Pola, laughing, heavy lids shuttering green eyes.

Rod gallantly denied he was to marry Pola, although he admitted he was interested in her. He thought the reason people had them engaged was the weekly parties that brought him as Pola's partner.

POLA NEGRI Escorted everywhere these days by Rod La Roque.

"Mickey Neilan and Blanche, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno, and Kathlyn Williams and her husband were there, and that explains that," said Rod.

Which doesn't explain anything at all. Rod was at the dinner and theater party Pola gave the visiting Paramount officials on Thursday at the Montmartre.

Pola was a-glitter with all the Negri diamonds, two rings, a sunburst, and a particularly amusing tiara. Her old Berlin friend, Ernst Lubitsch, and his wife were present. Like Poli, Lubitsch has applied for naturalization papers.

Pauline Frederick, Betty Compson, and Jimmy Cruze, Cecil De Mille, Mrs. De Mille, Julia Faye, and Jeanie MacPherson were there, too.

The guests were taken to see "Broadway After Dark," at the Rialto, directed by Monta Bell, who was the assistant of Charlie Chaplin during the making of "A Woman of Paris."

Apparently Willie's in Favor.

Pola and Rod are not stealing all the love scenes being staged just now. Constance Talmadge is still seen with Willie Collier Jr. It looks as though Willie were winning the Constance stakes. We saw Connie and Willie dancing at the Montmarte on Friday. Connie looks like a little girl in a crêpe skirt and silk sweater.

Ben Lyon was moping in a corner, apathetic, thoroughly bored. Not even a dance with Carmelita Geraghty cheered him. And dancing with Carmelita is a well known tonic.

He confided in friends that he was devastated because Barbara La Marr is so far away. Because he isn't to go to New York. O, what's the use, he asks.

Perhaps after playing opposite Pola Negri in her next picture Ben will be consoled.

May McAvoy nearly bit the press agent's head off when he proposed that she go down to the train to see Glenn Hunter roll into Los Angeles.

"I won't, I won't," she said. "I'm not engaged to him and never was."

Some one asked Mr. Hunter at the depot if Miss McAvoy was to appear in the stage version of "Merton" with him. He replied that he "hoped it could be arranged." Mr. Hunter was lofty about it.

Viola Dana has made up the mad that she and Lefty Flynn had for so long. They are the best of friends, and

Where "Rest" Means a Good Bit of Work

By Edward Moore.

HONEST labor bears a lovely face to opera singers in general and to the aggregation of golden throats called the Ravinia company in particular. These are seldom busier than when the calendar says they are at leisure. Their repose consists in learning new rôles and their diversion in getting ready to transfer from the operatic stage to the concert platform.

Did you think that the career of an opera singer is made up of singing a certain number of times a week, drawing large fees for the operation, and leading an idle and luxurious life between times? Mr. Eckstein admits with a not altogether enraptured sigh that the part about the large fees is quite correct. As to the rest of it, he has a different opinion, and he transmits some news of what they will be doing between now and June 21 to prove his point.

Florence Easton is taking what she calls a rest at her home at Port Washington, Long Island. This means she is studying some new rôles and preparing a few concert programs. For she has a number of major concert assignments, the Wagner program of the Evanston festival among them, which are due before the beginning of the Ravinia season.

The notable newcomer, Lucrezia Bori, is "resting" in much the same way. Her Ravinia contract necessitated a recasting of her summer's plans, which were concerned with a vacation in Europe. She has, therefore, retired to somewhere in the eastern mountains for the present, and will make a flying trip to Europe in September.

Pareto Singing in Spain.

Graziella Pareto is singing in the opera houses of her native Spain. She will leave there June 1 and reach Ravinia in time to begin rehearsals for the season there. Thalia Sabanieva is on a concert tour in the United States, an activity which is also occupying the time and attention of Ina Bourskaya, Jeanne Gordon, Merle Alcock, and Margery Maxwell.

Giovanni Martinelli left for Italy a few days ago, as soon as the Metropolitan season closed. He is building a home there, and as soon as he has made an inspection of its progress he will return for rehearsals, and his debut on the opening night of the season. Giacomo Lauri-Volpi has several new rôles to sing this summer and has retired from public appearances to study them. Giuseppe Danise is occupying himself in a similar manner. His vacation, at least in the first part of the summer, will be just long enough to motor from New York to Chicago.

Armand Tokatyan has also canceled personal affairs for professional engagements. He is a bridegroom of recent date, and will pass the first summer of married life in operatic employment here instead of on a European trip, as he had planned. Vicente Ballester is studying new parts in New York. Mario Basiola, one of the newcomers, abandoned an Italian tour when he signed his Ravinia contract. Desiré Defrere is visiting members of his family in Belgium. Léon Rothier is in New York and Virgilio Lazzari, another basso, is in Chicago with new rôles to learn and concert engagements to fill. Paolo Ananian, Giordano Paltrinieri, and Louis

Peggy Has Her Way; Drops Music for a Mystery Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Peggy Wood is that contrary she insists on being a cute comedienne in place of a musical comedy star. Like Eleanor Painter, she wants to act. Henry Savage offered her bundles and bundles of money if she would continue with "The Clinging Vine," which was her singing piece last year, but she just wouldn't.

So she went away to Bermuda or Honolulu or some place, married young John V. W. Weaver, the Brooklyn poet, and came back this week to act in a mystery comedy written by Stuart Olivier and aptly enough called "The Bride."

You know what mystery comedies are. They're plays in which the butler is never what he pretends to be and the smartest secret service agent on the force takes charge of the last act and collects automatics from all the other members of the cast.

In this one the mystery is fairly well sustained. At least for me. But I never could guess them. Peggy is a young woman who invades the home of a couple of Washington Square bachelors in a bridal costume, explaining just before she faints that she has escaped from an old man who is forcing her to marry him.

The boys are nonplussed, not to say considerably perturbed, but they can't do much but let her stay. And when she takes off her bridal veil and gown and borrows a suit of pajamas they simply have to lend them to her. Which permits her to sleep downstairs. That night she steals the jewels, or you think she does, and falls in love with the younger brother at the same time.

After which all is explained. She is the most gifted of sleuths, but she is ready to settle down in Washington Square and raise a social register progeny if she is urged. Which she is.

Whistling girls, crowing hens, and singing girls who want to act have this in common. Sooner or later they all get into vaudeville. Peggy is a better and less conscious singing comedienne than she is a dramatic comedienne at this writing, but she is having a good time and may later be much better. Ferdinand Gottschalk helps her a lot as a fussy bachelor and Donald Cameron plays a decent sort of hero.

I read a statement somewhere that Eleonora Duse had accumulated $90,000 on her last tour of America. It is not true. If it had been true it would have given color to the story of her passing in a Pittsburgh hotel that it did not have. We could then have written sympathetically, if a little chidingly, of the greed that kills.

As a matter of fact, Duse organized this last American tour practically on a sick bed. She was subject to attacks of one kind or another that were so weakening she could not rally for days. But needing, or feeling the need of, more money than her meager savings and government pension allowed her, she wanted to come.

Her search for a manager was discouraging. As she could not agree to play more than two performances a week, and must enjoy a day's rest for each day of travel, the

Trying to Persuade You to See "Sun-Up"

By Frederick Donaghey.

THIS column would be a better thing in my appraisal if it contained words persuading you to go to the La Salle while "Sun-Up" is there. I am mindful of the peril that the play might not please you, or you, or even you; for it is like most other plays which a fellow recommends in print, in that not everybody will care for it. I might help by saying that it isn't at all highbrow, but am deterred by remembering that no play is that, and that plays called highbrow are not plays at all. . . . Anyway, "Sun-Up" isn't, although the ticket-buying last week indicated that many persons thought so, and were accordingly not in line in the lobby. "Sun-Up" isn't even art-y, which is an adjective of semi-derisive implications, and destined for what is known as good-usage.

H. REEVES-SMITH A good comedian who's in "Grounds for Divorce" [White Photo]

Indeed, there is quite a catalogue of the unpleasant things which "Sun-Up" isn't, although you may fear that it is most or all of them. Thus, it isn't a faithful but dull bit of photography, snapped in an out-of-the-way place and put into the theater in the mistaken belief that to be painstaking is to be entertaining. And so on in this negative strain, as if I thought you might "by indirection find direction out." . . . Whereas, the virtues of "Sun-Up" are definite and sufficient, if not numerous. As I sought to make clear in Tuesday's report on it, the play has a quality and an appeal like the longer, firmer pieces acted here by the Irish Players. Whether they were actual transcripts of a phase of life I do not know: that "Sun-Up" is I am certain. It takes its matter from a phase of the American Scene, as has already been said. . . .

And it isn't "important," although it is as nearly so as any other new play of the season. Nor am I in agreement with Miss D. F. F. when she writes in to urge that "a playgoer's liking or disliking 'Sun-Up' should be a valid test of his intelligence."

Playgoing and Intelligence.

A man's reactions to a play are not dependable as a measure of his intelligence. He may possess exquisite discrimination in matters of the theater, and yet be a boob and a gomphrel in all other departments of life. . . . A Chicagoan whose creative intelligence enables him to pay rates and taxes on an income of $100,000 told me within the fortnight that he has found æsthetic delights in both "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Topsy and Eva," has been to each uncounted times, and regards each in kind as peerless diversion. Induced by my report on Martin-Harvey's venture with "Œdipus Rex," he went, and called me up to tell me that he regarded it as "pretty goofy." He subscribes three nights a week to the Opera, and arranges with his associates and his clients that they shall summon him by 'phone to his residence into important after-dinner conferences on those nights. It is my belief that he would cry with rage for the wasted evening if submitted to "Sun-Up," and that he might adore "Simon Called Peter."

Taste in matters of the drama bears no necessary rela-

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

EDITED BY Professor J. ARTHUR THOMSON

A PLAIN STORY SIMPLY TOLD ------ XXI.—EVOLUTION GOING ON

EVOLUTION, as we have seen in a previous chapter, is another word for race history. It means the ceaseless process of becoming, linking generation to generation of living creatures. The doctrine of evolution states the fact that the present is the child of the past and the parent of the future. It comes to this, that the living plants and animals we know are descended from ancestors on the whole simpler, and these from others likewise simpler, and so on, back and back—till we reach the first living creatures, of which, unfortunately, we know nothing. Evolution is a process of racial change in a definite directon, whereby new forms arise, take root, and flourish, alongside of or in the place of their ancestors, which were in most cases rather simpler in structure and behavior.

The rock record, which cannot be wrong, though we may read it wrongly, shows clearly that there was once a time in the history of the earth when the only backboned animals were fishes. Ages passed, and there evolved amphibians, with fingers and toes, scrambling on to dry land. Ages passed, and there evolved reptiles, in bewildering profusion. There were fish lizards and sea serpents, terrestrial dragons and flying dragons, a prolific and varied stock. From the terrestrial dinosaurs it seems that birds and mammals arose. In succeeding ages there evolved all the variety of birds and all the variety of mammals. Until at last arose the man. The question is whether similar processes of evolution are still going on.

We are so keenly aware of rapid changes in mankind, though these concern the social heritage much more than the flesh and blood natural inheritance, that we find no difficulty in the idea that evolution is going on in mankind. We know the contrast between modern man and primitive man, and we are convinced that in the past, at least, progress has been a reality. That degeneration may set in is an awful possibility—involution rather than evolution—but even if going back became for a time the rule we cannot give up the hope that the race would recover itself and begin afresh to go forward. For although there have been retrogressions in the history of life, continued through unthinkably long ages, and although great races, the flying dragons, for instance, have become utterly extinct, leaving no successors whatsoever, we feel sure that there has been on the whole a progress towards nobler, more masterful, more emancipated, more intelligent, and better forms of life—a progress toward what mankind at its best has always regarded as best, i. e., affording most enduring satisfaction. So we think of evolution going on in mankind, evolution chequered by involution, but on the whole progressive evolution.

Evolutionary Prospect for Man

IT is not likely that man's body will admit of great change, but there is room for some improvement, e. g., in the superfluous length of the food canal and the overcrowding of the teeth. It is likely, however, that there will be constitutional changes, e. g., of prolonged youthfulness, a higher standard of healthfulness, and a greater resistance to disease. It is justifiable to look forward to great improvements in intelligence and in control. The potentialities of the human brain, as it is, are far from being utilised to the full, and new departures of promise are of continual occurrence. What is of great importance is that the new departures or variations which emerge in fine children should be fostered, not nipped in the bud, by the social environment, evolution included. The evolutionary prospect for man is promising.

But it is very important to realise that among plants and animals likewise evolution is going on.

On an ordinary big clock we do not readily see that even the minute hand is moving, and if the clock struck only once in a hundred years we can conceive of people arguing whether the hands did really move at all. So it often is with the changes that go on from generation to generation in living creatures. The flux is so slow, like the moving of a glacier, that some people fail to be convinced of its reality. And it must, of course, be admitted that some kinds of living creatures, like the lamp shell lingula or the pearly nautilus, hardly change from age to age, whereas others, like some of the birds and butterflies, are always giving rise to something new. The evening primrose among plants and the fruit fly, drosophila, among animals, are well known examples of organisms which are at present in a sporing or mutating mood.

Certain dark varieties of moth, e. g., of the peppered moth, are taking the place of the paler type in some parts of England, and the same is true of some dark forms of sugar bird in the West Indian islands. Very important is the piece of statistics worked out by Prof. R. C. Punnett, that "if a population contains .001 per cent of a new variety, and if that variety has even a 5 per cent selection advantage over the original form, the latter will almost completely disappear in less than a hundred generations." This sort of thing has been going on all over the world for untold ages, and the face of animate nature has consequently changed.

We are impressed by striking novelties that crop up—a clever dwarf, a musical genius, a calculating boy, a cock with a ten foot tail, a wonder horse with a mane reaching to the ground, a tailless cat, a white blackbird, a copper beech, a greater celandine with much cut up leaves; but this sort of mutation is common, and smaller, less brusque variations are commoner still. They form the raw material of possible evolution. We are actually standing before an apparently inexhaustible fountain of change. This is evolution going on.

The Sporting Jellyfish

IT is of interest to consider a common animal like the jellyfish aurelia. It is admirably suited for a leisurely life in the open sea, where it swims about by contracting its saucer shaped body, thus driving water out from its concavity. By means of millions of stringing cells on its four frilled lips and on its marginal tentacles it is able to paralyze and lasso minute crustaceans and the like, which it then wafts into its mouth. It has a very eventful life history, for it has in its early youth to pass through a fixed stage, fastened to rock or seaweed, but it is a successful animal, well suited for its habitat and practically cosmopolitan in its distribution. It is certainly an old established creature. Yet it is very variable in color and in size, and even in internal structure. Very often it is the size of a saucer or a soup plate, but giants over two feet in diameter are well known. Much more important, however, than variation in color and size are the inborn changes in structure. Normally a jellyfish has its parts in four or multiples of four. Thus it has four frilled lips, four tufts of digestive filaments in its stomach, and four brightly colored reproductive organs. It has eight sense organs round the margin of its disc, eight branched and eight unbranched radial canals running from the central stomach to a canal around the circumference. The point of giving these details is just this, that every now and then we find a jellyfish with its parts in sixes, fives, or threes, and with a multitude of minor idiosyncrasies. Even in the well established jellyfish there is a fountain of change.

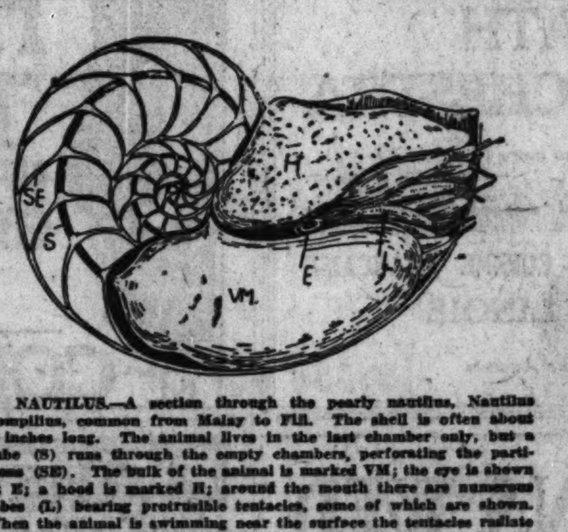
Evolution of Plants

IT is instructive to look at the various kinds of cabbages, such as cauliflower and Brussels sprouts, kale and curly greens, and remember that they are all scions of the not very promising wild cabbage found on our shores. And are not all the aristocrat apple trees of our orchards descended from the plebeian crab apple of the roadside? We know far too little about the precise origin of our cultivated plants, but there is no doubt that after man got a hold of them he took advantage of their variability to establish race after race, say, of rose and chrysanthemum, of potato and cereal. The evolution of cultivated plants is continuing before our eyes and the creations of Mr. Luther Burbank, such as the stoneless plum and the primus berry, the spineless cactus and the Shasta daisy, are merely striking instances of what is always going on.

There is reason to believe that the domestic dog has risen three times, from three distinct ancestors—a wolf, a jackal, and a coyote. So a multiple pedigree must be allowed for in the case of the dog, and the same is true in regard to some other domesticated animals. But the big fact is the great variety of breeds that man has been able to fix, after he once got started with a domesticated type. There are over 200 well marked breeds of domestic pigeons, and there is very strong evidence that all are descended from the wild rockdove, just as the numerous kinds of poultry are descended from the jungle fowl of some parts of India and the Malay islands. Even more familiar is the way in which man has, so to speak, unpacked the complex fur of the wild rabbit and established all the numerous color varieties which we see among domestic rabbits. And apart from color varieties there are long-haired Angoras, and quaint lop-eared forms, and many more besides. All this points to evolution going on.



NAUTILUS.—A section through the pearly nautilus, Nautilus pompilius, common from Malay to Fiji. The shell is often about 9 inches long. The animal lives in the last chamber only, but a tube (S) runs through the empty chambers, perforating the partitions (SE). The bulk of the animal is marked VM; the eye is shown at E; a hood is marked H; around the mouth there are numerous lobes (L) bearing protrusible tentacles, some of which are shown. When the animal is swimming near the surface the tentacles radiate out in all directions, and it has been described as "a shell with something like a cauliflower sticking out of it." The pearly nautilus is a good example of a conservative type, for it began in the Triassic era. But the family of nautiloids to which it belongs illustrates vividly what is meant by a dwindling race. The nautiloids began in the Cambrian, reached their golden age in the Silurian, and began to decline markedly in the Carboniferous. There are 2,500 extinct or fossil species of nautiloids, and only four living today.

The Romance of the Wheat

IT is well known that Neolithic man grew wheat, and some authorities have put the date of the first wheat harvest at between 15,000 and 10,000 years ago. The ancient civilizations of Babylonia, Egypt, Crete, Greece, and Rome were largely based on wheat, and it is highly probable that the first great wheat fields were in the fertile land between the Tigris and the Euphrates. The oldest Egyptian tombs that contain wheat, which, by the way, never germinates after its millennia of rest, belong to the first dynasty, and are about 6,000 years old. But there must have been a long history of wheat before that.

Now, it is an interesting fact that the almost certain ancestor of the cultivated wheat is at present living on the arid and rocky slopes of Mount Hermon. It is called Tritisum hermonis, and it is varying notably today, as it did long ago when it gave rise to the emmer, which was cultivated in the Neolithic age and is the ancestor of all our ordinary wheats. We must think of Neolithic man noticing the big seeds of this Hermon grass, gathering some of the heads, breaking the brittle spikelet bearing axis in his fingers, knocking off the rough awns or bruising the spikelets in his hand till the glumes or chaff separated off and could be blown away, chewing a mouthful of the seeds—and resolving to sow and sow again.

That was the beginning of a long story, in the course of which man took advantage of the numerous variations that cropped up in this sporting stock and established one successful race after another on his fields. Virgil refers in the "Georgics" to the gathering of the largest and fullest ears of wheat in order to get good seed for another sowing, but it was not till the first quarter of the nineteenth century that the great step was taken, by men like Patrick Sheriff of Haddington, of deliberately selecting individual ears of great excellence and segregating their progeny from mingling with mediocre stock. This is the method which has been followed with remarkable success in modern times.

One of the factors that assisted the allies in overcoming the food crisis in the darkest period of the war was the virtue of Marquis wheat, a prolific, early ripening, hard red spring wheat with excellent milling and baking qualities. It is now the dominant spring wheat in Canada and the United States, and it has enormously increased the real wealth of the world in the last ten years (1921). Now, our point is simply that this Marquis wheat is a fine example of evolution going on. In 1917 upward of 250,000,000 bushels of this wheat were raised in North America, and in 1918 upward of 300,000,000 bushels; yet the whole originated from a single grain planted in an experimental plot at Ottawa by Dr. Charles E. Saunders so recently as the spring of 1903.

We must not dwell too long on this particular instance of evolution, though it has meant much to our race. We wish, however, following Prof. Buller's "Essays on Wheat" (1919), to explain the method by which this good seed was discovered. From one we may learn all. The parent of Marquis wheat on the male side was the mid-Europe Red Fife—a first class cereal. The parent on the female side was less promising, a rather nondescript, not pure bred wheat, called Red Calcutta, which was imported from India into Canada about thirty years ago. The father was part of a cargo that came from the Baltic to Glasgow, and was happily included in a sample sent on to David Fife in Ontario about 1842. From one kernel of this sample David Fife started his stock of Red Fife, which was crossed by Dr. Saunders with Hard Red Calcutta. The result of the cross was a medley of types, nearly a hundred varieties all together, and it was in scrutinizing these that Dr. Saunders hit upon Marquis. He worked steadily through the material, studying head after head of what resulted from sowing, and selecting out those that gave most promise. Each of the heads selected was propagated; most of the results were rejected; the elect were sifted again and yet again, and finally Marquis wheat emerged, rich in constructive possibilities, probably the most valuable food plant in the world. It is like a romance to read that "the first crop of the wheat that was destined within a dozen years to overtax the mightiest elevators in the land was stored away in the winter of 1904-'05 in a paper packet no larger than an envelope."

Thus from the wild wheat of Mount Hermon there evolved one of the most important food plants of the world. This surely is evolution going on.

Changes in the Animal Life of a Country

NOTHING gives us a more convincing impression of evolution in being than a succession of pictures of the animal life of a country in different ages. Dr. James Ritchie, a naturalist of distinction, has written a masterly book, "The Influence of Man on Animal Life in Scotland" (1920), in which we get this succession of pictures. "Within itself," he says, "a fauna is in a constant state of uneasy restlessness, an assemblage of creatures which in its parts ebbs and flows as one local influence or another plays upon it." There are temporary and local changes, endless disturbances and readjustments of the "balance of nature." One year there is a plague of field voles, perhaps next year grouse disease is rife; in one place there is a huge increase of starlings, in another place of rabbits; here cockchafers are in the ascendant, and there the moles are spoiling the pasture. "But while the parts fluctuate, the fauna as a whole follows a path of its own. As well as internal tides which swing to and fro about an average level, there is a drift which carries the fauna bodily along an 'irretraceable course.'" This is partly due to considerable changes of climate, for climate calls the tune to which living creatures dance, but it is also due to new departures among the animals themselves. We need not go back to the extinct animals and lost faunas of past ages—for Britain has plenty of relics of these—which "illustrate the reality of the faunal drift," but it may be useful, in illustration of evolution in being, to notice what has happened in Scotland since the end of the great ice age.

Some nine thousand years ago or more certain long-headed, square-jawed, short-limbed, but agile hunters and fishermen, whom we call Neolithic man, established themselves in Scotland. What was the state of the country then?

"It was a country of swamps, low forests of birch, alder, and willow, fertile meadows, and snow-capped mountains. Its estuaries penetrated farther inland than they now do, and the sea stood at the level of the Fifty Foot beach. On its plains and in its forests roamed many creatures which are strange to the fauna of today—the elk and the reindeer, wild cattle, the wild boar and perhaps wild horses, a fauna of large animals which paid toll to the European lynx, the brown bear, and the wolf. In all likelihood, the marshes resounded to the boom of the bittern and the plains to the breeding calls of the crane and the great bustard."

Now, what happened in this kingdom of Caledonia which Neolithic man had found? He began to introduce domesticated animals, and that meant a thinning of the ranks of predacious creatures. "Safety first" was the dangerous motto in obedience to which man exterminated the lynx, the brown bear, and the wolf. Other creatures, such as the great auk, were destroyed for food, and others, like the marten, for their fur. Small pests were destroyed to protect the beginnings of agriculture; larger animals, like the boar, were hunted out of existence; others, like the pearl bearing river mussels, yielded to subtler demands. No doubt there was protection also—protection for sport, for utility, for æsthetic reasons, and because of humane sentiments; even wholesome superstitions have safeguarded the robin redbreast and the wren. There were introductions, too—the rabbit for utility, the pheasant for sport, and the peacock for amenity. And every introduction, every protection every killing out had its far reaching influences.

But, if we are to picture the evolution going on, we must think also of man's indirect interference with animal life. He destroyed the forests, he cultivated the wild, he made bridges, he allowed aliens, like rats and cockroaches, to get in unawares. Of course, he often did good, as when he drained swamps and got rid of the mosquitoes which once made malaria rife in Scotland.

What has been the net result? Not, as one might think for a moment, a reduction in the number of different kinds of animals. Fourteen or so species of birds and beasts have been banished from Scotland since man interfered but as far as numbers go they have been more than replaced by deliberate introductions like fallow deer, rabbit, squirrel, and pheasant, and by accidental introductions like rats and cockroaches. But the change is rather in quality than in quantity; the smaller have taken the place of the larger, rather paltry pigmies of noble giants. Thus we get a vivid idea that evolution, especially when man interferes, is not necessarily progressive. That depends on the nature of the sieves with which the living materials are sifted. As Dr. Ritchie well says, the standard of the wild fauna as regards size has fallen and is falling, and it is not in size only that there is loss, there is a deterioration of quality. "For how can the increase of rabbits and sparrows and earthworms and caterpillars, and the addition of millions of rats and cockroaches and crickets and bugs, ever take the place of those fine creatures around the memories of which the glamour of Scotland's past still plays—the reindeer and the elk, the wolf, the brown bear, the lynx, and the beaver, the bustard, the crane, the bumbling bittern, and many other, lost or disappearing?" Thus we see again that evolution is going on.

THIS-AND-THAT

A PIECE by Aaron Hoffman called "The Politicians" is mentioned as a vehicle wherein it is hoped that Gallagher and Shean will ride to a place among the stars. Kolb and Dill have been acting it beyond the Rockies. . . . Raymond Hitchcock is going to Los Angeles to try out a work called "The Caliph," with the idea that it will serve him next season. He has been performing in "The Old Soak," and doing well, it is said.

The Chauve-Souris ended its tour and, doubtless, its American career last night in Boston. . . . Balieff has exhausted the possibilities of New-York; and the other cities haven't been too responsive.

Eight plays and the Ziegfeld Follies were withdrawn last night in New-York. The plays were "Outward-Bound," which had its share of success, although not so much as the more rapturous and immature reviewers predicted "Hell-Bent fer Heaven," which started its career with a special-matinée try-out, and is said to be worth seeing; "Helena's Boys," "Man and the Masses" (an unqualified bloomer for the Theater Guild), "The Dust-Heap," "Two Strangers from Nowhere," "The Flame of Love," and "Whitewashed."

Mrs. Fiske is to take "Helena's Boys" to Boston, instead of tossing it aside on New-York's say-so. . . . She is still talking of acting Mrs. Malaprop in "The Rivals," of having a go at the pastor's wife in "Candida," and of reviving "Hedda Gabler," "Pillars of Society," and "Becky Sharp."

New-York is to have a look at "I'll Say She Is!" in which the four Marx brothers disported prosperously in the Studebaker earlier in the season. . . . And so many theaters are tenantless in New-York that Lew Fields gets into one tomorrow night with the piece we had as "Henky," renamed "The Melody-Man."

Mr. Brady hopes to move "Simon Called Peter" into the Princess, when Miss Claire is through there in "Grounds for Divorce." . . . And "Wildflower" is doing so well in the Apollo that it may be transferred to the Garrick after the fortnight assigned to the Greenwich Village Follies.

The Coach-House Players are to do Lord Dunsany's "A Night at an Inn" and William Dean Howells' old farce of "The Mouse-Trap" Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights down in their place in Ellis Avenue. . . . And the actors of the Hebrew Institute are to do "Pollyanna" this afternoon in the Princess.

"Milgrim's Progress," a play by B. Harrison Orkow, is to have Arnold Korff as its principal actor. . . . Miss Jane Cowl (now dated for Christmas in Chicago) is to try a play from the Hungarian, "The Flame," in Boston.

Henry Miller says that he and his special company of "The Changelings" are at the disposal of playwrights with pieces that strike his experienced fancy and that he is willing to run off three or four of them at special matinées while in New-York. . . . Which is one way of getting a paragraph into the papers.

Somebody has discovered a town in Kentucky named Erlanger; and the wags have it that the Shuberts are to build a theater there. . . . Zangwill writes in the current number of the Nation that "We Moderns" was destroyed by the New-York critics and that he was "torn to pieces by wild asses" because he had found fault with certain aspects of American life. He adds that "We Moderns" was a great play.

"Abie" Money for French Art.

Miss Anne Nichols, of the belief that she should keep in motion the money rolling in on her from "Abie's Irish Rose," is going to back Simone next season. . . . The actress has returned to Paris for the present.

"Abie" ran for eleven weeks in Buffalo, a good three-night stand. . . . Two companies are to perform on tour next season in "The Seventh Heaven." The original cast is expected in Chicago in due time.

W. C. Fields, to whom most of the credit seems to belong for the New-York success of "Poppy," is mentioned as a star in a piece that will have music by Jerome Kern. . . . "Poppy" is among the tentative bookings of the Selwyn for next season.

Mrs. Dorothy Parker, who does about the best of the writing that appears in Life, is now a dramatist, having written something in collaboration with Elmer Rice, whose "On Trial" had its share of thrills for us back in 1915.

That Will Rogers is going into the 1924 edition of the Ziegfeld Follies seems certain. . . . An importation soon to be tried out is "Lass o' Laughter," which calls for the Scotch dialect. Two English actresses wrote it.

A jazz-band in the varieties is named the Warfield Music-Masters! . . . "Pettie Darling" is the title of a new farce by Miss Margaret Mayo, who wrote "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds." . . . George Le Maire and Billy V. Van have had rôles written into "The Dream-Girl," which was found on production to lack laughter. It is the musical-comedy version of "The Road to Yesterday," with a score by Victor Herbert.

Mistinguett, imported for New-York, is at length to perform there next week. . . . "The Crazy Quilt" is the name of a new revue designed to trade upon the hit of André Charlot's imported entertainment.

"Polly of Hollywood" is the name of a new musical comedy by Tommy Gray and Arthur Freed. . . . Gray is the fellow who supplies most of the smart lines you laugh at in the two-a-day.

Mr. Belasco changed the ending of "Laugh, Clown!—Laugh!" for Lionel Barrymore's tour in it; and the Baltimore critics, learning of it, say their intelligence has been insulted by the manager, and that they are just as capable of appreciating a happy ending as the New-York crowd.

Owen Davis, after looking at "Find the Woman!" in a try-out, decided to revise it, and to give a new title to it. "The Long Arm of Coincidence." . . . He means it to be a travesty on the mystery-pieces.

"Processional" is among the plays listed for next season by the Theater Guild of New-York, which took it on after other managers had turned it down as too-too. . . . It is by John Howard Lawson, whose "Roger Bloomer," acted for a week or so in New-York, also was said to be too-too, which is sometimes a bad thing for a play to be.

ONE'S HERE AND T'OTHER'S RETURNING

MISS PHYLLIS CLEVELAND
[Monroe Photo]

MISS MARY NEWCOMB
[White Photo]

MISS CLEVELAND is in "No! No, Nanette!" wherein she is the Nanette of the title,—which happens to have nothing much to do with the entertainment save to identify it. The press-agent says she is the prima-donna of the piece; and it may be that he knows, although he would have a task in proving it by the customary and appropriate tests. He adds that she is pretty; and she is: she is! She dances well the words of her songs; and that's something, too. . . . She was among the unknowns hereabout until last Sunday night.

Miss Newcomb comes back tonight to act in "Easy Street," the week's sole novelty; and she's welcome, although she hasn't been away longer than three weeks, or since Kelly's Vacation" was taken out of the Adelphi. She was good in that; and those who recall her in it say that she was good, a long time ago, in a piece called "Sick-a-Bed," in Powers'. . . . Anyway, she was so good in "Kelly's Vacation" that it is to be hoped she has a bully rôle in "Easy Street."

Peggy Has Her Way; Drops Music for Mystery Play

prospects of a profitable engagement, while promising, were not at all assured.

But Morris Gest, who has vision as well as sentiment, and courage enough for two promoters, undertook the tour and turned it into a great success. At the end of the original ten week period Duse had paid off $10,000 or $15,000 which she owed and had saved something. But there would have been very little to take back to Italy. Which accounts for her agreement to continue her tour westward under the direction of the Selwyns and Fortune Gallo. Gest, meantime, had taken on "The Miracle" and was too busy to spend twenty-four hours a day worrying for fear the frail little Italian lady would fall apart while she was being chair carried from her hotel to her dressing room.

A Competence—and Death.

When she died, Duse had accumulated a large Italian, small American, fortune of $25,000. She hoped and expected it would approximate $50,000 when she sailed this month from New York. And probably it would. Gest had planned to give her a huge benefit, in which she would play the Madonna in "The Miracle," and the crowd of nuns and acolytes would be composed of famous American players doing her homage. This performance alone would probably have netted her $10,000.

But it was not to be. Her strength failed her just as the competence for which she had struggled was within her reach.

The body of Duse was returned to Europe this month in a steel coffin, flower blanketed as it was swung aboard ship, while a comparatively small crowd of her countrymen and American admirers stood, bowed and tearful on the wharf.

"It's a terrible thing she had to die in a strange country, and in a city hotel," some one said to Gest.

And he spoke truthfully when he answered:

"Yes. But consider if she had died as she lived the last ten years in Italy. The world would have known and briefly mourned. Only Italy and France would have really cared. But coming to America, and playing in London, she again brought the world under her spell. She was again La Duse! She was again supreme! And thus she died!"

Speaking of Managers and Actors.

I like managers and I like actors from the same distance that they like me. Both are interesting. The actor is, in the group, engagingly childlike and vain, and if he isn't pleasant to meet and talk with, if he hasn't humor and a lively interest in life, he isn't a good actor. And seldom a successful one. This takes in both sexes.

The manager has a few of these qualities, but not many. He is naturally the shrewder of the two and the more self-confident.

Usually his opinion of himself is set firmly in concrete-like conceit rather than in vanity. The more successful he is the more tightly does he hug the Napoleonic complex. But he, too, is usually blessed with humor, he is generous, and though he specializes in fooling others he seldom tries to fool himself.

The actor-manager fuss over the new Equity shop contract, which will go into effect the first of the month, has been more interesting to watch from the curbstone as it has passed like a parade than it has been to listen to in debate.

After three months of chatter one group, composed of a few major and several minor managers, is about to sign a ten year agreement with Equity. By its terms the managers get more than they expected to get and Equity gets more than it honestly hoped for. Which should make it a happy contract.

The managers are saved from being forced to accept what they have insisted on calling the closed shop demands of Equity. Twenty per cent of their companies may be non-Equity, nonorganization, even nonefficient if they insist upon it. At present they average probably 90 per cent Equity. So there is a 10 per cent gain.

Whose Compromise Are You?

The compromise on this issue was brought about by the agreement of the managers to collect from each of their non-Equity actors a sum equal to that which the Equity actors are obliged to pay in dues to their organization, now $18 a year. This money is to be put into a separate fund and used to promote desirable legislation affecting the theater business or in blocking the passage of censor bills and such.

The managers, with a place for one non-Equity member for every four Equity members engaged, are able to take care of their friends of the Actors' Fidelity association, who stood by them in the other strike. But the Equity has exacted an agreement that the Fidelity rolls shall be closed forthwith and no more members taken in.

As there are probably only about 250 of the Fidelityites left, this arrangement is satisfactory to both sides. It saves the face of the managers, who had sworn to protect Fidelity, and it saves the dignity of the Fidelity actors, who have taken oath never to so belittle their art as to become members of a so-called trade union.

It was only the pride of the managers on the one hand and the fear of the actors on the other that prevented a settlement at the first conference.

"We don't propose to be dictated to!" shouted the managers.

"We refuse to be exploited!" shouted back the actors.

Having been supremely dictatorial for years, the managers were jealous of their old time privileges.

Having been led by the nose through their vanity, their trustfulness and what they think of as an inner urge for artistic expression, the actors were not to be tricked out of the power they have now acquired through organization.

The compromise will do both camps a lot of good.

The History of a Hit.

Good parts may not make good actors, as the bad actors insist, but they certainly bring them to folks' attention. "The race is not always to the swift," Hughie Keogh used to say, "but that's the way to bet."

Judith Anderson, who is considerably less beautiful than the author of "Cobra" credits his heroine with being, is still so alluringly dramatic as an extremely vampy young woman in that play that she has earned the praise of the experts and the interest of the town.

She is the same Judith Anderson who walked up and down, down and up Broadway for a full year looking for an engagement, but being perfectly willing to take a job, and during that year she never got so much as an invitation to try understudying. She comes from Australia, and fortunately her mother, who was with her, had enough to support them. At the end of the year she accepted an engagement with a 14th street stock company and played there a year without any one uptown, where the managers live, knowing she was on earth.

After many months and a few obscure trials she got a chance with Frank Keenan playing in "Peter Weston," and created some little stir. Chicago saw her in a piece called "Patches." She came back here to play "Cobra"—and will probably be heard of quite a bit in the future.

[Copyright: 1924: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TALENTED?

MISS CATHERINE OWEN
[White Photo.]

She acts a movie-queen in "The Whole Town's Talking"; and, if she knows what she's doing, she's one of the best comic players of the season in Chicago. If she doesn't know what she's doing, she is still a comic player: it's all a question of whether she's kidding the clientèle or herself. . . . And she is the Drama-Desk's ideal of what a movie-queen would be if turned loose in a flint-hearted world.

Notes of the Theaters

George M. Cohan has given up his New-York offices, and, giving them up, makes it clear that he is going out of business for a time. . . . His stage-director, John Meehan, is rewriting "Tantrum," a comedy by William F. director, John Meehan, has rewritten Dugan, with Miss Roberta Arnold and Will Deming in principal parts.

O. P. Heggie, who is to act in a play called "Whistler," will have Miss Betty Linley, Gavin Muir, Mrs. Alice Belmore Cliffe, and Arnold Lucy with him in it. . . . A new play by William Le Baron is called "My Man."

The Committee on Patents of the House of Representatives is in consideration of not fewer than nine bills having to do with copyright! . . . Comic news of the day is that Will Hays, the arbiter elegantiarum of the movies, is opposed to the screening of "Tarnish," one of the season's successful plays in New-York.

"Plain Jane" is the title of a new musical piece by Phil Cook and McElbert Moore, with tunes by Tom Johnstone. . . . And a new one without music is called "The Right to Dream," by an author who doesn't make himself known.

Glenn Hunter is to perform as Merton for the screen, and then resume his activities in the stage-version. . . . Although young, he's just gone into bankruptcy.

"Cain and Mabel" is the name of a new musical piece by William Le Baron and William B. Friedlander, whose "Moonlight" was a sad little affair recently in the La Salle, although it is said to be pleasing the New-Yorkers.

"White Cargo," one of the season's hits in New-York, is to be acted soon in London. . . . A run of the piece in Chicago is planned for next season, with the Cort mentioned as the preferred theater. . . . Its author, Leon Gordon, is now represented in New-York by a second play, "The Garden of Weeds."

owns the power plant that overshadows the little Ajax. Miss Brewster can shoot and ride and fight and be catty. Claws has she to use—but she's no stranger to the purr. Rather refreshing—Miss Key.

Mr. Mix does good work and, on the whole, has creditable support. His best bet is Tony, the horse, who sure deserved a sugar plum for his feats in "The Trouble Shooter."

Quite a lot of action in this film. Beautiful photography. Attractive scenic effects. Mountains and snow are featured in the last instead of plains and sagebrush. The picture ought to go over well with the admirers of Tom Mix.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

SANDY MACTAVISH: Thanks for the papers and more thanks for your pleasant and interesting letter. The stories you mention might be all right for the screen if properly directed. I mourn with you for, as you know, I too sat through the thing. Do write again some time soon.

KANSAS CITY GIRL: Katherine MacDonald, not Kathlyn Williams—appeared in "White Shoulders." Search me!

LONG SUFFERIN' FAN: Most subtitles nowadays are discernible without the aid of field glasses. That is, I don't use 'em. There was a time, though, when it was pretty hard to make some of them out. Sometimes—don't you think it would be rather a relief to miss them entirely? Just sometimes? Regarding the picture you mention, I believe they were perfectly clear to the naked or properly spectacled eye.

BOBO: Sort of a slump in the market that maybe the p. a.'s thought a little free advertising might remedy. The same thing's been pulled over and over again. Go back to sleep!

JAMES F.: Lots of luck to you and your scenario. Address Norma Talmadge, in care of First National studios, Hollywood; Richard Barthelmess—same. Yes, she's back I understand. What did you call your story?

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

TO RODOLPH VALENTINO:

Somber Eyes,
Features Fine;
Beauty lies—
In lips Devine.
A Flashing Smile—
A Gracious Nod!
—we bow before,
A Roman God!

Three cheers for Rodolph Valentino! Our Rudy! VALENTINO FAN.

P. S.—Echo! Echo! Here the echo!

[Editor's Note: I get you with your "Echo! Echo!" Merry Sunshine! You want me to write a poem to go with this. Alas—fearst—am not in thy class!]

"I remember seeing Duse many years ago, also Madame Bernhardt—but for sheer technical brilliancy and great emotional projection, done with an almost uncanny simplicity and sincerity of method, here is an American artist who equals, if not surpasses, the finest traditions of the theatre."

That's What You Will Say.

When Repose Means Plenty of Hard Work

D'Angelo are resting and studying in New York.

This may seem like active employment, but the various directors are busier yet. Conductor Gennaro Papi was obliged to go to Paris, hardly to be construed as a pleasure trip, since he sailed May 7 and will return June 1. Louis Hasselmans, conductor of the French works, is one of those who canceled a European trip. Being expected at Ravinia earlier than usual, he is therefore engaged in preparations for rehearsals and performances.

Wilfrid Pelletier, one of the assistant conductors, is in this country with his working hours filled in coaching the artists who need his advice and help. Giacomo Spadoni, another, has been able to get to Italy for a visit. Eric DeLamarter is preparing between forty and fifty concert programs for the season. As for Armando Agnini, for many seasons the Ravinia stage director, he is at present on the Pacific coast staging a series of special productions that are being presented in San Francisco. He will come to Ravinia May 21.

So long before the curtain is ready to rise on the opera season out north preparations are being made for it. When the various parts of the operatic machine are assembled they are ready to function with the least possible lost motion and the greatest possible efficiency.

Orchestra Goes Touring.

Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra are now due for their annual bit of spring gadding, an observance mainly concerned with the ingatherings known as May festivals. In detail the places and dates of the revels are May 16 and 17, Mount Vernon, Ia.; 19, Kalamazoo; 20, Lansing; 21, 22, 23 and 24, Ann Arbor, and the whole of the following week, Evanston. This will be the twentieth successive visit to Cornell college at Mount Vernon, and the twenty-second to the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, which would seem to indicate a reasonably permanent crystallization of activities in those centers. Mr. Stock will shortly thereafter depart on another personal annual occasion, a hunt in European fields for orchestral scores newly written. The orchestra has its own annual assignment in the glades of Ravinia.

Something else of even more interest and importance has come out of the contests for young artists conducted for two seasons by the Society of American Musicians. Mr. Stock and the Orchestral association have authorized an extra contest for pianists to be held early next fall. The prize winner will be given an appearance as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra in its regular series of concerts in Orchestra hall next season. The competitors will be limited to the four pianists who won first and second places in the two contests already held by the society for solo appearances in the popular concerts.

Here and There in Music.

The Opera in Our Language foundation and the David Bispham Memorial fund, having apparently been combined, are now reincorporated under the new and less angular title of American Opera society of Chicago. Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is honorary chairman, Mrs. Archibald Freer is chairman, and the first, second, and third vice chairmen are Mrs. Albert J. Ochsner, Mrs. Louis E. Yager, and Mrs. Charles S. Peterson. Mrs. Samuel P. S. Newton is treasurer; Mrs. Norman Westerhold, secretary, and Mrs. J. Lindsay Wells, recording secretary.

The society sends congratulations to the Chicago theater for its performance of opera in English, with the hope that they may continue during the summer. They will not, but will probably be taken up again next fall. It also transmits a word of cheer to an organization of similar aims, the English Grand Opera company of New York, which promises to present "Rheingold," "Walküre," "Siegfried," and "Götterdämmerung" in English with American artists, orchestra, and conductors at Carnegie hall next November. This department joins the society on both counts.

That first class American violinist, Albert Spalding, has been engaged by Sergei Koussevitsky to give Parisians their first hearing of Ottorino Respighi's new Gregorian Concerto for violin and orchestra. The concert will take place at the Paris Opéra on Thursday night of this week. In the meantime, those chiefly interested are negotiating to have him play the work in Boston and New York next season after Koussevitsky takes charge of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Mr. Spalding began his European concert tour on April 3 with a concert appearance with the Concertgebouw orchestra of Amsterdam, Karl Muck conducting.

The Apollo Musical club, the senior musical organization of Chicago, now in its fifty-third year, begins this week a campaign for funds to wipe out its present deficit, and if possible to establish a sustaining fund for future years. The organization's ways and means committee points out that it has been handicapped in its efforts because of a diversity of entertainments of the same kind offered by other organizations. Many musical bodies are backed by large industries with plenty of money that consider the investment as part of their welfare work among employes.

The Apollo club, on the other hand, has no financial backing. The members pay for the privilege of belonging to it, and each purchases tickets for its concerts. It has had a long and active career, and can claim recognition through its share in many important civic events in the development of the city. The campaign for funds will take the form of a concerted drive through the mediums of the press, the churches, and the friends of the organization.

Amy Neill, having been voted the ideal American woman musician, has been given the place of honor on the all-American musical program at the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held next month at Los Angeles. She will appear as soloist June 8 in the concert by the Los Angeles Women's Symphony orchestra and the Oratorio society in the Hollywood bowl, which seats 30,000. The program will be a memorial to deceased members who in their lifetimes were active in the cause of music. Miss Neill will play the Cecil Burleigh Concerto, which in 1915 won the prize in a contest of American composers.

J. Hyman, who has had much to do with the presentation of concert cantors in recent years, will be tendered a testimonial concert at Ashland auditorium this afternoon. Cantors Rosenblatt, Rovner, Steinberg, Hirshman, Rotman, and Kwartin will appear.

Among the musical events of the week, Edward Poole Lay, baritone, will give a song recital at the Playhouse this afternoon. At the same hour Merka Seema Berovitz, Russian mezzo-soprano, will appear in another recital at Kimball hall. On Friday night the University of Notre Dame Glee club, directed by Dr. J. Lewis Browne, will give a concert in the Cameo room of the Morrison hotel under the auspices of the Auld Lang Syne club of St. Patrick's Girls' school.

Jessie B. Hall, well known in this city as a concert manager, will leave Chicago on Aug. 1 to become manager of the Cornish school in Seattle. Miss Hall was the former manager of the Columbia School of Music, the founder and director of the bureau of fine arts, and for eight years the promoter of the Young American Artist series. Most of her activities have been in the service of American musicians, and Arthur Middleton, Paul Althouse, Alice Gentle, and many distinguished local artists have appeared under her direction.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford will give a noonday recital on the twin pipe organ of the Chicago theater today, with B. Fred Wise, tenor, as the assisting soloist.

F. Wight Neumann, veteran concert manager of Chicago, has new offices at 1500 Blum building, 624 South Michigan avenue, from where his plans for the coming musical season will issue.

The united choirs of the New First Congregational church will give four performances of the dramatization of "Elijah" tonight, Thursday, Friday, and next Sunday nights. George L. Tenney will direct. The soloists will be Mrs. George L. Tenney, Lucy J. Hartman, Dr. Leon Jones, Rollin Pease, Dorothy Wilkins, and Tenney Ford, with Dr. Gilbert Wilson as reader and William Lester as organist.

The choral society of the First Presbyterian church, Francis S. Moore, director, announces a presentation on Thursday evening of Henry Hadley's oratorio, "The New Earth." Members of the Apollo Musical club and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will assist. Other features of the program will be a concerto played by Helen W. Ross, organist, and orchestra; and a group of songs sung by Mildred Anderson, contralto.

The Paulist choristers will give their annual concert at Orchestra hall this afternoon under the direction of Le Roy Wetzel. Several soloists, in addition to the chorus, will sing.

They classify among those who are lauded in song, who decorate the stage, and who make operas radiant. They will both be at Ravinia this summer, which, since they have both, been there before, is good news for the many who know and approve of Ravinia.

Applied Arts and Architecture New Institute Exhibits

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE galleries of the east wing of the Art institute are given over this month to the thirty-seventh annual exhibition of architectural subjects and the twenty-second annual exhibit of applied arts. Both of these titles make their respective exhibitions sound more technical than they, praise be, really are. Particularly is this true of the applied arts exhibit. That is a most charming affair, filled with shining porcelain, burnished silver, fascinating textiles, and luminous jewelry.

The galleries have been made gay by the introduction of innumerable green and flowered plants in vivid pots. The architectural exhibit, of course, gains more by this addition in color than does the applied arts show. The architectural exhibit is a little stiff and formal. From its nature it could hardly be otherwise. There are groups of photographs and of plans in black and white; there are multitudes of insides and outsides, odd corners, roofs, niches, glimpses of long living rooms and less long bedrooms; there are mysterious diagrams showing the effects of the zoning laws; there are renderings of office buildings, stern, simple, impressive, and of other structures, such as tombs, less simple but, perhaps because unavoidable, more impressive.

The plans for the new Palmer House, of which Holabird & Roche are the architects, are interesting. Various photographs of gardens and plantings are valuable. One rather unusual picture shows a detail in planting garden steps. It is novel and must be beautiful. The uneven stone steps are planted at their base with various flowers, the ridges of flowers, now this side, now that, ascending with the steps to the bordered path above. Another garden, "Le Jardin du Roi," the "King's Garden," originally laid out in 1759 by the French officers during Montcalm's occupation, is part of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. S. P. H. Pell.

The group of pictures illustrating this garden show it in all its beauty and distinctive charm. Parts of it are like the gardens found today outside Paris. Water, trees, flowers, each feature of landscape gardening plays its part here, and the effort to retain the historic proportions of the grounds has met with cast success. Alfred Blossom was the architect, Marian Coffin, the landscape architect.

From the University of Illinois come a great many designs and compositions that cause one to feel the artistic possibilities of that student body. "An Eighteenth Century Pump Room in an English Watering Resort," by Alberta Raffl, is a striking rendering of a Thackery scene. One is grateful for it. It relieves the monotony, to an uninstructed eye, of the modern plans.

"The Bastilica of Santa Maria Maggiore in Toscanella," by C. R. McGrew, won the Envoi-Plym fellowship. It is excellent. There are other designs and drawings by Illinois students; practically all are interesting and most of them are informed with the spirit of good taste.

A few models of suburban or country houses help to lighten the burden of numerous elevations. One, executed by Jean Hetherington, is attractive. The models, plus the growing plants and a group of illuminated windows, really make a beautiful exhibit out of something which would, without their help, be more than a bit tedious to one not versed in the groundwork of architecture.

A feature in the architectural show missing this year, but in splendid evidence two years ago, is the little renderings in mosaic of cottages or decorative subjects, by the Chicago artist, Charles Morgan. The mosaic was an invention of a University of Illinois professor, and Mr. Morgan continued the work in it for some time. It is so unusual and also so beautiful one hopes to see more of it soon.

From Yale university comes a picture of the Memorial gates, the Harkness memorial quadrangle, of which James Gamble Rogers was the architect. Samuel Yellin executed the marvelous gates, rich and imposing in effect.

A few bas-reliefs in color, a fireplace in tile flanked by two panels in tile gleaming like precious jewels, the mosaics and the stained glass windows complete the exhibit.

In the Applied Arts exhibition it is difficult to know where to start and where to stop in an enumeration of the many and various articles. Hunt Diederich has several graceful animal groups. Of these possibly the most fascinating is his iron door guard, two dogs at play. George Biddle is another artist responsible for many of the feature pieces in the exhibit. A card table in marquetry after a design by him is charming.

Marguerite Zorach shows hooked rugs, excellent in color and faultless in composition, the super-hooked rugs, her achievement might be named. Another woman craftsworker, Marie Zimmerman, is represented by a case filled with beautiful objects—a copper vase, a gilt jar, a glass bottle, a compote. The tray in the background is another George Biddle event, his virile, slim, Egyptian figures are unmistakable.

A leather chair, a beauty, is the work of A. E. Pentis, and again we return to Mr. Biddle to admire his fire screen, of which the motif is a pair of fighting cocks. A case of jewelry then claims our attention. In it, among other pieces are pendants and chains and earrings by Frank Gardner Hale and Edward E. Oakes of Boston. Beautifully embroidered panels, partly painted and partly done in the most exquisite stitches, are the work of Robert E. and Beatrice Locher. Another fire screen, emblazoned with a powerful, high stepping horse, brings us back to Hunt Diederich, while the andirons, which set it off, are shaped like dachshunds, the result of Warren Wheelock's skill.

Embroidered samplers by Lois Lenski revive memories of the recent water color show held at the institute. Her painting "Romance" was one of those which found a purchaser. Decorative panels by Robert Chandler are unusual. Two are in a blue green, dull and misty; one is in silver. The green tinged panels show, the one a profusion of vegetables and fruits, the other a multitude of fish. The silver panel returns to vegetable life again. The work is partly raised, partly on the surface. It is unique and beautiful.

Robert Laurent shows several entrancing wood carvings, the roosters are splendid, the water plant has grace and charm. The wedding chest by Max Kuehne is a rare piece of decoration. The top depicts a royal African court, on the front is a scene from the desert, with royalty enthroned under palms and camels advancing, bearing gifts.

Irving Manoir is represented by a stunning screen, dignified and beautiful, deep in color, peacocks against a dull purple background. Lovely in gold and blue is a screen by Charles Predergast.

Other bits of the exhibit that call forth special comment are: The wall papers from France, the porcelain from Copenhagen, pewter by Lester H. Vaughan, pottery by Charles F. Binns, decorative screen by William S. Schwartz, pottery by R. Guy Cowan, "The Garden Party," a hooked rug by Mary Perkins Taylor, silver frames and bowls, batiks, garden chairs, a case of beautifully bound books, various richly patterned fabrics, but the list grows too long—in fact everything in the exhibit should be noted and everything mentioned. This is the best applied arts exhibit the institute has held in many years.

The twenty-third international exhibition of paintings held at Carnegie institute will run until the middle of June. When it is broken up, it is hoped many of the paintings will find their way to Chicago for exhibition purposes.

A special exhibition of oil paintings by a group of American artists is on view at the Corcoran gallery of art, Washington. It closes on May 18.

Summer school of the Art Students league of New York is announced from June 2 to Aug. 29.

The art department at New York university summer school will be directed by Prof. Walter Sargent, professor of art education at the University of Chicago. Robert A. Kissack will be assistant professor.

A new idea has been conceived to aid in swelling the fund for the purchase of the Stuart "George Washington" for the permanent collection of the Chicago Art institute. Send a short essay, fifty words, and a one dollar bill, with your name and address to the Art institute of Chicago, Chicago. The essay or note must be on Washington and why his portrait should be kept in Chicago. Prizes for the best essays are to be awarded. Seven oil paintings, one water color, five etchings, and a $250 radio set are the prizes offered.

In the print rooms of the Art institute etchings of architectural subjects by Piranesi, Canaletto, Meryon, Cameron, and other etchers are being shown.

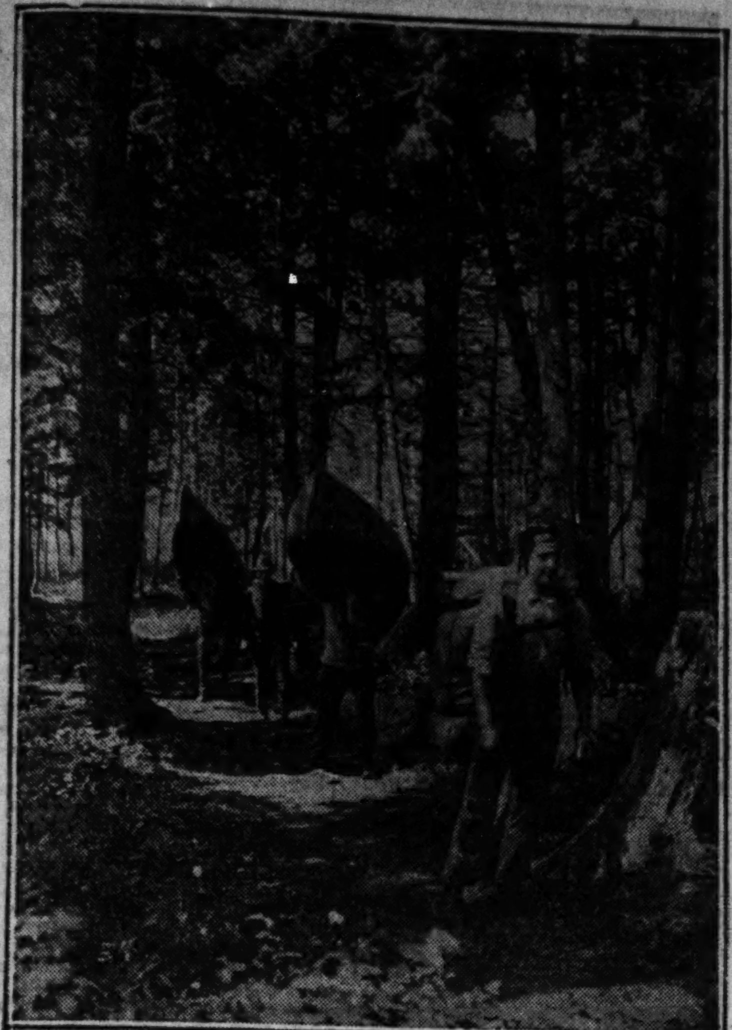
IN THE BIG WOODS



Over this trail, probably far older than any thoroughfare in Chicago, this party is making "a carry" from lake to lake—two with packs and the other pair with canoes. Note the load the leading guide is carrying—it looks like 125 pounds, at least—with the weight borne not only by the shoulder harness, but also by the tump strap across the forehead. It is really the tump that enables these powerful men of the north country to pack such enormous loads, hour after hour, over bad going. Similar outdoor packs will be on view at the outdoor exposition which opens at the Coliseum tomorrow.

Enough to Make an Angler's Hand Itch for His Rod

INDIANS, trappers, and guides from the north woods and the western plains will bring their outdoors into the Coliseum tomorrow afternoon for the opening of the second annual National Outdoor Life exposition, where two acres of floor space will be transformed into a vacation land guaranteed to give even the most sedentary city dweller a spring touch of the wanderlust.

Birch, cedar, balsam, and spruce trees, which last week arrived in carloads for the exposition, will furnish a native background for many varieties of live game. A miniature lake in the center of the big building will be a temporary home for game fish—muskellunge, pike, pickerel, bass, and lake trout—that will make the angler's hand itch for his rod. A pair of bear cubs, deer from Eagle river, beavers, porcupines, timber wolves, and foxes will be among the game exhibits.

Twenty Hayward, Wis., Indians of the Court Oreille tribe will set up their wigwams in the big building. Among their ceremonies during the exposition will be the presentation on Monday morning to Mayor Dever of a colorfully beaded seal of the city of Chicago. After the presentation ceremonies they will make him an honorary chief of their tribe. During the week they will construct a full sized birch bark canoe and hold various tribal ceremonies and dances in the evenings. Johnny Mustache, known all over northern Wisconsin, will conduct the ceremonies and dances, for which the Indians will don full regalia.

Heroines of North Woods.

Outdoor girls from many northern communities will be at the show with their rifles and hunting dogs. All will be winners of competitions in various northern communities, held to determine the girls who would best typify the outdoor spirit of their respective localities. Many of them are the heroines of north woods adventures, and all are skilled in woods lore.

One of the most important aspects of the exposition for the vacationist will be a model automobile tourist camp, where the often perplexing problem of what to take on a highway housekeeping trip and how to use it to best advantage will be effectively demonstrated.

All the live fish and game at the Coliseum will be in charge of Floyd Young, head of the Lincoln park aquarium. The Lincoln park zoo and aquarium will receive the game and fish at the close of the exposition. Through the activity of trappers in the Superior national forest of Minnesota, four beavers will be added to Chicago's zoo, which at present has none of the animals.

Making Them at Home.

Caring for his wild charges during the week has developed into something of a problem for Mr. Young. The greatest problem he had to face was that of keeping the four beavers busy. North woodsmen say that unless a beaver can busy himself with work of some sort he will gnaw off his feet in an excess of nervous energy. Poplar poles with which the animals can build a dam will be provided. Tree stumps soaked in salt solution will make the porcupiens feel at home.

A north woods guide provided an unusual diet for the deer from Wisconsin. "Feed them banana peels," he told Mr. Young. "It's their favorite diet, when they can get it." A vegetarian diet has been prescribed for the two five weeks' old bear cubs from Eagle river, who will be given strained honey and fresh berries, with whatever substitute the local markets afford for the skunk weed that abounds in the wilds.

They motored to San Pedro harbor on Saturday night, saw a pre-view of "The Sea Hawk"—just catch any one giving a party without a shot of film—and started on the seagoing tour at 7 Sunday morning.

Carmelita was in a white tucked flannel dress with black and white checked stocking and a black and white hat. Julanne wore a sports costume of blue and gray, and Helen looked wonderful in a new outfit of tan and a bandanna wrapped into a sports hat.

Levee found from the gateman that he had left. He walked home, and at midnight sent Joe a telegram, which reached Schenck at 2 in the morning.

The APOLLO reproducing piano brings to your home countless hours of musical pleasure—delightful music to suit your every mood or fancy—good music such as only great artists and the Apollo could produce.

Its musical runs are beautiful ones! Truly, the most wonderful piano in the world—and nothing can compare with its marvelous reproductions.

The Apollo differs only from that of the living pianist in that in one case the artist is actually present; in the other he is not at the keyboard; the performances are identical.

The Apollo reproducing piano is not high priced. Apollo reproducing upright pianos are priced from $1,200—grands from $2,000. Liberal allowance on pianos, players and grands.

Come some day this week and hear the APOLLO. Special programs have been arranged and you are invited to attend, regardless of whether you are interested in purchasing or not. Apollo concerts during the evening from 6 to 9 P. M.

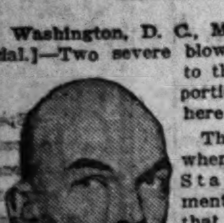
U. S. LAYS CLAIM TO ALL PATENTS ON "SUPER-HET"

Armstrong Also Loses "Feed-Back" Claims.



MAJ. EDWIN H. ARMSTRONG.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Two severe blows were dealt to the Radio Corporation of America here in the week.

The first was when the United States government announced that it would lay claim to all patents taken out by Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong on the super-heterodyne method of reception on the ground that Armstrong was in the army at the time the patents were taken out.

May Change Trade Attitude.

Prior to this announcement the radio trade generally had been given to understand that the R. C. A. looked upon the super-heterodyne as its particular pet, jealously to be guarded against anything that might smack of an infringement of the patents purchased from Maj. Armstrong.

In event the claim of the government is upheld by the courts, it is believed that a liberal attitude will be taken toward developers of this particular type of receiver.

De Forest Wins Decision.

Another blow was struck when the District of Columbia Court of Appeals declared Lee De Forest to be entitled to priority as the inventor of the audion, or regenerative circuit, as a means of producing sustained electrical oscillations in transmission and reception by radio or otherwise. The opinion reversed the finding of the commissioner of patents, who had awarded priority to Edwin H. Armstrong. Claims also had been made by Alexander Meissner and Irving Langmuir.

Justice Van Orsdel held that the testimony of Armstrong and his witnesses placed his conception of the regenerative circuit in October, 1912, and that De Forest reduced his invention to practice in August, 1912. The evidence, the opinion held, failed to disclose that De Forest had abandoned it.

"The whole case," said the decision, "turns upon the question of priority to be determined solely as a question of fact. The commissioner of patents, affirming a decision by the board of examiners-in-chief awarded priority to Armstrong."

De Forest Priority Shown.

"We are especially impressed by Armstrong and his witnesses. We have no doubt he produced the invention at the time alleged. But his earliest claim to a conception of this invention is October, 1912, followed by a witnessed sketch on Jan. 31, 1913. . . . .

"It is clearly shown that De Forest was developing the idea involved in this invention in the early part of 1912, and it is claimed that the work culminated in a complete disclosure of the invention in August of that year. . . . . .

"It appears from his notebook records that the first discovery of the feed-back circuit occurred in connection with his work on the amplifier. There is some testimony that prior to August, 1912, the oscillating properties of the audion were discovered by De Forest. It is unnecessary, however, to go beyond the written records of Aug. 6, 1912. This record, with the accompanying drawing, clearly shows a feed-back circuit.

Patent Ruling Reversed.

"It is generally conceded, indeed it must be, that this drawing and the notes not only disclosed the invention but disclosed it in a clear, workable manner. It matters little whether the case be disposed of upon the theory that what was done in August, 1912, amounted to reduction to practice or merely conception of the invention. In either event De Forest must prevail.

"The decisions of the commissioner are reversed and priority awarded to De Forest."

SUMMER OPERA TO BE BROADCAST FROM CINCINNATI

Operas to be given this summer at the Cincinnati, O., zoo will be broadcast through WLW each Monday evening during the season, beginning June 23. The radio audience will hear the operas through the courtesy of the Cincinnati Zoological Park association.

Operas to be given will include Donnisetti's "The Elixir of Love," "Martha," "Lakme," Manon," Barber of Seville," "Rigoletto," "Mefistofeles," "Lohengrin," and two by Puccini.

The principal artists will be Edith de Lys, dramatic soprano; Josephine Lucchese, coloratura soprano; Stella de Mette, mezzo-soprano; Anita Klinova, mezzo soprano; Regelio Baldrich, lyric tenor; Ludivico Tomarchio, dramatic tenor; Murio Valle, baritone; Millo Picco, baritone; Italo Pacchi, basso; Natale Cervi, basso-buffo. A fine chorus will augument the soloists.

PREDICTS RADIO WILL LINK BOY SCOUTS IN WORLD ORDER

Speaking before one of the largest Boy Scout audiences gathered together in a New York auditorium, Pierre Boucheron, one of the first radio amateurs in the United States, predicted that broadcasting would lead to formation of an international Boy Scout organization in which the scattered groups of young men in the principal cities of the world would enjoy relationships far more intimate than any other agency thus far has been able to provide.

Mr. Boucheron also pointed out that the limited number of available wave lengths in the ether required strict observance of laws governing radio and asked Boy Scouts of America to pledge their support to the work of the department of commerce in enforcing these regulations.

ECHOES OF THE HEAD PHONES

BY ELMER DOUGLASS.

National Music week has been entered on the pages of history for this year.

The idea of National Music week is a beautiful one, and was widely observed by station musical directors throughout the country.

The opening phase of this festival week might be said to have begun with KYW's Saturday night concert a week ago, for it was a concert symmetrical in musical design and of great beauty. Toward the close of the program Helen Leigh, in her singing of "Home, Sweet Home," added an exquisite touch of musical drapery that will long be remembered.

The Drake Concert ensemble last Sunday evening took a step in program arrangement by presenting a group of compositions by the same composer. Whether Henry Selinger, the director of this ensemble, had already realized that this lack of concert arrangement is not known. At any rate, it was a touch of the artistic that may be added to the sum total of fine things in "National Music" week.

* *

Another concert of the first water was the work of the A Capella choir of Northwestern university at WMAQ Wednesday evening. This concert revealed to an unusual degree the handiwork of the unseen conductor. Such pianissimos and crescendos, shadings and nuances, and rubatos—all revealing the master director's hand.

* *

First Baptist church choir of Chicago Heights, Ill., likewise furnished a program of great artistic worth from WMAQ on Thursday evening.

On Friday a concert was given at W-G-N by the Chicago Singverein, with a fine program, as might be expected from that well known organization.

On Tuesday evening Glenn Dillard Gunn began a series of lecture-recitals at WLS, taking Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" as his first selection. At the close of the lecture Mr. Gunn played the sonata in its entirety.

Wish other artists, instead of giving us the adagio or some other isolated section, would more frequently give us the entire work.

Since I have begun listening more or less critically I have noticed, sometimes strikingly, that often the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of a composition depends upon the setting or atmosphere that has been created by artists who have preceded, this setting being accidental, and not prearranged, as in the case of a concert hall program. It's a great radio artist who, by the force of the quality of the work, can overcome an unfavorable situation inherited from one before.

A striking instance of this occurred last Sunday night at W-G-N when Evelyn Gosse stepped up to the microphone, sang a few songs, and left the microphone carrying a large bouquet of congratulatory telegrams.

Of the individual singers, again, the work of Mme. Sturkow-Ryder at W-G-N Thursday in her purely American composers' recital illustrated the wealth of American compositions of real merit that lie buried in obscurity. The Prelude and Fugue in D Minor, by Arthur William Foote; Narcissus, by Nevin; Minuette Italian, Mrs. H. H. A. Beach; Snowbirds, by Cecil Burleigh, and "Imp," by Mme. Sturkow-Ryder herself—compositions that would be an honor to any nation.

RHONDDA WILLIAMS

The speaker at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, will be the Rev. T. Rhondda Williams of London, England. Dr. Williams is not only a famous preacher, but has always taken a prominent part in public life and in 1918 was a Labor candidate for parliament.

Dr. Williams is in the United States to speak at colleges and universities, and, it is understood, brings a definite message from Great Britain's new prime minister.

The music program will be in memory of Gustaf Holmquist, former soloist at the club. Selections will be Mr. Holmquist's favorities.

W-G-N will give another of its artist series programs tonight at 7 o'clock with Mrs. Helen Wile Burkhardt, mezzo-soprano; Mrs. Pauline Miller Schram, pianist and accompanist; Hans Magnus, cellist, and Emmy Brady, pianist, as the artists, assisted by Dell Lampe and his orchestra in concert selections.

This afternoon, from the east lounge of the Edgewater Beach hotel, there will be broadcast, between 4 and 5 o'clock, a concert by Lampe and his musicians.

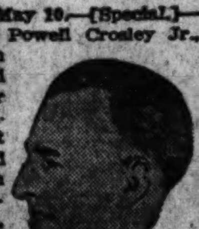
CROSLEY TO BAN COPYRIGHT MUSIC DESPITE RULING

Refuses to 'Boost' Songs of Society.



POWELL CROSLEY JR.

Cincinnati, O., May 10.—[Special.]—In an interview Powell Crosley Jr., owner of station WLW, outlined his reasons for refusal to broadcast copyright music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, despite the court decision that tribute could not be exacted for putting such music on the air.

"Notwithstanding the fact that the court decided we have a perfect right to play any music we desire," Mr. Crosley said, "it is not our intention to play any of the music controlled by the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers.

"We feel that instead of being compelled to pay a tax for the privilege of playing such music, we would be popularizing, advertising, and increasing the revenue of the publishers of the music broadcast from WLW.

Plenty to Choose From.

"In view of the unfriendly attitude of the society we have no desire whatsoever to advertise their publications through our station.

"Experience during the last year has shown us that there is an ample supply of independently published music to satisfy the desires of the radio public. A year ago, it was almost impossible for an independent publisher to put over a 'song hit.' The publisher did not, as a rule, have the money or machinery, nor the artists, who were largely controlled by the society, successfully to put across his song numbers, and there were comparatively few independently published numbers that had been heard often enough to have become popular. All this has been changed within the last year.

"Through the music release bureau of the National Association of Broadcasters many of the biggest song successes of the year have been 'put over' by broadcasting stations and without the usual costly methods of popularizing such music.

"Hits Made By Radio.

"There are a number of independently published compositions, such as 'Dream Daddy,' 'Marcheta,' 'Somebody Stole My Gal,' and 'The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else,' that have been unquestionably popularized by radio broadcasting stations.

'I firmly believe that a year from now 90 per cent of the popular music will have been made so by means of radio broadcasting."

HOLDS RADIO INJURES

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—While the contention generally is heard in business quarters that the radio is a good road to choose toward popularity, Gene Buck of New York, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, declared before the house patents committee that broadcasting "is pounding the life out of popular song hits before the composer has time to receive a reasonable return on his production." He opposed legislation which would give purchasers of copies of songs the right to use them for commercial purposes.

Buck testified that the song writers' business last year decreased 50 per cent because the radio had "filled the air" with music. The people, he said, "tired" of a song even before they ordinarily would have had the inclination to purchase a copy of it.

E. C. Mills, executive director of the society, told the committee that the Radio Corporation of America last year paid the society only $35,000 in royalties, although the corporation made a profit of $5,000,000 on a gross radio business of $29,000,000.

PREDICTS RADIO WILL BRING BIG SOCIAL CHANGES

Madison, Wis.—[By the Associated Press.]—Radio communication is destined to change present social institutions as profoundly as the motion picture and automobile have in recent years. Prof. W. H. Lighty of the University of Wisconsin told the annual convention of the National University Extension association in session here. He said radio is certain to take a leading rôle in extension work of universities of the nation.

Mr. Lighty expressed opposition to licenses for operation of radio sets and also opposed taxes upon radio apparatus. To impose a tax upon radio interests seems like imposing a tax upon library circulation, he said.

WOULD DRAW FINE LINE ON "PORTABLE" RADIO RECEIVERS

What's a portable receiver? seems to be a question that is disturbing the peace of mind of many radio engineers. Some, given to strict application of English, insist that portable ordinarily does not mean anything in the way of distinguishing between the set that may be moved to some temporary place, such as a camp, there to be operated in a stationary position, and one designed for use in automobiles and on railroad trains.

E. R. Doyle, head of the research department of the Charles Freshman company, advocates that "transient" be applied to the sets to be operated in stationary positions, while the one constructed for travel use be designated as "portable."

Story of WCBD Outlined in Large Pictorial Edition

Zion's broadcasting station, WCBD, its personnel and program contributors are outlined in a special radio edition of Leaves of Healing, the official publication of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church. Seventy-six pages of pictures and historical data include photographs of station announcers, soloists, readers, band, and choir, with sketchy stories of the various musical organizations which contribute to WCBD's splendid programs.

RAPID GROWTH OF BROADCASTERS IS NEW U.S. PROBLEM

High Power Stations Are on Increase.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Reallocation of wave lengths and further arrangements for time allotments in congested radio centers unquestionably will be the two major problems before the conference to be called this year by Secretary of Commerce Hoover. Another important subject will be interference of various types extraneous to broadcasting.

The conference will be similar to those held in 1922 and 1923 which were participated in by representatives of broadcasting stations, amateurs, manufacturers, broadcast listeners and commercial operators. These will aid in drawing up new regulations.

Rapid increase during this winter and spring in the number of broadcast stations makes early action imperative, according to the views of Mr. Hoover. When last winter opened there was a big drop in the number of stations over the previous winter, although only a few high power stations left the air. Now there are 578 stations in operation, almost as many as a year ago, while the number of high power stations has more than doubled.

W-G-N Will Broadcast Programs by Penwomen

Programs by the Illinois chapter of the League of American Penwomen will be broadcast every Tuesday evening from W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE-Zenith station located on the Edgewater Beach hotel, beginning this week, from 8 to 8:15 p. m. This coming Tuesday Mrs. Martha P. Ridge of Evanston, president of the state chapter, will speak briefly on the ideals and aims of the league in the middle west, and there will be a group of songs by Eleanor Everest Freer, Chicago composer.

AUSTRALASIA SEEKS FURTHER TESTS WITH U. S.

W-G-N Raises Hope of Future Successes.

BY STEPHEN GILCHRIST.
[Radio Editor.]

W-G-N-'s long distance test of the night of March 30 has raised in the minds of radio engineers and listeners-in of Australasia the belief that the time is not distant when putting a program on a loud speaker from a broadcast station some 9,000 miles away will be entirely feasible under good conditions.

So successful was the transmission of W-G-N that, despite extremely unfavorable atmospheric conditions and radio interference in New Zealand and Australia, scarcely a district of those two commonwealths failed to report hearing at least a part of the program.

In Wellington, N. Z., where local transmission interference was not as persistent as in other centers, the entire program was "bagged," as letters from Wellington expressed it, "on several receiving sets."

Further Tests Desired.

Now the Australasians want more tests—want them, in fact, as two way experiments, but seem to regard too much publicity beforehand as a handicap, an indication that that distant part of the globe must have a few radiating receivers of its own which they hope will not be squawking along the ether lanes when the crucial hour comes.

Perhaps the most noteworthy part of the Australasian view is that the static bugaboo, which holds wide sway in the United States, presents such a little side to the Australasian radioans that they look forward to tryouts during this month and in months to follow. That's optimism!

F. J. O'Neill, head of Radio 4YA, Dunedin, N. Z., broadcasting on 370 meters, the largest power station in New Zealand, with a maximum power of 1,000 watts, writes to THE TRIBUNE that 4YA, which is owned by the British Electrical and Engineering company, cable address "Amperage," is anxious at any time to conduct tests with powerful American stations, and requests that any desiring to "hook up" with 4YA write or cable.

Sends Greetings to United States.

The fact that Mr. O'Neill was able, when tuning for W-G-N, to "bag" KGO, Oakland, Cal., on 312 meters, and KHJ, Los Angeles, on 369, which at the time were making no special efforts toward distance transmission, convinced him that two way transmission of music and speech between Australasia and the United States, would be entirely feasible, once the stations "got the hang of it," this referring to the best hours to be chosen, etc.

Beyond the scientific aspect, W-G-N's test went toward bringing about a feeling of real kinship between the radioans of Australasia and this country, a great mission that radio is destined to advance between the nations of the world which hitherto have leaned apart because of lack of understanding and of common contact. Nor is this time so very far away, as witness Mr. O'Neill's greetings to the radioans of the United States:

"Give our respects to American 'fans' and tell them it is a pleasure to hear them, and, speaking as one of the leading 'fans' of this country, radio will be the means of creating a fraternal feeling between the peoples of the two nations. If they wish to communicate with me I will be glad to give any information desired as to tests. These should be easily successful on both sides, as we have no difficulty in the bagging."

TEST SUGGESTIONS

From Sydney the following list of suggestions of broadcasting engineers of Australasia to be applied in further tests have been sent by J. M. Myers, THE TRIBUNE's correspondent:

1. To make certain of picking up Chicago signals Chicago should give Australia C. W. (continuous wave) telegraphy for a week. When this is heard consistently Chicago can then try modulation. Australia can then adjust to Chicago wave length.
2. Cable should be sent announcing modulation after week's telegraphy.
3. Various forms of modulation should be tried; first, buzzer, then speech, then music. Connection with Chicago station will then be established beyond doubt.
4. If tests arranged in May, to insure darkness both ends, transmission could commence 2 a. m. Chicago time up to daylight in Chicago.

Means to Fix a Time.

5. The first week's test would establish whether one period of time was better than another. After a subsequent two weeks' test it would be apparent whether a public demonstration was desirable.
6. As high power as possible should be put into Chicago aerial with the highest radiation efficiency. The higher the power the better chance of success.
7. The wave length should be the most efficient for the aerial on which transmission is made. Keep away from the neighborhood of 450 meters if possible.
8. Station call should be sent frequently during first week's telegraphic test.
9. Station call should also be sent at frequent intervals telegraphically even when speech and music is transmitted.
10. If Chicago prefers speech and music at the outset, instead of week's telegraphy, as much telegraphic signaling as possible should be sent between items—if possible for five minutes every quarter hour. This cannot be done too frequently.
11. It is important that no public announcement should be made before subsequent tests either in America or Australia.
12. If subsequent tests prove successful, there is a distinct possibility of broadcasting in sufficient strength being regularly received in Australia and rebroadcast.
13. A week's notice at least—if possible longer—should be given of any future test.

CO-OPERATION EAGER

J. M. Myers, TRIBUNE correspondent for Australasia, organized the reception of THE TRIBUNE's broadcast experiment throughout the whole of Australia, New Zealand, and New Guinea. He writes from Sydney that he has had easier assignments in his journalistic career than the creation, within a few days, of an organization of this character in two dominions, including a continent as large as the United States. But his task was facilitated by the cordial coöperation of the newspapers, government authorities and wireless amateurs. Everybody was immediately interested in the experiment, and government departments that sometimes take weeks to come to a decision agreed to coöperate after half an hour's conversation.

"Arrangements for the various wireless stations to 'listen-in,'" Mr. Myers writes, "constituted only one portion of the work; it was necessary to organize collection of news of reception from the widely scattered centers so that cables could be sent in sufficient time to reach THE TRIBUNE on Sunday evening. The difference of sixteen hours between eastern Australian time and Chicago time made this easier.

Ready Three Days Ahead.

Three days before the test was to be made all the arrangements were complete; correspondents had been appointed in all the principal cities, and wireless communication with the isolated centers was an essential part of the organization.

"I made Melbourne my headquarters, and, sitting in a hotel lounge on the evening of the test, literally felt the pulse of this vast country. Telegrams, telephone messages, cablegrams, radio messages followed in quick succession. The first success was reported from Hobart, where the special receiving set on the great battle cruiser H. M. S. Hood had been kindly made available by the flag captain, Capt. Tim Thurn, who is also one of the admiralty's wireless experts. A song was heard soon after 7:30 p. m. Then a Melbourne amateur telephoned his log; Adelaide reported failure; Brisbane picked up the station call W-G-N; and a Sydney amateur recorded partial success.

"At frequent intervals the Melbourne radio station, controlled by the Amalgamated Wireless company, and Mr. Fisk, managing director of the company in Sydney, reported the messages which were flashed across the continent—from Perth and Wyndham in western Australia to Townsville in north Queensland; from New Guinea to Hobart. Then the New Zealand news began to trickle through, from both amateurs and experimental stations, chiefly by wireless, amateurs and the Melbourne radio station telephoning the results to me as received.

Bad Conditions Overcome.

"It was a fascinating evening. Although atmospheric conditions were most unfavorable, it was exceedingly satisfactory that some portions of the program were heard clearly in Melbourne, New Zealand, New Guinea, Hobart and other places, thus establishing beyond all doubt the possibility of wireless telephonic communication between Chicago and the southern Pacific.

"A cablegram recording the main results was in THE TRIBUNE office before conclusion of the program, and the Pacific Cable board rushed the press messages with the details in time for the Sunday night editions."

WJAX TO SEND DAILY WARNINGS TO LAKE CRAFT

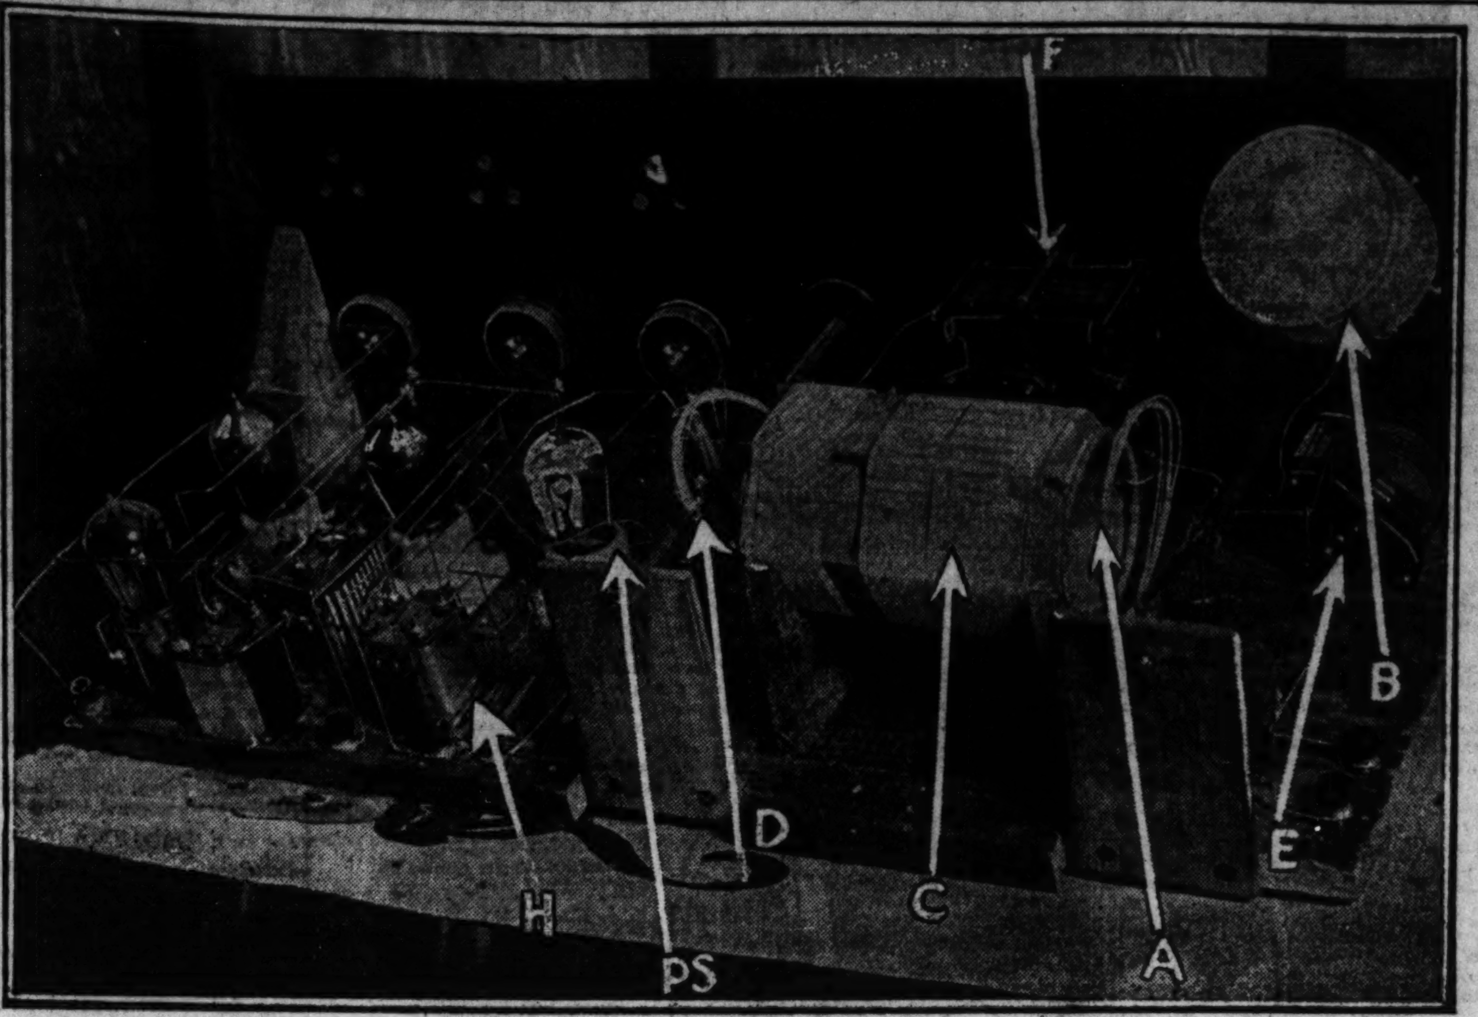
Broadcasting as an aid to vessels on the great lakes is to be inaugurated by WJAX, Union Trust company, Cleveland.

Lieut. B. F. Jenkins of the United States branch hydrographic office of Cleveland will furnish WJAX daily with warnings which will be broadcast immediately following weather reports. These warnings will cover such items as misplaced buoys, lights and buoys not functioning properly, changes in characteristics of lights, recommended drafts for rivers and harbors, new soundings obtained, reports of shoals and floating obstructions such as derelicts, rafts of logs, etc., submerged obstructions reported, such as anchors, lost in a confined fairway, and the like.

Harvard Radio Club Going on Experimental Cruise

New York, May 10.—[Special.]—The Radio club of Harvard has made arrangements for chartering a Gloucester schooner, the Nereus, for a cruise across the Atlantic this summer to study radio problems. The experiments will deal chiefly with low wave lengths for use on transatlantic vessels, and a study will be made of static. The cruise will last three months.

Low Loss Tuner, with Wave Trap, Designed for Broadcast Work



This tuner was designed by W. E. Schweitzer, experimental station 9XBD, and was constructed by W. J. Tarrant, 838 Junior terrace, its owner. With it Mr. Tarrant is able to tune through local broadcasts and Mr. Schweitzer's station, four houses away.

REVAMPED WHITE BILL PROVIDES BUREAU OF RADIO

Anti-Trust Clause Also Altered.

The accompanying photograph of a low loss tuner built for broadcast wave length service may, at first glance, give a suggestion of more or less crudeness that might be overcome; but when it comes to actual performance, the oven dried wood that seems to provide such bulks of loss possibilities will stand up with many of the more sightly insulations.

Since the advocacy of the low loss tuner in licensed amateur circles, to which its use has been confined almost exclusively until very recently, and in which it has been undergoing remarkable development, it has assumed a multitude of forms in the matter of methods of coil winding, and the like.

Several Efficient Windings.

Any of these may be followed—provided either really is followed—with assurance of success, and there is no occasion for any one to lose sleep over the question of which one is best. There is no sense of rivalry in the windings of coils, each in its way offering its measure of efficiency, because each strives for the minimum of distributed capacity and the minimum losses in its own way. However, it would be well to bear in mind that a beautifully wound coil on any inefficient form is love's labor lost.

The low loss tuner at Fred Marco's station, 9XBA, and that in use at 9XBD, W. E. Schweitzer's station, are quite different in design from the standpoint of constants, but quite similar in aim—elimination of losses to the Nth degree. Each has succeeded in bringing in low wave European signals during the last winter with great consistency.

Helps Neighbor Build Set.

When Mr. Schweitzer discovered that W. J. Tarrant, four doors away, was having a world of trouble hearing anything but Mr. Schweitzer when the latter's transmitter was in action, he sought to coöperate with Mr. Tarrant in construction of a receiver that would choke out the code.

It took a great deal of time and labor on the part of both before a properly designed coil was evolved for efficient action over the broadcast range.

At the time the Cardwell condenser, then recognized as one of the few really low loss condensers on the market, was hard to obtain in the 11 plate size, so a 17 plate was cut to the capacity of the 11 plate.

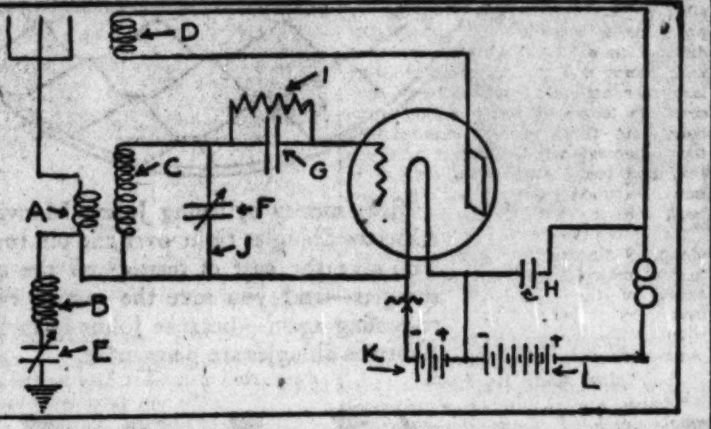
Sharpening Regeneration Set.

The old standby, the regenerative circuit, the circuit with which any one can get good results, can be made to tune extremely sharp. In fact, if one is located near a powerful transmitting station the receiver can be constructed so to tune that a local station will tune almost as sharply as the average distant station does on the present receiver and the surprising thing is that the distant station will tune but little sharper than before.

The diagram of the set and the sizes of wire, condensers, etc., are listed. To get the maximum efficiency from this set the ideas to keep in mind are: Use only the best parts obtainable. There are not many to purchase, so have them of the best. Keep all connections away, as far as possible, from insulation materials, or losses are introduced. As can be seen from the photograph, half inch stripes of thin wood are glued on edge along the secondary coil c, to keep the windings away from the surface of the cardboard tube. Connect the condenser right onto the grid lead of the tube socket. Do not use a molded socket for the detector tube. Porcelain sockets are best, or if not obtainable, use sockets of metal and porcelain, such as the Radio Corporation sockets. The type of socket used in the amplifier does not matter. Mount the coil A so that it can be rotated up to a right angle to the coil C. Also mount the coil D so that it can be rotated up to a right angle to the coil C.

To tune in a station on this set, keep the primary and secondary at the same wave length. This is done by tuning the condensers E and F. Then tune the coil D by rotating it parallel to the coil C. After various stations are once located and the positions of the dials checked they can always be found at the same positions.

If interference is encountered, revolve the coil A a few degrees at a time away from the coil C. This increasing of the coupling will give increased selectivity.



Constants of the circuit are:

A—Coil of 4 turns No. 18 double cotton covered magnet wire 4 inches in diameter.

B—Coil, 64 turns No. 28 D. C. C. magnet wire wound on cardboard tube 3½ inches in diameter.

C—Coil, 95 turns No. 18 D. C. C. wire. To make this coil, 6 strips of oven-dried wood, ½ inch high, are glued to a 3 inch tube, making winding about 4 inches in diameter.

D—Coil, 28 turns, No. 28 D. C. C. magnet wire on cardboard tube 4 inches in diameter.

E—23 plate Bremer-Tully Vernier variable condenser.

F—11 plate Cardwell variable condenser.

G—.00025 mfd. mica condenser.

H—.001 mfd. mica condenser.

PSH porcelain socket.

I—Grid leak, 2 megohms.

J—Lead connecting to movable plates of 11 plate condenser.

K—A battery, 6 volts.

L—B battery, 18 volts.

Radiophone Operator to Address Electric Club

At the meeting of the radio section of the Electric club of Chicago, in the Morrison hotel on Tuesday at 7 p. m., P. F. Neal, chief operator of station WDAP, will speak on "Broadcasting Stations from the Operators' Standpoint." Lawrence C. F. Horle, chief engineer of the Federal Telegraph and Telephone company, will speak on "Problems Met in Quality Reproduction of Music," and Ted Hatch will exhibit a superhetrodyne receiver.

On June 10 the radio section of the club will give a dinner and smoker in the Cameo room of the Morrison hotel, at which time men of national reputation in the radio field will speak.

DON'T CROWD WIRES.

In wiring your set do not crowd wires. Compromise between too close and too far apart.

NEW ZEALANDER HEARS 500 U. S. CODE SENDERS

Belief that amateur radio in the United States is about to swing wide the doors of other nations, opening the way to private communication between individuals in widely distributed sections of the globe, is given still greater credence by the report that F. D. Bell, prominent New Zealand radio experimenter, has heard 500 American amateur stations.

Reception of signals from amateurs in this country is becoming altogether "too easy," says Mr. Bell in a letter to the American Radio Relay league. "It has come to this, that any one with a single tube and a two coil circuit can hear a dozen on any single night, and the receiver that won't bring them in is a 'dud.'"

"COUPLING TUBE UNIT" MAY BE PUBLIC JUNE 1

Navy Expects to Give Out New Invention.

The "coupling tube unit," by means of which several receiving sets may use a single antenna, will be made available to the public soon after June 1, according to naval radio experts. This device was invented and perfected by Dr. A. H. Taylor and L. C. Young of the Naval Radio laboratory at Bellevue, Md., and has been demonstrated on board the U. S. battleship Colorado.

By connecting a coupling tube unit between each receiving set and the single antenna suspended from the masts several incoming messages on different wave lengths were received simultaneously, while three messages on other wave lengths were transmitted from the vessel.

Patents on this new radio device, which makes the operation of several sets independent of each other, even when receiving on a common aerial, are pending and consequently the inventors do not care to reveal the exact hook-up nor details of the apparatus.

In general, it is said to include a coupling resistance, so high that the strength of the incoming signals is reduced materially, requiring at least a three or four tube set. A radio frequency step in the form of a radio frequency trap, which eliminates any regeneration, is required and of course a receiving set with a detector tube. Reception is improved with two tubes of audio frequency amplification.

The military value of the coupling unit to the navy is high since it enables a vessel or station to carry on several times as much business or traffic as has heretofore been possible without interference, and the navy holds the rights for military use. It has become a part of battleship standard equipment.

To the general public its chief interest will be that it will permit the use of a single aerial on a large apartment house or hotel, wherein each tenant wants to operate his own set independently of others. A lead in can be run into each apartment or suite, the owner specifying that each tenant must use a coupler unit and not connect his receiving set directly with the plug in his suite. Many unsightly aerials on housetops can thus be eliminated.

Big radio manufacturers are said to have made overtures to Dr. Taylor for permission to manufacture his units, but to date the name of the manufacturer has not been announced.

HERE AND THERE

According to New York dispatches, Keith circuit vaudeville performers have been forbidden to broadcast by radio.

One of the results of this decision is enforced abandonment of broadcasting by Vincent Lopez's orchestra.

The Keith office contends that Lopez's drawing power was being decreased for the theaters because people heard him so often on the air.

Broadcasters make the counterclaim that radio "made" Lopez and won him his contract to appear in vaudeville.

Kansas City, Mo., May 10.—The "Merry Old Chief" of the Kansas City Star's Nighthawks will begin a tour of a Chautauqua circuit Tuesday, May 20. He is to headline the circuit during the summer months in an original radio act.

The state will present the inside scenes of a broadcasting studio, with all the accessories. The chief, his orchestra, a male quartet, the "mike," and the "professor" will all be there, by proxy, if not in person.

At present the country has nine radio supervisors, ten inspectors, and ten assistant inspectors. It is pointed out by the bureau of navigation that more supervisors are needed and that subdistrict headquarters should be established at Philadelphia, Omaha, Cincinnati, Denver, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Savannah, and Hawaii.

A new station with the call letters WDBH has opened in Worcester, Mass. The announcer will use the slogan, "The Voice from the Heart of the Commonwealth." The power is 100 watts and the wave length 286 meters.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer last week began broadcasting a regular program through station WTAM. Baseball scores and sporting features also are being furnished daily, except Sunday, by the newspaper.

The General Electric company plans to build a radio experimental station this summer to cost about $150,000. The new station will be in the vicinity of Schenectady. WGY will continue to broadcast entertainment and the new station will deal only with experimental work.

Station KDKA, Pittsburgh, has thirty-five pickup points connected to the station by land lines, making possible a great variety of programs.

"Minstrelsy, Past and Present," will be put on the air by WGY, Schenectady, Friday evening, May 16. The Georgia Minstrel Boys, the Radio Four and the WGY orchestra will present the program, which will open with the period of 1000 B. C. Music of the troubadours of 1300 A. D. will be offered as well as the music of the Irish minstrel. The listener will then hear the minstrel music of the Yankee Hill, the first American minstrel. The program will be concluded with a modern minstrel show.

Great Britain not only has taken to its heart the "dynes" of radio, but two London inventors, according to cable advices, have come forth with the "Unidyne," a set said successfully to operate a loud speaker with only an "accumulator," the English name for the "A" battery. The main claims set forth for this new invention are that it reduces static interference and is operated easily.

An all Polish program will be broadcast by WGY, Schenectady, Monday evening, May 12. Compositions of Schertzinger, Gregory, Kierjoff, Jan Gall, Moniuszko, Godard, and Chopin will be offered by the Liberty Bell male chorus, directed by A. Grzegorzewski and the Kaline Ladies' Glee club, both Polish organizations of Amsterdam, N. Y.

WDAR, Philadelphia, recently was picked up by members of an expedition into the valley of Amazon in search of rare birds. A cablegram from Para, Brazil, received by the station, read: "Hoatsin expedition thanks you for splendid program. Advance party starting up Amazon Monday. All well and happy." It was signed Rudolphe M. de Schauensee.

WBBG, "The Voice from Cape Cod," at Mattapoisett, Mass., transmitting on 250 watts and using Willard storage batteries alone for power, has been heard frequently in England and on the Pacific coast. The station uses 2,400 volts and transmits on 240 meters.

A 500 watt transmitter is being built at station WRW, Tarrytown, N. Y. Engineers expect to have the new equipment in operation July 15.

T. C. O'Donnell, editor of the Writer's Digest, is giving a series of lessons in journalism for writers and aspirants every Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock from WLW, the Crosley station at Cincinnati.

REVAMPED WHITE BILL PROVIDES A BUREAU OF RADIO

Anti-Monopoly Clause Is Also Altered.

Washington, D. C., May 10.—[Special.]—Federal regulation of radio communication, with special provisions applying the anti-trust laws to any attempt to monopolize the ether or apparatus used in the operation of a broadcasting station, is proposed in the White bill which has been ordered reported by the house committee on merchant marine.

The bill represents a two years' study by the committee with a view of evolving a comprehensive code for control of radio communication and correcton of evils that have grown up as the science has progressed.

Creates Radio Bureau.

The bill creates a bureau of radio in the department of commerce which would be assisted in enforcing the law by an advisory committee. This advisory committee would be composed of one member each, representing the secretary of state, the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of war, the secretary of the navy, the secretary of agriculture, the postmaster general, the secretary of commerce, the United States shipping board, and seven additional members of "recognized attainment in radio communication" from civilian life.

Anti-Monopoly Clause.

The revamped anti-monopolistic provision of the bill reads as follows:

"The secretary of commerce is hereby directed to refuse a station license to any person, company, or corporation, or any subsidiary thereof which, in his judgment, is unlawfully monopolizing or seeking to unlawfully monopolize radio communication, directly or indirectly, through the control of the manufacture or sale of radio apparatus, through exclusive traffic arrangements, or by any other means. In addition, the general anti-trust laws are made applicable to the manufacture, sale, and distribution of radio devices and equipment."

ACCUSES R. C. A. OF BROADCASTING JAP PROPAGANDA

Washington, D. C., May 10.—Charges that the Radio Corporation of America has given frequent circulation to Japanese propaganda through its station WRC here while denying congressmen a chance to answer it, have been made to Secretary of Commerce Hoover by Senator Shortridge of California.

Shortridge also asked Hoover to investigate alleged transactions of the radio corporation with foreign governments. He sent Hoover a report of an investigation made by V. S. McClatchy, Sacramento, Cal., publisher, purporting to show that the corporation has a contract with the Japanese government giving it a monopoly of radio service to Japan, terminable at any time by the Japanese government.

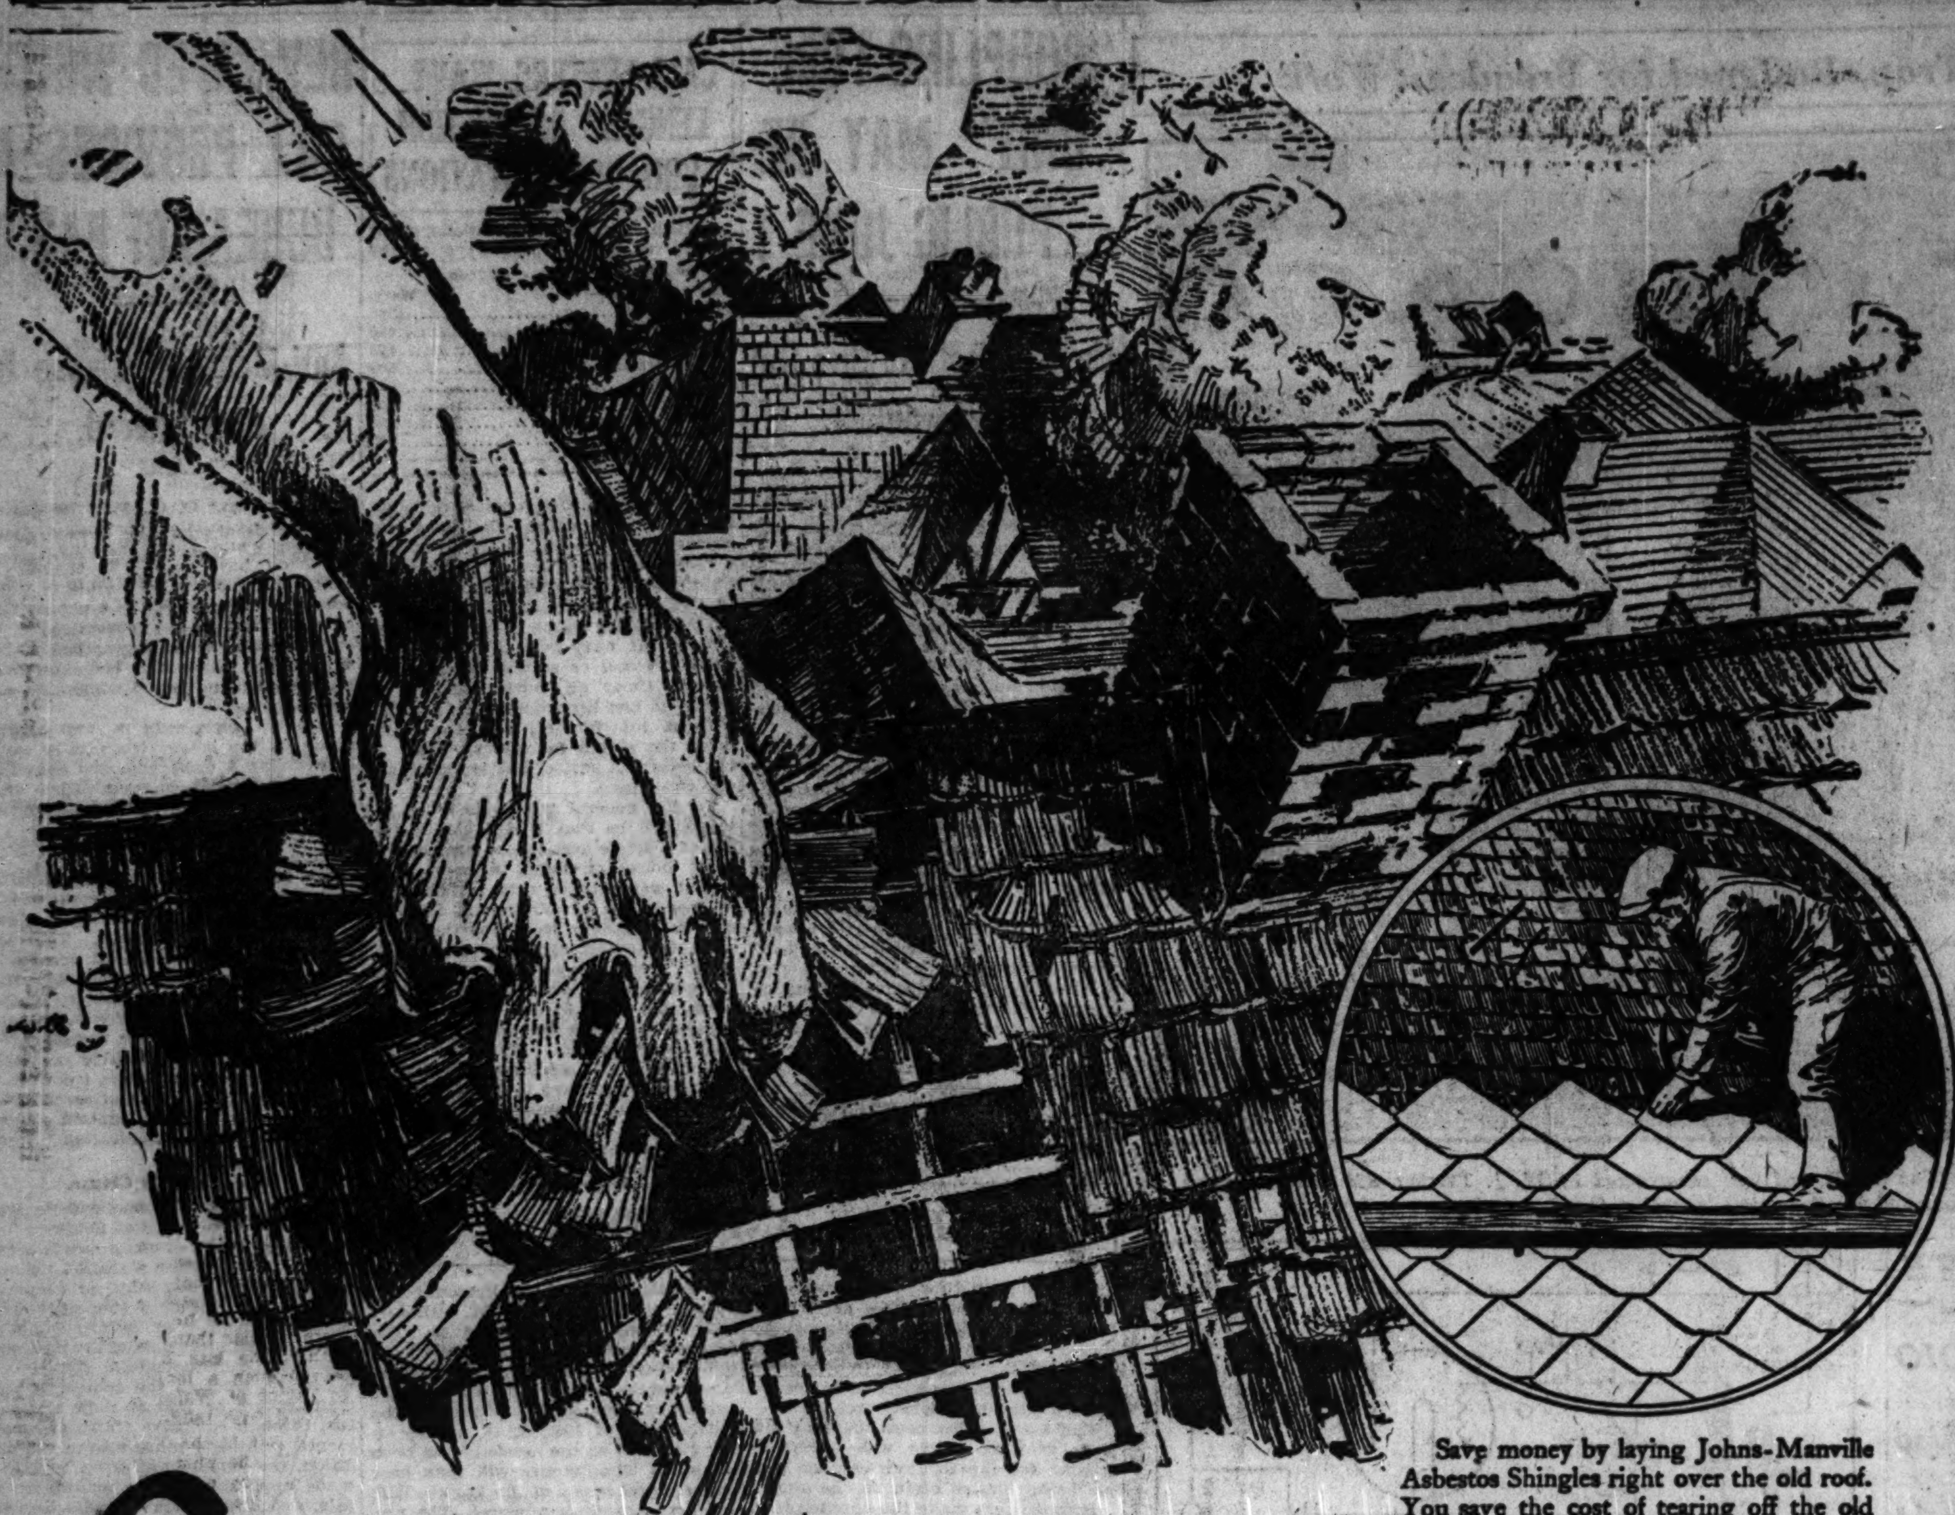
CUT OUT STATIC
and Interference



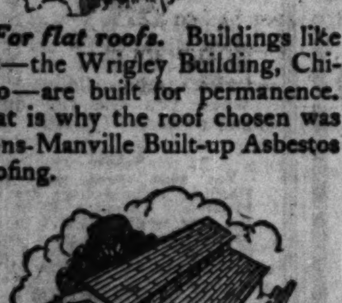
Save money by laying Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles right over the old roof. You save the cost of tearing off the old shingles—and you save the cost of ever re-roofing again—because Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles are permanent.

Stop tearing off those old shingles!

Lay Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles right over the old roof. Get the fire-safety and permanence of Asbestos at little more than the price of ordinary roofing

For home roofs. Whether building a new house or re-roofing an old one, it will pay you to secure the fire-safety and permanence of Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles.

For flat roofs. Buildings like this—the Wrigley Building, Chicago—are built for permanence. That is why the roof chosen was Johns-Manville Built-up Asbestos Roofing.



For sloping industrial roofs. Johns-Manville Asbestos Roofings protect against fire, smoke, alkali, as well as against weather—because they are rock roofings.

GOING to re-roof? Here's a very important "don't"—you'll save a good deal of money by observing it.

Don't tear off the old roof!—and you won't have any broken shrubbery or litter around the house—you won't expose the inside of your home to the dangers of a sudden rainstorm—and you won't have to pay any labor charges for having the old shingles torn off and carted away.

But—more important than anything else—the old roof, under the new and permanent Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles, becomes a solid blanket of valuable insulation to protect your home against winter cold and summer sun.

An all-round economy

Not only is this method of laying your new roof inexpensive—but the Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles themselves make the most economical roof you can buy, because they will protect your roof year upon year, with little or no maintenance cost, as long as your house lasts. When you re-roof with Johns-Manville Asbestos Shingles you have re-roofed for the last time.

Two kinds of Asbestos Shingles

No matter how small or how large your house is, it can have the protection of an asbestos shingled roof. Permanence and fire-safety are brought within the reach of every pocketbook.

Johns-Manville makes two types of asbestos shingles—rigid and flexible. The rigid Asbestos Shingles are hard, concrete-like slabs—with all the permanence of concrete—but they are beautifully toned with several rich colors, reds, grays and browns, whichever you may prefer.

The flexible type—called Johns-Manville Flexstone Shingles, are sold at about the same low cost of ordinary slate-surfaced shingles. Flexstone Shingles are slate-surfaced too—but here the similarity ends. Instead of a rag-felt base such as most flexible shingles have, Flexstone Shingles are built upon a dense layer of asbestos rock fibre—which accounts for their greater fire-safety and durability. They are furnished in shades of red, green or blue-black.

Asbestos for every building

Not only is asbestos the most practical shelter for houses—either old or new—it is a great economy on any type of building.

Besides the Asbestos Shingles, our line includes Built-up Asbestos Roofings for flat roofed buildings and Asbestos Roll Roofings, both slate-surfaced and plain, for all types of sloping roofs, industrial buildings, sheds, garages, farm buildings, etc., and that comfort-giving material for lining walls, floors and roofs, Johns-Manville Housline, which insulates your house against heat, cold or noise.

The concerns listed here can tell you what type Asbestos Roofing best meets your needs. Consult the one nearest you, and fill in the coupon below.

Comparing the British Exposition with Our Own World's Fair in 1893

By Mme. X.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was on a pale, wan, misty day that the British Empire exhibition opened at Wembley. It was St. George's day, too, and likewise Shakespeare's birthday, so it was in every sense of the word a memorable day. It is estimated that in the neighborhood of 150,000 people swarmed over the only partially completed park. In the crowd was the author of this p. p. p. Although the trains leading out to Wembley were packed and jammed from early morning to late in the afternoon, nothing could have been more orderly, courteous, and quiet than this throng on pleasure bent.

The manners of the average middle class British in public are beyond reproach. There is little or no shoving or undue crowding; there is on every hand consideration for the rights of others and no excessive clamor on the part of individuals for their own rights. There is no loud talking or laughter, and towards older people there is much more politeness shown in public vehicles than with us. The general custom here is for men to offer seats in the trams and busses to any woman who may be standing. As far as possible this custom was observed in spite of the crowds that jammed the underground and other railways leading to Wembley.

British Ways and Ours.

Remembering similar exercises in Chicago when, on May 1, 1893, the World's Columbian exposition was opened in Chicago by President Grover Cleveland, inaugurated for his second term just a few weeks before, on March 4, it was interesting to compare British methods with our own. Ours was the essence of democratic simplicity. The unpainted deal boards of the platform on which the President and the committee in charge of the fair and its opening ceremonies took their places were barely covered with red, white, and blue bunting. The hastily constructed seats for the spectators rose in all the raw, crude golden tints of rough hewn lumber, whose aromatic fragrance tinted the air.

The blue sky was the roof for the assembled multitude. The rich, red mud which carpeted the grounds after the wettest, most inclement winter and spring known in our part of the world for years clung to every foot and plastered the planks of the temporary stands. Unfinished, many scaffolded structures stood on all sides, giving but a glimmering idea of the beauties which were soon to set a new standard for all time to such an enterprise.

The ceremonies were brief and simple. A band—the late Johnny Hand's, I believe—played some national airs. The Chicago committee, at whose head was the late Harlow Higinbotham, and the national committee, presided over by Thomas W. Palmer of Detroit, were on the platform, their two chairmen saying a few words, followed by President Cleveland, who made one of his usual well delivered, serious, and not too long addresses, and that was all.

Never Been Equaled.

Through the glistening, white peristyle the lake gleamed brilliantly blue. Flags fluttered from every tower, dome, and flag staff. Flags fluttered at the behest of a brisk northeast breeze. The crowd, I suppose about as large as that of the opening day at Wembley, wandered about, walking when possible on planks to avoid the sticky, clinging mud, and Chicagoans, those who thought at all, silently wondered whether any one was coming from the outer world to see their show. And comparatively few did at the beginning. It was not until the farmers got their crops in that the trains from the rest of the country began to run full and spilling over, bringing visitors to see what has since been proved to be the most classically beautiful exposition in point of architecture that the world ever has seen, either before or since then.

Visitors from foreign countries did not turn up in the large numbers that had been hoped for, and therefore those nations will never quite realize what we Chicagoites feel when we see other expositions, how the successors to the world's fair fall short when judged by the standards we, all unknowing, set at that time for the outward aspects of such enterprises.

Therefore, to one visitor the British Empire exposition seems rather insignificant in its outward aspect. But not so in its inward aspect. It is a most impressive marshaling of the resources, material, and imponderable, of the greaest empire that the world ever has seen. From Downing street are governed 450,000,000 people, between one-quarter to one-third of the earth's 1,500,000,000 inhabitants,' the bipeds whom Arthur Balfour once termed in an essay "earth's worst disease."

Pomp and Circumstance.

The impressive ceremonies with which the exposition opened on April 23 were in keeping with the imperial nature of the show. There was a pomp and circumstance about them which was in sharp contrast to the simple and democratic service which opened the Chicago fair thirty-one years ago. The stadium which held the assembled multitude is a long oval ring, one and a half times as large as the Colosseum at Rome, and seats 125,000 people easily. At one end of it was built the royal pavilion which sheltered the king and queen and their court. It was painted a gorgeous, blazing, exciting red, a red which was a shade more brilliant than the scarlet coats of the Grenadier guards.

It was trimmed with an equally royal purple, such a tint as certain cinerarias flaunt to the sun at this time of the year, and banks of these proud, stiff, military flowers were in parterres, fenced with railings of the gorgeous red of the pavilion and filling the space between the latter and the roadway and the brilliantly green grass that carpeted the huge arena. The purple was used as a wide frieze just under the roof whose brightly gilded eaves hung over the pavilion. The crowning peak of the roof was a massive golden crown, the imperial crown of Great Britain, with the cross of St. George on the top of it.

Wide sloping roofs shelter and shade the upper half of the sloping tiers of seats in the great amphitheater, leaving the lower ones exposed to the weather whims of the rather damp little island. Up and down the close clipped central grass plot the bands of the Grenadier guards and the pipers of the Scotch Highlanders paraded, welcoming now a division of the British navy, then the marines, again a company of "Tommies," and finally one representing the air service.

At the farther end of the oval inclosure the rising tiers of seats gleamed white as an Alpine mountainside with the white surplices of hundreds of choir boys who, with their own bands and under the direction of the most famous of today's English composers, Sir Edward Elgar, provided some of the most beautiful musical numbers on the morning's program. They added much to the picturesqueness of the scene.

Royal Party Arrives.

At length a fanfare of silver trumpets announced the arrival of the royal party, and preceded and escorted by a glittering troop of the royal guard, cuirassiers, I think they are, as they wear flashing silver breastplates and helmets, the cortège entered, just as similar cortèges did a hundred or two or three hundred years ago on other state occasions, in rather high swung royal coaches, with outriders in gay livery, plumes on the horses' heads, footmen in red and royal liveries up behind, for this show business is an important part of royalty and has become the perfect thing it now is only from centuries of practice.

At a measured trot the four carriages, carrying royalty and the lords and ladies in waiting, swung around the arena to the front of the glowing pavilion, where they were received by the Prince of Wales, who is the president of the exposition. He had come in quietly a few minutes earlier in a closed car. Even that did not save him from the enthusiastic greetings of the multitude, for he is, if possible, even more popular than was his royal grandfather, the late King Edward, who served such a long apprenticeship as Prince of Wales, a hard job that he filled with infinite tact.

The king was in the uniform of an admiral, with the plumed hat of the shape affected by our brave Knights of Pythias. The queen was dressed in a long, mouse colored coat, trimmed top and bottom with gray squirrel skin, her collar close and high and the coat cut in the straight lines of the present mode. Her hat was also gray, a rather high tricorn in shape, worn like a royal crown, perhaps, as one irreverent spectator said, "teed a bit high" but most becoming.

She looked every inch a queen as she bowed in unsmiling, stately manner to the cheering throngs on her right and acknowledged the salute of the troops presenting arms at her left. Her face is a grave, thoughtful one, and you can easily see that she does not take life lightly or the task of being a queen as if it were not a serious business.

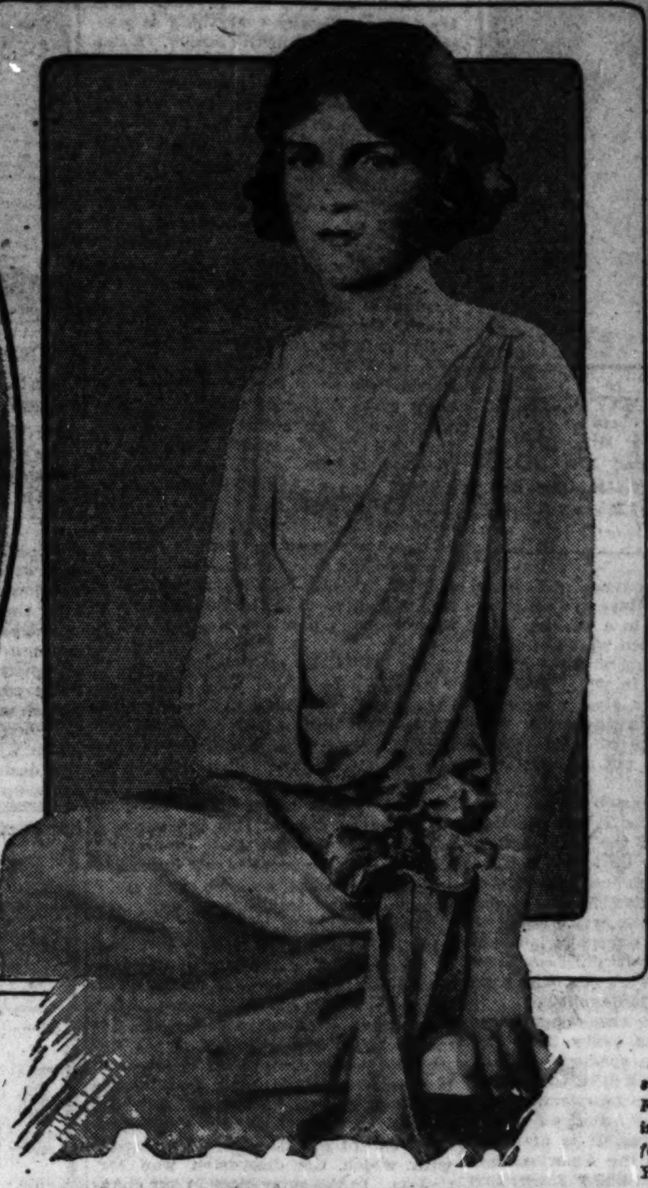
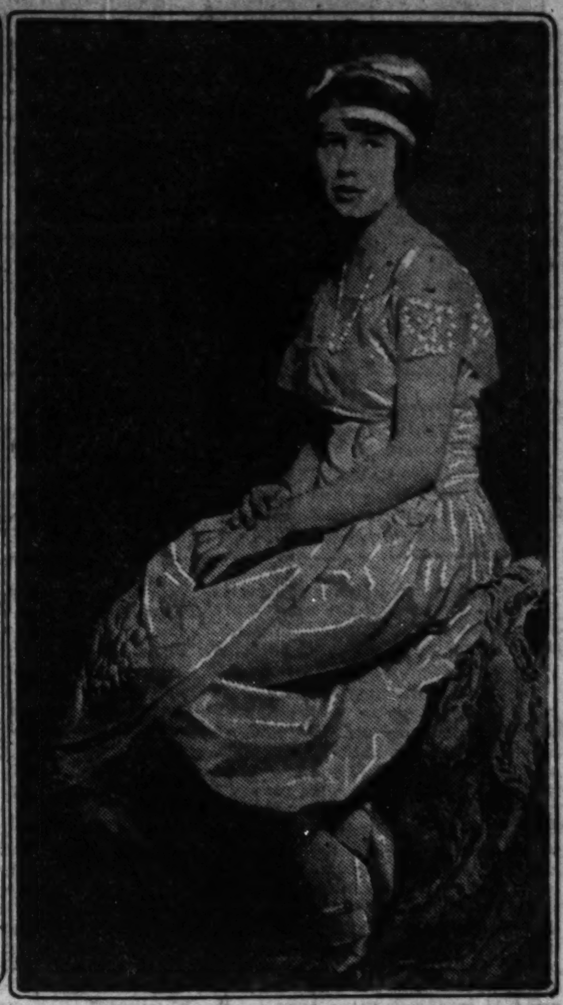
MISS LYDIA HIBBARD.
[Drake Studio Photo.]



MISS MARJORIE KING.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]



MISS BETTY FITTS.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]

Three of the most interesting engagement announcements of the spring are those of Miss Lydia Hibbard to John Edmund Holland Jr., Miss Marjorie King to Clarence B. Mitchell, and Miss Betty Fitts to Lieut. John Hinton, U. S. A.

Miss Hibbard, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard of 1344 Astor street, is a graduate of St. Timothy's school. Her fiancé is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Edmund Holland of 1224 Astor street.

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Marjorie King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King of 1450 Astor street and Lake Forest, to Clarence B. Mitchell, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John James Mitchell of 1550 State parkway and Lake Geneva, was made yesterday. Miss King's eldest sister, Ginevra, is the wife of the eldest son of the John J. Mitchells, William H. Mitchell II., and the former Miss Lolita Ogden Armour is the wife of their second son, John J. Mitchell Jr. Miss King, who is a Farmington girl, made her debut in 1922, the same year in which Miss Hibbard and Miss Fitts were presented formally to society. Mr. Mitchell was graduated from Yale in 1923, the same class with which Mr. Holland Jr. was graduated.

Miss Fitts is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Freeman Fitts of 20 East Goethe street, and Lieut. Hinton is the son of Prof. and Mrs. Edward Hinton of the University of Chicago. Lieut. Hinton was a member of the 1920 class at West Point, which was graduated during the war. No dates for any of the weddings have been set.

I was interested in the description of the king's personality as it impressed a well known American who met him. She said, for it was a member of the observant and analytical sex, that he was much more emphatic than she had expected, not in the least reserved as are most Britishers on first acquaintance. He is extremely well informed on all subjects. Although he has never been there he is thoroughly acquainted with our country, its politics, its customs, and manners. She likened him, because of his vigorous and enthusiastic manner and ready smile, to the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

The Wembley ceremonies included brief speeches from the Prince of Wales and the king, and a prayer delivered by the bishop of Canterbury. Both the king and the Prince of Wales spoke more clearly and in better voice than the prelate. Royalty is carefully trained to its business these days. The words spoken from the crimson pavilion were heard not only all over the park at Wembley but all over England by means of broadcasting, which is as popular and universal here as with us.

There were one or two little incidents that entertained at least one spectator. The queen stood up during the whole of the ceremonies, holding her neat, close wrapped gray silk umbrella like a stick. Except those participating in the reception and speechmaking on the platform, the rest of the enormous audience sat down, except when royalty entered and departed, and when the archbishop offered the prayer. The only exceptions to this general seating were two pale, elderly, gentle looking English women, occupying two seats in front of the writer, who stood the whole time [to the disgust of those immediately behind them], evidently because their dear queen was standing. This was evident because, when she finally sat on one of the two high backed gold and crimson thrones they, too, sank down in their seats with sighs of fatigue and relief.

The other incident that brought a smile was when a young American girl not far away said, "O, look! there are the pork packers of the tower of London," meaning the beef eaters. There's a world of difference between a pork packer and beef eater; one belongs to and symbolizes the past, and is a consumer; the other belongs to and symbolizes the present and future, and is a producer.

Evidence of Privilege.

The passionate devotion of the British to everything that concerns the past is one of the chief differences between us and them. Too easily do we not only shed, but entirely forget the past that enables us to be what we are today. It is one of our serious national defects, and results largely from the fact that we have admitted to share our heritage vast hordes belonging to other races, traditions, and ways of thinking than ours, to whom our past means nothing.

In spite of their profound conservatism, however, the English are in the process of what amounts to a revolution, as important as, if not more so than, anything that has yet come in their history. The present labor ministry is only one manifestation of it. Today is witnessing the annihilation of ancient privilege, particularly that associated with the landed gentry. For 2,000 years this class has held the power and fate of Great Britain in its hands. This power is now passing into just what hands it remains to be seen. Also it lies on the knees of the gods whether or no this revolution will be accomplished bloodlessly or whether, like every other of its kind, it too will go through the customary period of riot and bloodshed.

At present it is being accomplished by means of the machinery of government set up and developed through centuries of law making and administration. This administration has been in the hands of those who have believed in property as the most precious possession possible to mankind. It is not more than a century or so ago that a man who stole or who poached was hanged for it, while the man who in a duel killed another was not punished at all.

One of the evidences of privilege has only within a few months been done away with. From the time that Hyde Park was a royal domain anything in the nature of a hired vehicle was denied the right to traverse the park. Now, since parliament in its recent session abolished this prohibition, taxicabs and other vehicles for conveying people from place to place are permitted to drive through the marble arch and across the park, thus shortening many a trip for those using such conveyances.

Another threatening opening of the gates of privilege to those to whom they have long been closed is in the case of the innumerable little gardens or places that dot London's smart neighborhood and add such an air of distinction and elegance to them. Central green squares they are, around which are houses. These have for generations been locked preserves, owned by the great estates which partition whole areas of London. The only admission was by keys owned by those who occupied the adjoining dwellings. The proposition made by Socialist members of the present government is to throw these open to the public, a definite challenge to the privileged classes.

The latter claim it is one more attack on property, such attacks having been growing in importance and menace for the last decade or two. These two instances are not fundamental changes in custom and are only important as showing which way the current is running and with what strength, for it is often harder to effect some little reform and abandonment of tradition than to put through one of greater value and more far-reaching benefit.

Our Present Ambassador.

If some of our members of congress, a majority of them, could be taken on a tour of foreign lands and study the question of the housing of the diplomatic representatives, they would get an understanding which now seems lacking to them as to the disadvantage under which the representatives of our rich and powerful democracy labor when compared with their compeers of other lands in this branch of national service. Practically all other countries of first or second rank provide dignified and adequate domiciles for their ambassadors and ministers in the capitals to which they are sent.

The great United States of America is the only one which does not have permanent residences for their representatives. It has become a necessity to appoint to these important posts men of independent means. Only those so situated can afford to accept these honorable and interesting positions. There are no embassy residences nor allowances for official entertaining awaiting American ambassadors and ministers in the lands to which Uncle Sam sends them.

Our present ambassador to England, Mr. Kellogg of Minnesota (he was defeated by Magnus Johnson in the last senatorial contest) is fortunately a man of means, which has enabled him and his attractive wife to lease one of the most charming and interesting of the older houses in London, Crewe house, on Curzon street. It is the home of the Marquis of Crewe, one of the great noblemen of Great Britain, at present filling the post of English ambassador to France. It is an old house, so old, in fact, that when it was built it was near the village of Mayfair in the country outside of London. Therefore it has the lines and construction of a house set in a garden. The doors and long French windows of the ground floor open level with the grassy courts and terraces in which it is set.

Although they are stately and dignified, the rooms on the main floor have an atmosphere of comfort and cozy companionship not always found in apartments dedicated to life in the great world. On the walls hangs a small but one of the choicest collections of paintings of the period of Sir Joshua Reynolds to be found in London today. It is composed largely of portraits of dead and gone Crewes. Lovely, alive, romantic, gay, high bred, these long departed ancestors look out on a world as utterly different from the world they knew as that was from the period of the Plantagenets.

Here Mrs. Kellogg keeps open house for her compatriots every Thursday afternoon, when the spacious drawing rooms are always well filled with either resident or visiting Americans. We have quite a sizable American colony in London nowadays. It is of a different quality from the American colony in Paris, as not many Americans live in London without a special object, while many of them live in Paris for no more serious reason than because cabs and servants are cheaper than in the U. S. A. and food and clothes more attractive than with us.

A Man's Country.

Neither of these last reasons would make an American woman want to make her home in London, as the English cuisine does not appeal to us, and the British idea of what is smart in the way of dress for women does not strike us as either artistic or adequate. How a nation living within easy gunshot of the French can boil its vegetables to the soggy consistency which pleases the English and serve them in the bleak, unbuttered innocency which accompanies them from their long boiling to the table is a mystery to an American. The question of the lack of either taste or luxury in the attire of the women is more easily understood.

This is a man's country. The men here dress better and are better looking than their kind in any other country. In the family everything is sacrificed to the sons of the family. Even in quite well to do households the women of the family have, according to our standards, what seem like exceedingly small allowances for dress. Nor have they the inborn gift of taste which is such a large part of the mental equipment of the average French woman. The result is a nation-wide standard in dress which is not up to that of either the leaders in this high art, the French, or the latter's more than capable rivals, the Americans, though it far surpasses that of the nearby Germans.

But it is not for food or dress that one comes to London, but for that exquisite pleasure that this gray old town gives either to the imaginative who is well up in history and literature or to the student of the present, to whom the near at hand spectacle of a great government administering the affairs of a large part of the globe is a drama far surpassing any other either on or off the stage. And in London the universal interest in contemporary politics is beyond anything we know in America, even in the heights of our most exciting political campaigns.

Well Up on Politics.

On every hand you hear talk about the parties in and out of power, about the men conducting the affairs of the nation, and about doings in remote parts of the empire. The Britisher is not provincial, though he may not be international in his point of view.

I could hardly get through a game of Russian bank the other evening in the quiet sitting room of this unpretentious little hotel because two quite commonplace Englishmen, evidently business men "in the city," as they express it here, were talking so acutely about the ultimate fate of the Liberal party and also of Ramsay MacDonald. The former they considered as passing out of existence and the latter as being a merely temporary figurehead, one with a silver tongue and high ideals, but dealing with forces that would prove too much for him. It was not what they said was important, except for the quite seriousness with which the discussion was carried on. In the same class in our country you would be much more likely to find golf scores discussed, not political philosophy.

The wedding service for Miss Gerda M. Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Nelson of 821 Elmwood avenue, Wilmette, and Clifford E. McElevy of Chicago was read by the Rev. Francis C. Stiffler at 8 o'clock on the evening of May 5 at the Nelson residence. A small reception followed the ceremony for the immediate families and a few guests. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley S. Bayer were the only attendants.

Cold as England is in spring both indoors and out, wet as it is at this moment, scarce as are palatable dishes, green vegetables especially, unattractive as are its shops from an American woman's point of view, to be in London at the present time is undeniably the most desirable and interesting experience any thoughtful American can have. The English are grown up, mature, with a sense of responsibility which is not common among us Americans. We seem young, gay, with the carelessness of youth and its ideals as to what makes for happiness and the desirable in life. We'll probably grow up some day.

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent, either of the bride or the bridegroom. Announcements should reach the society editor not later than the Thursday morning preceding the Sunday they are to be printed.

Mrs. Mary McCabe of 32 North Lockwood avenue has announced the marriage of her daughter, Marian Lucille, to John J. McArdle. The ceremony was performed on April 26 at the St. Thomas Aquinas church, and was followed by wedding breakfast at the Oak Park Arms. Mr. and Mrs. McArdle are motoring in the south.

The marriage of Miss Fanny Anna Noyes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edmund Noyes of 1224 Oak avenue, Evanston, to Warren Emerson Knapp, which took place last evening at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Noyes of Park Ridge, Ill., has been announced by Miss Noyes' parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman C. Bledsoe of 7723 Sheridan road announce the marriage of their daughter, Barbara, to Alfred D. Crawford, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Crawford of the Sovereign hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Crawford are residing at the Sheridan Beach hotel.

The marriage of Miss Lillian F. Fox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Fox of 5432 South Aberdeen street, to Ralph B. Courchene, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Courchene of 5428 South Aberdeen street, will take place on Wednesday at the Visitation church at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. John T. Heimeshoff of 5348 Ferdinand street announces the marriage of her sister, Esther Amy Wicks, to Alex Prack of Evanston, on May 1.

Special Anniversary Selling

Frocks, Gowns and Wraps of the "Highest" Character Reduced $10 to $65

Through a careful study of the Art of Dress, KERMANS have established an enviable reputation for Frocks, Gowns and Wraps of the "highest character."

We are equally as determined to have KERMANS known as the stores where Modes of the finest kind are priced at the lowest possible level.

And we're not a bit afraid to say that the pricings prevailing during this selling are less than any one ever before paid for Modes of such outstanding quality.

Street and Afternoon Frocks
$24.75 $39
and higher.

Unusual frocks for street or afternoon wear, beautifully fashioned of Crepe Satin, Crepe Elizabeth, Georgette Crepe and hosts of other materials, will be found in these groups. Also the new Chiffon and Lace Frocks so good this Spring.

Gowns for Formal Functions
$39 $57
and higher.

In these groups will be found those gowns for dinner and evening wear, including many beaded gowns, for which KERMANS has become so noted. Each one is a work of Art—the highest expression of the designer's skill.

Fur-trimmed Coats
$59 $79
and higher.

Juina, Charmeen, Curleen Plaid, Loerchene, Cote de Cheville and a host of silk and satin materials—beautifully enriched with such popular furs as Ermine, Mink Dyed, Cocoa and Summer Squirrel, Baby Fox and Baby Leopard—make these Coats without question the outstanding values of the season.

None of these garments was purchased for "sale" purposes. Each one is fully up to KERMANS high standards in its distinctive and authentic styling, richness of materials and faultless workmanship.

Included in these various groups are the hundreds of new models which are reaching us every day—direct from the foremost designers and dressmakers. So, you can come in every day and see something entirely new.

Those mentioned above can merely give one a glimpse of the many unusual values. Such a wide selection is offered that every one is sure to find just the frock, or gown, or coat they wish and at prices from $10 to $65 less than is usual for Modes of this "high character."

Cordon Membership Reported Filled at Annual Meeting

By Kate Webber.

KNOWN widely as a unique organization of women who have achieved in the arts or the professions, the Cordon announced at its annual May meeting, held last week, that its membership of 550 active and lay members has been filled. Plans also were made for next year's activities, which will include visits of internationally prominent persons, as well as programs to be arranged and given by members.

The position occupied by the Cordon in the community is rather enviable, owing to the qualifications for membership. Nine years ago this month a small group of women well known in the artistic world, stirred to a spirit of emulation by the organization of The Cliff Dwellers, a men's organization, met to consider the formation of a similar club for women.

Among those at this first meeting, and active in the forming of the club, were Mrs. Ella W. Peattie, Judge Mary Bartelme, Mrs. Pauline Palmer, Mrs. Bert Leston Taylor, Mrs. Clara Louise Burnham, Mrs. Jessie McCutcheon Preston, Miss Clara E. Laughlin, Miss Jeannette Pratt, Miss Louise Hackney, Miss Kate O'Connor, Miss Anna Morgan, Miss Harriet Monroe, and Miss Nellie V. Walker.

Starting in a small space in the Fine Arts building, with a small drawing room, dining room, and kitchen, the club's quarters gradually have grown until it occupies parts of two floors in the same building, connected by an interior staircase. A drawing room occupies the upper floor, and a large and small dining room and dressing rooms are on the lower floor.

The Cordon is known largely for its hospitality to visiting artists, and in the season scarcely a week passes that some famous person is not a guest. The register of those who have spoken or have been special guests there, includes names which have reached the heights in various fields.

Because persons artistically inclined are notoriously nomadic, many gaps have been left in the Cordon membership, owing to members being claimed by Paris, London, New York, and other centers. Among the local celebrities who long have been identified with its activities are Mary Hastings Bradley, Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Lena McCauley, Sophonisba Breckinridge, Mary Peck Thomson, Marie Blanke, Eunice Tietgens, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden, Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. Oliver D. Grover, and Mrs. Morton D. Hull.

At the annual meeting the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Calvin A. Whyland; vice presidents, Mrs. H. E. Voegeli and Miss Virginia Chester; recording secretary, Miss Hazel Peek; corresponding secretary, Miss Agnes Benson; treasurer, Miss Agnes Fromen.

As chairman of hospitality, Mrs. John S. Coonley will be in charge of daily luncheons to be served at Central branch, Y. W. C. A., from May 12 to 22, in connection with its annual canvass. Details regarding the last year's work and immediate plans of the association are to be found in today's club news.

Mrs. Calvin A. Whyland is the new president of the Cordon, an organization composed of women of achievement in professional and artistic circles. An outline is given today of the growth of the club, which is unique among women's organizations.

Mrs. Don B. Kilbourne is general chairman of arrangements for the annual charity ball of the Oak Park Junior center of the Infant Welfare society of Chicago, which is to be given on Friday evening at the Oak Park club. The proceeds will go toward the maintenance of the station supported by the center.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE joint committee was taking a recess.

"I've been elected a delegate to the biennial, and I'm going to California in June," the member from the Civic league informed the group. "I'm so happy over it I can't think of anything else."

"I'm a delegate to the state federation meeting," contributed the member from the Research club. "We don't belong to the general federation."

"My club hasn't affiliated with any of the federations," said the member from the Improvement club. "We can't see how it would be to our advantage. We find plenty to do and plenty to interest us without belonging."

"It's too bad for a big club like yours to feel that way," replied the member from the Research club. "In our little club we think it's a fine thing to have the state federation behind us. We get help and inspiration from it; we keep in touch with the work that other clubs are doing by attending the state conferences and conventions, and when we are asked to push any statewide improvements we feel we are doing our bit in the larger field. We are going into the general as soon as we can manage it."

"Federation is a give as well as a take proposition," voiced the Civic league member. "If the big club can help the little club by giving support and backing to the federations, that's one good reason why the big club should federate. Even a big club can't get far alone when it comes to putting over a matter of state or national importance. It takes the strength of numbers to influence public opinion or legislation. We women should all stand together—big clubs and little ones—in local and state and national groups, ready to act in unity in any group that needs our influence."

Y. W. C. A. Makes Annual Canvass

A PLACE to live, a job, a chance to study and grow, and an opportunity for normal friendship and wholesome good times—these are some of the fundamentals that the Young Women's Christian association will continue to provide for Chicago girls by means of its annual canvass to be carried on May 12 to 22. Seven hundred workers representing women's clubs, churches, and business women's organizations will carry on in the loop and in residential districts the task of renewing old subscriptions and securing new ones for the association.

Mrs. William P. Sidley of Winnetka is general chairman, and the executive committee includes Mrs. John Stuart Coonley, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. John V. Farwell, Mrs. Clifford W. Barnes, Mrs. Austin Jenner, Mrs. Annie Peake Kenny, Mrs. Arthur Consoer, and Mrs. B. F. Langworthy. A committee of business men led by John Stuart and numbering among its members David R. Forgan, John W. Scott, and Kent S. Clow will reënforce the efforts of the women. "There's no doubt that boys' work is better supported in Chicago than girls' work," said Mr. Forgan. "The Y. W. C. A. is doing the same work for the working girl that the Y. M. C. A. is doing for the working boy. If anything, girls need the protection, sociability, and opportunities for improvement more than the boys."

More than 13,000 girls found a home either in a Y. W. C. A. boarding home or through the room registry last year, according to Mrs. Sidley. Eight hundred and two were placed in positions through the employment bureau; 5,653 enjoyed the gymnasiums and swimming pools, and 3,427 more studied sewing, millinery, English, music, and business subjects at the "spare time" evening school at central branch. Training in citizenship and leadership, as well as social good times, were provided to 1,600 business and industrial girls through girls' clubs. One of these newly organized groups is the Friendship club made up of girls in domestic service in Chicago and suburbs.

Summer time dreams of woods and beach and lake came true for the 2,295 girls who enjoyed happy and inexpensive vacations at the Y. W. C. A. camps, Forest beach on Lake Michigan, for self-supporting girls, Millhurst, the Girl reserve camp on the Fox river, and Hammond, for colored girls on Wolf lake, Ind.

Y. W. C. A. residences, cafeterias, and summer camps are self-sustaining. Other departments, such as the employment bureau and the classes, are, because of low fees, only partly so, while still others, such as the room registry and the emergency bureaus (the latter caring for those in trouble or difficulty who need temporary assistance) give free service to all, and have no income. As it is, the Y. W. C. A. is 72 per cent self-supporting, but because of these low fees and free service, must turn to the public for 28 per cent of its yearly budget difference.

Among those active as district chairman and team captains are Miss Emily Larned, Miss Edna Jackson, Mrs. Evan Johnson of Oak Park, Mrs. John T. Agar, Miss Gladys Spry of Evanston, Mrs. Albert Page of Wilmette, Mrs. Arthur Tuttle and Mrs. Victor Elting of Winnetka, Mrs. William Sutherland of Glencoe, Miss Elizabeth Merrill of Kenilworth, and Mrs. W. E. Conrad and Mrs. J. Harry Jones of La Grange.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Full programs of club and individual activities are in order among members of the Chicago College club, which opened its new clubhouse at 196 East Delaware place on May 3. A bridge and ma chiang party is to be given on Wednesday at 2:15 o'clock. On Saturday the club announces the first large affair, a concert, to be given at 3 o'clock, with Katheryn Browne of the Chicago Civic Opera association as soloist. The proceeds will go toward a fund to build an assembly hall and stage next to the present building.

A meeting of the social hygiene committee of the Woman's City club will be held tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock. At 1:30 the legislative committee will meet for further discussion of immigration bills. From 7 until 9 o'clock tomorrow evening a citizenship test will be held in the lounge. On Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock the clean city committee will meet for luncheon, and at 2 o'clock the current book review will meet. Tea will be served. On Friday at 2 o'clock there will be a meeting of the Thirty-ninth ward branch at Rutherford park field house.

There will be a delegates' luncheon given by the Vocational Supervision league on Tuesday at 12 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club.

The Mothers' Relief association will give a May breakfast and musical on Wednesday at 12 o'clock at the Sovereign hotel, at which time a membership drive will be launched. Mrs. F. A. Rayner of 2942 Washington boulevard is in charge of reservations.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Council of Jewish women will be held tomorrow at 11 o'clock. A spring frolic will be given by the junior members.

Election of officers and luncheon will follow the business meeting of the Chicago Housewives' league tomorrow at 410 South Michigan avenue.

The Progressive Democratic Woman's club, of which Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is president, will give a luncheon on Friday at 12:30 o'clock at the Casino. Judge Norman L. Jones and Col. A. A. Sprague will speak.

Members of the Elmira College club of Chicago and friends will meet Miss Geneva Armstrong at the Art institute on Saturday at 2 o'clock to study the new art collections. Those desiring to have luncheon are asked to meet at 1 o'clock.

A mothers' day program will be given at the Baron Hirsch Woman's club on Tuesday afternoon.

The social committee of the Eastern Star club will have charge of a luncheon on Tuesday at 12:15 o'clock at the Great Northern hotel. A benefit card party will follow.

The woman's organization of the Chicago Retail Druggists' association will hold its final luncheon and meeting of the season on Tuesday at the Morrison hotel. Mrs. G. W. McDonald is chairman of arrangements.

There will be a meeting of the Illinois Society of Occupational Therapists on Friday at 2 o'clock at the Chicago State hospital, at Dunning.

The annual May breakfast and card party of the Illinois Colony club will be given on Tuesday at 12 o'clock at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Guests will be Mrs. George T. Palmer, president of the I. F. W. C.; Mrs. Edward S. Bailey, president of the Chicago Federation of Women's Organizations; Mrs. Joseph J. Worker, president of the first district, and Mrs. Viola M. Greene, founder of the Hostess club.

S. J. Duncan Clark, J. U. Nicolson (King of the Black Isles), Clara Louise Burnham, and several others will be among the guests at a spring luncheon to be given on Thursday at 12:30 o'clock at the Auditorium hotel by the Friends of American Writers.

Mrs. F. L. Workman of Kenilworth will be hostess for a musical on Tuesday for members of the I Will club.

Members of the second district, I. F. W. C., will have a day's outing at the Dunes next Saturday. Those going will take the train at Woodlawn station at 9:15 o'clock.

NORTH SIDE CLUBS

The Lake View Musical society will hold its annual business meeting, luncheon, and composers' program tomorrow at the Belden hotel. Election of officers at 11 o'clock will be followed by luncheon at 1 o'clock and the concert at 2:30, at which the works of composer members will be given.

The Chicago junior farm and school will be the beneficiary of a card party to be given on Tuesday afternoon at the Belmont hotel. The north side branch, of which Miss Ellen Babcock is president, will have charge.

Mrs. George E. Burns is chairman of arrangements for the annual luncheon of the Edgewater Catholic Woman's club, to be given next Saturday at 12:30 o'clock at the Belden hotel. There will be speakers and a musical program.

The Chicago northwest side council of parent-teacher associations will give a benefit concert on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Humboldt Park commandery hall, 2410 North Kedzie boulevard. The proceeds will be given to the endowment fund of the Illinois council of parent associations, which is being raised by the individual associations throughout the state, so that the work of the organization may be extended.

Installation of officers and annual business will feature the meeting of the Hibbard P. T. A. on Wednesday afternoon.

The annual luncheon of the Albany Park Catholic Woman's club will be held on Saturday at 1 o'clock at the Belden hotel.

A special meeting of the Hoyt School P. T. A. will be held on Thursday at 2 o'clock in the assembly hall. Dr. Rachelle Yarros will speak.

The annual meeting of Les Matinées Françaises will be held at the Surf hotel on Wednesday morning.

The Birchwood Country club will hold its annual card party on Thursday evening for members and their friends. Mrs. F. Patrick Machler is chairman of the committee in charge.

WEST SIDE CLUBS

Members of the Hull House Woman's club will tour the Field museum on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. E. L. Thompson of 129 South Honore street will be hostess on Friday for a social meeting of the West Side W. C. T. U.

The woman's auxiliary of St. Anne's hospital will give a card and bunko party on Thursday at 2 o'clock at the hospital for the benefit of the building fund.

Commemorating the 104th anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, the board of trustees of the Women's and Children's hospital, at 1712 West Adams street, will receive from 2 until 5 o'clock tomorrow.

SUBURBAN CLUBS

Women of the federated clubs of Du Page county will tag the inhabitants of towns in that county next Saturday for the purpose of completing the endowment fund started several years ago whereby a bed might be endowed in the Crippled Children's home at Prince crossing. Mrs. Frank Johnson of Glen Ellyn is in charge.

The annual luncheon of the Neighborhood Civic club will be given on Friday at 1 o'clock at the Oak Park Arms hotel.

Under the auspices of the Franklin Park Woman's club, Rollin B. Organ will speak on "Conservation" on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the school auditorium.

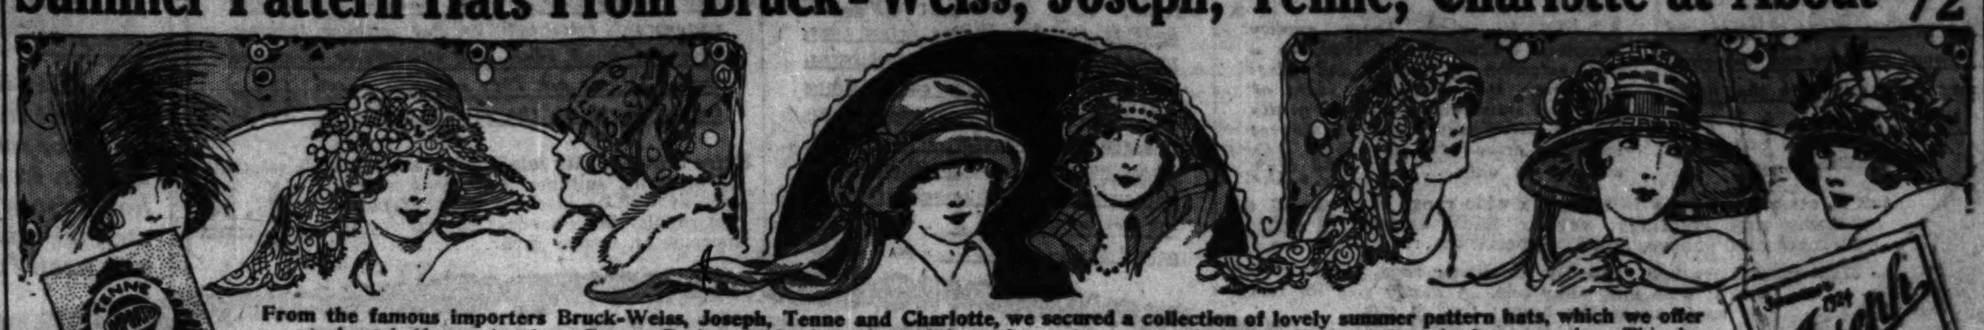
Summer Pattern Hats From Bruck-Weiss, Joseph, Tenne, Charlotte at About ½



From the famous importers Bruck-Weiss, Joseph, Tenne and Charlotte, we secured a collection of lovely summer pattern hats, which we offer at about half actual value. Recent Paris exhibits featuring millinery for early summer show a decided trend to the larger modes. This departure from the prevailing close fitting styles is receiving the approval of many. Here are originals, many other reproductions and adaptations of the most charming creations shown abroad. Canton crepes, satins, taffeta and straw combinations; Maline, lace, leghorn combinations, milans, neapolitans, hair and felt; beautiful picture hats, youthful hats for the girl graduate, hats for the debutante, tailored models, nifty creations for the voyage, sports, afternoon or evening wear. Featuring strongly the popular Metl-Glo and hats with scarfs to match. Values in this group range to $45.00, choice tomorrow at,

Trimmings of flowers, burnt goose, rich oriental, embroidery, ribbon and lace. All the popular new spring shades, including black and white combinations.

51st Anniversary Sale

The Fifty-First Anniversary Sale is augmented tomorrow by the offerings from our purchases from

The Morris Woolf Silk Co.'s (Adams and Wells Sts.)

25th Annual Sale of Surplus Lots at Decisive Reductions

Thousands of Chicago women know from the past the unusual importance of this annual announcement—for the Morris Woolf Silk Co. silks have a reputation that's unequaled for worthfulness—here in all the season's latest weaves, latest colorings, latest styles—and so that there shall be plenty to choose from we've added the surplus lots we've secured recently from many prominent Eastern mills, making this one of the most extraordinary offerings in a decade—a sale that means thousands of yards of the very silks most in demand here for you to choose from at the following very low figures—the many lots comprise:

- Silk Canton Crepes
- Satin de Luxe
- Chiffon Taffetas
- Printed Foulards
- Crepe Satins
- Satin Superior
- Satin Duchesse
- Crepe Failles
- Crepes de Chine
- Radium Silk
- Silk and Wool Crepes
- Krinkle Crepe
- Satin Charmeuse
- Tub Silks
- Sport Satins

In fact, practically every new and wanted weave, plain or fancy, most every wanted color, every wanted printed effect is included; 32, 35 and 40 inches wide. You'll find silks for dresses, blouses, skirts, capes, jacquettes, lingerie. In fact, silks for every purpose. There is such a great variety that we believe somewhere in this vast group is the very silk you are looking for. We bought these silks under price and we are selling them under price on full bolts and in regular stock, their worth could be from $1.50 to $4.00, but the lengths up to twenty yards are indeed practical for every purpose; priced unusually low Monday, in five special groups, at, yard,

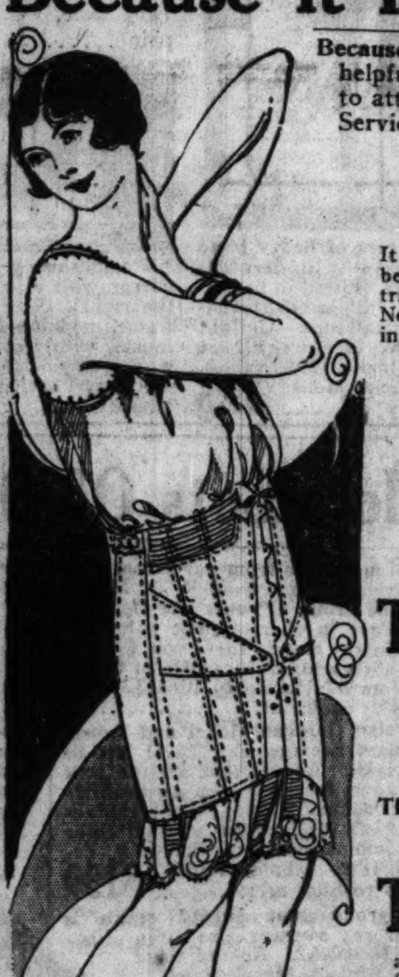
"Nemo Week" Continued Till Saturday Because It Has Been Such a Great Success

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

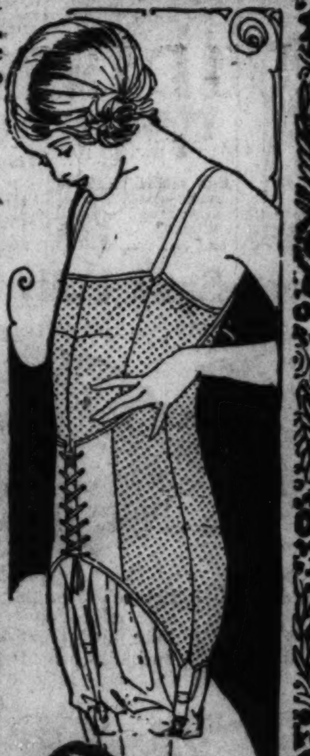


Because "Nemo Week" has proven such a success, we prolong its timely, helpful ideas for another week for the benefit of women who were unable to attend the past week and to further demonstrate our unexcelled Nemo Service.

In the midst of the "Corsetless Era" Nemo Corsets demonstrate more forcibly than ever the vital importance of corsets to fully 85% of the women of Chicago. Nemo Service has not won recognition from the foremost surgeons, physicians, modistes and the best dressed women of the world without good cause.

It is a service that has enabled women by the thousands to overcome illness—to be stronger, healthier, more alert and active, and, above all, to present a trig, trim, neat, fashionable appearance. This is accomplished mainly through the Nemo Wonder-lift Service, Nemo Diafram-Reducing Service, Nemo Self-Reducing Service, and Nemo Circlet.

Our corps of corsetieres is the largest in Chicago—and busiest—because here each corsetiere is carefully trained and must be a graduate of the "N. H. F. I." of New York and continue to study their post-graduate course monthly. They can aid you best of all in selecting the proper Nemo Corset for your individual figure. Why not take advantage of this unexcelled service—for it is at your command without charge.



Nemo Corsets Sizes to 36 $3 to 13.50

The Netherall Combines positive utility, correct figure molding and freedom of movement, besides absolute comfort at all times, and it should be fitted to be thoroughly appreciated. The Netherall "Sonia," made of special air cell mesh, sizes 34, 36 and 38, regular $3.50 values, special for tomorrow at.................. 2.50

The Netherall "Estelle," made of suede cloth, has proven quite a favorite with many women; sizes 34 to 40; always sold for $6, special for Nemo Week at.......................... $3

The Nemo Circlet Whether it is on the shoulder blades, under the arms, or over the diaphragm, excess flesh is never beautiful and can ruin what in every other respect may be a beautiful figure. These vexing accumulations of flesh can be eliminated by wearing the correct circlet brassiere. The one illustrated, style No. 2021, is specially designed to control a large diahragm, long enough to come well down over the low topped corset. Sizes 40 to 54 bust measure, at.................. $2

How to Read Character : : :

By HUGO WESTERBERG

I find Mr. Westerberg's system of character analysis very interesting. At the present time, as is generally known, no system of this kind is sanctioned in scientific circles. At the same time it is widely believed by thinking people — including many orthodox psychologists—that there is something in physiognomy. I, for one, would like to know what that something is.

Mr. Westerberg is a sincere and ingenious workman. His system is simple and definite, his methods clean cut, and his claims modest. I have taken great pleasure in examining and testing his system, and have found it highly suggestive.

I do not find myself at present in a position to pass upon the validity of Mr. Westerberg's method or to criticise it effectively, but I do most heartily recommend it to the reading and consideration of all who are interested in characterology.

D. T. HOWARD,
Assistant Professor of Psychology, Northwestern university.

It may be observed by an open minded reader of literature on the history of man that the authors in general exhibit no great regard for his progress as a higher being. He is usually given credit for gaining a more and more efficient and complete control over his environment, but his own nature is said to be unchanged and remains on the level of the beast at best. Whenever human nature is mentioned it is as the root of everything that is wrong in the world, the main cause of our troubles and unhappiness.

The need is for an understanding of human character simple enough to be made part of an equipment that the average citizen employs in his daily life. The results of work along these lines though have never been accepted as sufficiently correct to warrant their inclusion in our general scheme of existence. That we have constitutional predispositions for one kind of behavior or another seems safe to agree upon because we are the products of hereditary as well as environmental influences.

Success or failure in our careers is, therefore, not wholly outside our control and to an individual the question is now narrowed down to discovering exactly what legacy he has received from his ancestors. For this end the first necessity is an analysis of those mental, physical and moral traits the possession of which decide his ability to adjust himself to his environment.

Taking a Short Cut.

Most of us, as we gather experiences in practical life, come to know fairly well our strength and our weakness in comparison with our fellow men. We learn through often painful contacts with them that we are not equals in the meaning that we have the same abilities to cope with difficulties arising in our path. When we notice others pass us on the road, we understand that it is most the time because they have greater energy, keener foresight, and more courage. In other cases we say to ourselves that we are just as good and if we had known more about our own possibilities and capacities we could have done better.

What we want is a short cut to the knowledge of human nature. We want to acquire this knowledge before we tackle the big job of using our resources efficiently.

It is reasonable to expect that the same way that has been used in the development of other sciences before they had reached a state of maturity would do the work here. By observation and tentative interpretation of signs the factors governing a situation may be disclosed. On a later stage the accurate definitions and methods of measurement can be worked out that permit practical applications having a higher degree of certainty as to results. Various tests of the general intellect as well as certain types of trade tests indicate what may be accomplished when to simple every day experience are added facts discovered through experiments under controlled conditions.

Character Traits and Symptoms.

That time is probably not far away when the necessary investigations and experiments at present only humbly beginning will be carried out on a large enough scale to justify hopes of reaching the goal, a scientific interpretation of human character.

In the search of signs by means of which to read the presence or absence of traits important for some purpose, students of human nature have made a number of keen observations about behavior. The next step to find a correlation between a character trait and a visible symptom thereof, however, led to a number of the most amazing statements not possible of verification by any one familiar with even the rudiments of modern physiology.

Phrenology seems acceptable only by disregarding the ordinary meaning of words and facts and the same is the case to some degree with physiognomy as usually presented. But the work done has not all been in vain. If we dig into the mess of incomprehensible language used and try to get at the few basic facts underlying a fanciful structure, we find them sound and supported by evidence within the reach of all of us, if we care to try for it. Academic psychologists have not done this, probably repelled by the unscientific methods and commercial attitude exhibited by professional character analysts in general.

Man's Industrial Value.

It is the intention of the writer to describe this and following articles a new system for industrial valuation of man by reading his character at a glance.

Industrial valuation of man means a valuation of man for the working purposes. There are certain qualities that directly affect a man's ability and willingness to labor in one field or another. By paying attention especially to this, the problem of character study is much simplified. An understanding of others that are of importance mainly in his personal affairs or in social intercourse will follow naturally.

An observation of the behavior of an individual during a period of time confirms the idea that it only partly depends on outside conditions and mainly on something in his makeup which we in a general way refer to as human nature. We further notice that the behavior of one human being differs strikingly from that of another under similar circumstances. From this we infer that there are essential differences in the distribution of human characteristics amongst individuals. We find also without having studied the subject in detail that we get a general impression of the nature of these differences, from the looks of people. See figures 1, 2, 3, and 4. In view of the fact that these heads contain only the bald outline of the features in black and white, it is clear that the form and proportion of these convey to us information about character traits that fit or unfit a person for a certain station in the business world.

Start with the Ameba.

The first step in devising a system for industrial valuation of man was to analyze human traits of various kinds for the purpose of finding some way to group them according to the importance of the part which these traits play in controlling the existence of an individual worker. The second step was to investigate the possibilities of distinguishing the essential traits at sight in order to make the system of practical use in daily life.

By disregarding the spiritual powers and purposes of man, which, of course, is permissible in the limited and strictly utilitarian point of view taken here, he may be said to consist of a number of desires and various mechanical equipment to satisfy them.

15. Forehead narrow........
16. Jaws narrow........

Man as he now exists is the most complicated and highly specialized form of life we know of, and a survey of his characteristics is made easier by studying a representative of the simplest kind of animal life, the ameba. While a human being is made up of millions of biological units all working together as a whole, the ameba is a free living unit. A comparison between the lives of the two, however, shows that they have the same main functions and experiences, and this helps us to organize our knowledge of human beings. We are enabled to separate essential and unessential phases of behavior.

It's Single Celled.

The ameba, a speck of protoplasm, irregular in form and microscopic in size, is actuated only by a desire for food. It has no permanent legs, but forms them when needed for moving about by extending parts of the body. To guide it on its way it sticks out some other part and with this feeling member makes contact with various particles and matter. Some suitable for food it approaches, and, lacking a mouth, takes into the body at any place and digests later, expelling the waste. From other matter it will retreat as if from danger. By chance or intentionally it may be crushed, when its life is destroyed. In short, it has a motive, controls its movements, exercises choice, and is exposed to injury and death, which in an elementary way corresponds to the main lines of man's conduct of himself amongst his environment.

The evolution of man from this representative type of single celled animals means that temporary equipment for locomotion, for getting information, for choice of action, and for self-protection has been developed and made permanent. Meanwhile to the original driving power, the desire for food, have been added auxiliary desires expressed by the inherent qualities of these equipments. On the presence of differences in the mechanical arrangement of the highly specialized and complex equipment depend further a number of other qualities which may be spoken of as personality traits. These differ from the desires in that they have no direct actuating force, but are important mainly because they decide the conditions under which an individual is capable of operating in his environments.

At a Glance.

The basic principle followed in reading character at a glance—both desires and personality traits—is that the ownership of a special tool implies the wish and ability to use it for the class of work it is fit for. If we find a man in possession of a set of carpenter's tools we know he works in wood, while if he has a blacksmith's outfit he will be working in metal. When some one has provided himself with a garden spade he does not as a matter of fact intend to dig a ship canal, which, however, might be the case if he operates a steam shovel.

Looking at the mechanical equipment for satisfying our desires, we may, therefore, reasonably expect to learn something about the relative strength and direction of each tendency involved in deciding our conduct. An industrial valuation of man, as said before, means the valuation of man for working purposes. The part human nature plays in his career can be best judged by making three different valuations grading his physical, intellectual, and moral traits separately. The physical valuation is made by interpreting facial features pertaining to desires; the intellectual valuation is made by estimating at sight the kind of thinking as a means to satisfy the desires a man is capable of. The moral valuation, which is an attempt to size up the degree of trustworthiness an individual has reached, is based on indications of the state of balance between desires and equipment for satisfying them.

When the principles for reading character traits indicated above are worked out it will be found that in the three standard types shown below are embodied all essential traits of human nature. The development of an individual goes on from the touch memory or baby type toward the sight memory type, in which we recognize the characteristics of the perfect grown up person. Few individuals complete the process, while most of us stop growing with regard to one or more features at some earlier stage. To make an analysis according to this system is simple. Mark the features of a person as they are found on one or another of the figures. The meaning of various shapes will be given in the next installment. See figures 5, 6, and 7.

What Women Are Doing

Women are serving today in nearly every branch of the merchant marine service.

It is claimed that there is less serious diseases among red headed woman than among women with dark hair.

Miss Vera Bloom, daughter of Congressman Bloom of New York, although only 19, has recently published her "Life of Empress Eugenie."

Miss Carrie Foster of New York has been in the employ of the Metropolitan Insurance company continuously for the last forty-seven years.

Single girls in New Guinea let their hair hang about their shoulders in all its glory, but immediately after marriage must have it bbobed.

Miss Florence Sterling, treasurer of one of the largest oil corporations in the south, is being considered as a candidate for mayor in Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Elise M. Stotter of Sicklerville, N. J., was granted a divorce because her husband, a church sexton, made her dig graves and ring the church bell.

Though she is nearly 90 years of age, Mrs. John J. Hallenbeck of Garden City, L. I., was arrested for violating the automobile speed laws in Miami, Fla.

Mrs. John W. Hallam is Pennsylvania's first woman court tipstaff, having been appointed recently to act in that capacity in the courts of Washington county.

Health Restored by Radium

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health-giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and disease.

Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radio-active energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissues to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of blood, thus removing congestion, which is the real cause of most disease.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you, we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you a cent if it fails to give satisfactory results. This offer is open to any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try the appliance at our risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 1490 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches Stress This as Mother's Day in Services

By the Rev. W. B. Norton

MOTHER'S day will be widely observed today in the churches. While the Roman Catholic churches do not vary their services in accordance with customs springing out of sentiment or current events, the month of May is regarded in special veneration as the month of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the mother of our Lord. In this there is recognition of one mother who is the pattern of all mothers.

In the old people's homes and institutions where there are mothers the day will be remembered. In the Euclid Avenue Methodist Episcopal church the youngest mother will present a bouquet to the oldest mother in the membership. In many churches the children will present flowers to the mothers. There are in several churches pipe organs which have been dedicated to mothers, having the names engraved on them, and flowers will be presented in their memory.

One pastor will distribute copies of Whistler's painting, "My Mother," and will preach on the subject, "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle Rules the World."

The presbytery of Chicago has set apart Mother's day to ask the churches and friends of the Presbyterian Home for the Aged, located on Emerson road, west of Evanston, to make special offerings for its maintenance. The treasurer is Frank R. Elliott, 1309 Chicago Temple building.

His Eminence Cardinal Mundelein will be Chicago's guest today. His picture will appear in other pages of THE TRIBUNE, and the news events of today will be recorded in detail. Cardinal Mundelein will be received not only by the members of the Roman Catholic church, of which he is the distinguished head in the Chicago archdiocese and one of a few most highly honored in America, but he will be received by Protestants, Jews, and others as a great citizen and a leader who has achieved lasting results for good affecting the entire community.

Cardinal Mundelein's rise from humble parentage to a place where he is so highly honored for scholarship, literary distinction, and practical accomplishments in social relief and welfare, is so romantic and spectacular that it fires the imagination. His efficiency in promoting Catholic charities in behalf of the city's poor benefits every person in the city, Catholic or non-Catholic. His success in gaining large offerings for the distressed of Europe has reacted on every similar effort, and has added immeasurably to the world's total of happiness. Cardinal Mundelein has shown his Americanism by insisting upon instruction in the English language in parochial schools among populations speaking foreign tongues. He first led in the building of the Quigley Preparatory school, and now has his heart on the building of a great institution for the education of priests at Area, Ill.

But Cardinal Mundelein might have achieved much without winning the enthusiastic admiration of Chicago. He has won such admiration, amounting in the case of many thousands to real affection, by reason of his personal qualities of purity, simplicity, unselfishness, and consecration to his work.

Hospital day tomorrow, commemorating the anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, is being celebrated throughout the United States by all hospitals. Wesley Memorial hospital, Dearborn and 25th streets, is inviting the public to a reception to be held from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, on the occasion of which its laboratories, X-ray departments, and all its other numerous services and equipments will be open for examination and visit.

Attention is being called to the death of Dr. Marian Lawrance, universally recognized as the greatest Sunday school leader in the world. It occurred on May 1 at Portland, Ore., the result of an attack of pneumonia. His home was in Chicago, and the funeral service was held at 510 Wellington avenue a few days ago, burial being at Toledo, O.

Dr. Lawrance first became known as a Sunday school leader in the '80s, and was for ten years general secretary of the Ohio State Sunday School association. He then became general secretary of the International Sunday School association. In 1920 he was retired for life on full salary and was made consulting general secretary, which position he held at the time of his death.

He was an outstanding figure in the World's Sunday School association, taking an active part in the conventions at London, Jerusalem, Rome, Zurich and Tokio, and was planning to attend the coming world's convention in Glasgow, Scotland, in June, 1924. His success was unique and his books on Sunday school work have a wide circulation and have been translated into many foreign languages. His loss to the Sunday school world is keenly felt.

THE REV. RAYMOND McDONALD HUSTON, D. D.

Dr. Huston is the new pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Evanston. He preached there last Sunday for the first time. He succeeds, after a year of interim, the Rev. A. S. C. Clarke, D. D., who resigned after having served the church as pastor for sixteen years. Dr. Huston comes to Evanston from the pastorate of the Claeson Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn, N. Y. He is a graduate of Wooster college, Ohio, class of 1900, and of McCormick Theological school, Chicago, class of 1903. For six years he was pastor of Trumbull Avenue church, Detroit, before going to Brooklyn, where he has served five years.

Dr. T. Rhondda Williams of England, famous preacher and labor leader, bearing letters of introduction from Premier MacDonald will speak before the Sunday Evening club tonight at 8 o'clock. His subject has not yet been announced, but it is understood that he will touch on the mission of labor element, both in Great Britain and America, in its duty to the peace and good will of the world. When speaking at colleges and universities in this country, Dr. Williams will bear directly on certain aspects which Premier MacDonald has instructed him to clarify. He is, in other words, an emissary of Britain's new Labor prime minister.

Dr. Williams first became famous through his ministry at Dowlais, Wales, where he began to preach at the age of 20, after having been ordained in the Congregationalist denomination. Since then he has held important pastorates in England, and while at Bradford in Yorkshire his audences were so large that he was obliged to hold services in the town hall, seating 4,000.

He has always taken a prominent part in public life and in 1918 stood for parliament as Labor candidate, in opposition to Sir Eric Geddes.

He is to deliver two addresses at the First Congregational church in Washington, the church attended by President Coolidge.

The music program by the choir of 100 will be in the nature of a memoriam to Gustav Holmquist, who died a a year ago, after having been connected with the Sunday Evening club choir for many years. The quartet will sing "There Is No Death" and the choir will give a number of Mr. Holmquist's favorite selections.

Clifford W. Barnes will give the informal Bible talk at 7 o'clock on the subject, "What Jesus Stood For." The Imperial male quartet will sing at this meeting.

W. P. Blessing has been in charge of the Westminster Press, the Chicago depository, under the Presbyterian board, for twenty-four years. This record together with his previous experience with the United Brethren publishing house in Dayton, O., gives him the background for establishing a new book service for clergymen of all denominations. He is preparing to serve them in the capacity of a real religious book store especially featuring editions of leading publishers in England and America.

In harmony with the generally observed Mother's day, the International Council of Religious Eudcation and the Young Woman's Christian association have designated this week, beginning today, Mother and Daughter week. The general theme is "Gift Bringers All." Today, "Mother's Gifts"; tomorrow, "The Gift of Fellowship"; Tuesday, "The Gift of Work"; Wednesday, "The Gift of Citizenship"; Thursday, "Gifts of Wisdom"; Friday, "Gift Bringers, Mothers and Daughters," providing wherever possible for a mother and daughter banquet; Saturday, "The Gift of Loving Companionship"; Sunday, May 18, Daughters' day, "Responsibility to the Future—A Gift."

The rectory of the Chruch of the Holy Nativity, Beverly Hills, has been sold as a first step in a new building program. The rector, the Rev. Morton C. Stone, now lives at 1861 West 95th street.

At the Millard Avenue Congregational church the Rev. James Watson, pastor, this morning's subject will be "Mother's Day," and this evening there will be a musical program entitled "Children of Many Lands." Next Sunday morning Dr. C. C. Merrill, state superintendent of the conference of Congregational churches, will preach, and in the evening the pastor will speak on "Chickie."

A Mother's day program will be broadcast this evening at 8:30 from station WMAQ.

A two weeks' mission by the Oblate Fathers, to be given at Precious Blood church, Western avenue and Congress street, opens today at the 11:15 o'clock mass. The first week will be for women, the second for men.

The Episcopal Church of the Redeemer at Elgin, Ill., of which the Rev. W. H. Ziegler is rector, is planning to celebrate its seventieth anniversary four years hence by improving its property at an expense of $15,000.

Chicago Lutherans of the United Lutheran church in America, Illinois synod, are preparing for a series of meetings to be held in the Holy Trinity church, Maple square and Addison street, the Rev. J. A. Leas, pastor. A Lutheran Brotherhood convention will be held on Monday and Tuesday, May 19 and 20. The synod will begin its sessions on Tuesday evening with a sermon by the Rev. L. J. Powell of Washington, Ill. On Thursday evening, May 22, several young men will be ordained to the ministry. The Rev. J. C. Kauffman, D. D., of Milledgeville, Ill., will preach the sermon.

Lutheran women will be interested in the baccalaureate sermon preached today at 3 p. m. at Maywood commons. Wednesday will be seminary day at 3 and commencement at 8 p. m., at the commons. Next Tuesday to Thursday the Lutheran woman's synodical convention will be held at Washington Ill. On next Saturday there will be a meeting of the Woman's Missionary society at the Edgewater Beach hotel at 2 p. m., with Mrs. E. C. Cronk as the speaker.

Memorial Sunday is May 25, and preparations are being made in several churches to honor the soldiers. At the Diversey Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church members of Lyons post No. 9, Grand Army of the Republic, will be guests in the morning.

The First United Presbyterian church at Congress street and Central Park avenue, the Rev. Edward A. Daum, pastor, has announced its intention of selling its church property and moving to a new location in Oak Park.

The Rev. Louis T. Foreman, who has been engaged in editorial work for several years in connection with the Church Publishing house, 2800 West Chicago avenue, has been elected executive secretary of the Baptist Old People's home, Maywood, Ill. The territory of the home includes five states. There is a long waiting list of old people, for whom new buildings are required. The Rev. Mr. Foreman is a graduate of the University of Chicago and of the divinity school, and held pastorates in Chicago and elsewhere before taking up editorial work.

A camp for young people's conferences, summer outings for ministers, returned missionaries, and Christian workers, and for the children of the various families, under the auspices of the Congregational church, is provided for in Tower Hill camp on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. The ground was donated by the late E. K. Warren of Three Oaks, Mich., noted in the international Sunday school field. The Congregational Illinois state conference and the Chicago City Missionary society are equipping the camp. Certain churches are raising money to send delegates to the young people's conference. On the general matters of the camp the Rev. Harmon O. Johnson, 19 South La Salle street, may be addressed.

St. James Methodist Episcol church, at 46th street and Ellis avenue, was recently destroyed by fire, and it has been decided it is to be rebuilt on a much larger scale on the same location. At the home of the president of the board of trustees, A. W. Harris of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, a representation of the Oakland Methodist church at Langley and Oakwood boulevard, met the trustees of St. James, and a merger of the two churches was consummated. The plans for a complete equipment, including the community house which St. James was in the act of erecting when the fire stopped the work, has now been determined on at a cost of between $400,000 and $500,000. The amount of insurance on the building which was destroyed was $107,000. It is expected that the work of rebuilding will go on at once.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published, $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

With One Exception.

A preacher at the close of one of his sermons said: "Let all in the house who are paying their debts stand up."

"Every man, woman, and child, with one exception, rose to their feet.

The preacher seated them and said: "Now let every man not paying his debts stand up."

The exception, a careworn, hungry looking individual, clothed in last summer's suit, slowly assumed a perpendicular position.

"How is it, my friend," asked the minister, "that you are the only one not able to meet your obligations?"

"I run a newspaper," he answered meekly, "and the brethren here who stood up are my subscribers, and——"

J. W.

Coming in Handy.

First Train Passenger—Say, how'd that chap succeed in getting that window open?

Second Ditto—Not so loud—I know him. He's a reformed burglar, you see.

Probably Not.

"There's one consolation about the present drama."

"And what's that?"

"When I get old and am a grandmother I don't believe my grandchildren will be able to take me to a play that will shock me." D. P.

One of the Family.

Margaret was maid of all work in the Bradley family, the members of which were given to quarreling. One morning Margaret sought her mistress and tendered her resignation. Mrs. Bradley was distressed and loath to part with so excellent a servant.

"And are you really going to leave us, Margaret?" she asked sadly. "What is the matter? Haven't we always treated you as one of the family?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the girl, "an' I've stood it as long as I'm goin' to, ma'am." L. F.

Such a Mistake.

He—Can't I have just one teeny weeny little kiss?

She—O, Jimmy, you have such moderate tastes! T. R.

He'd Noticed It.

Hubby—Yes, Mary, it's a way I seem to have when it gets anywhere near your birthday.

For Mothers' Day

By Wilbur D. Nesbit.

Would there were a song to sing
Sweeter far than anything,
For my mother—
Gentle strains, all soft and low,
Throbbing as they come and go,
All my steady faith to show
In my mother.

I would have the way made fair,
With no shadow of a care,
For my mother;
Blossom-spangled fields outspread,
So that where her pathway led
She would through all beauty tread—
My own mother.

Give me skies of sunniest blue,
Memories that joys renew,
For my mother;
Aye, the fairest stars above,
And the very deepest love—
All that joy is fashioned of
For my mother.

If 'twere given me to pay
All my debt upon this day
To my mother,
All that's meant to cheer and bless
In God's store of happiness
I would heap high, I confess,
For my mother.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Add Horrors of War.

My most embarrassing moment came when I was overseas, in 1919. I was storekeeper at a quartermaster supply depot.

The storekeeper of each warehouse had a rustic little office of his own. One cold rainy morning in January I was toasting some bread on the top of my little stove, and eating some I had already toasted. My hands were sticky from the issue jam which I had alloted myself; the little room was quite smoky from the burnt crumbs; several assistants were lounging about; last but not least, the sectional commander, a captain, was sleeping on my bunk.

Suddenly the door opened, and in stalked the colonel of the camp, the depot quartermaster, followed by an inspecting major, who came to look over my records.

Calling "Attention" and trying to appear as if everything were just as it should be, I wiped my sticky hands on my breeches, and produced the warehouse books. The bread I had in my hand I had tossed under my desk.

The captain had been aroused by one of the others, only to stand at "Attention" several minutes late. Perhaps this, too was his most embarrassing moment. He fared the worst of all, being confined to the limits of the camp for thirty days. C. M. B.

Causing Much Mirth.

I am a telephone operator at a furniture manufacturing plant and my desk is situated directly in front of a wicket the size of a small window. Outside of this wicket is a lobby containing two benches, the back of one facing my window.

One day I was to call one of our employés, and as I looked out of my wicket, I could just see what I thought was the back of his head. I called to him several times and tried to attract his attention. He seemed not to heed my calls so I took a long stick, poked it through the wicket and gave his head a good shove, thinking, "This ought to make him look," when to my embarrassment I looked into the eyes of an indignant salesman. He looked at me as if I was trying to murder him.

I could hardly get my breath long enough to say "Excuse me," and I rushed from the room. M. J. P.

Nature—
The Supreme Cosmetician

Nature is the artist of the ages. She paints in colors of matchless beauty. Her masterpiece is youth.

Man cannot hope to surpass her art. For the roseleaf loveliness of a girlish cheek, a bizarre mask of a complexion must always be a poor makeshift.

Yet, happily for the desire feminine to remain forever young, there are toilet requisites which assist Nature in bringing out your true, natural beauty!

Thus subtly do Luxor Requisites aid Nature. Matching the shade of the blood glowing through the skin, Luxor Rouge Parfait, in any light, brings forth the natural, delicate flush of health. The feathery, clinging softness of Luxor Complexion Powder adds that even, velvety texture, so needlessly the despair of middle age.

If you have not yet discovered Luxor, ask today at your drug or department store or beauty shop! See also the Luxor creams, perfumes, and specialties.

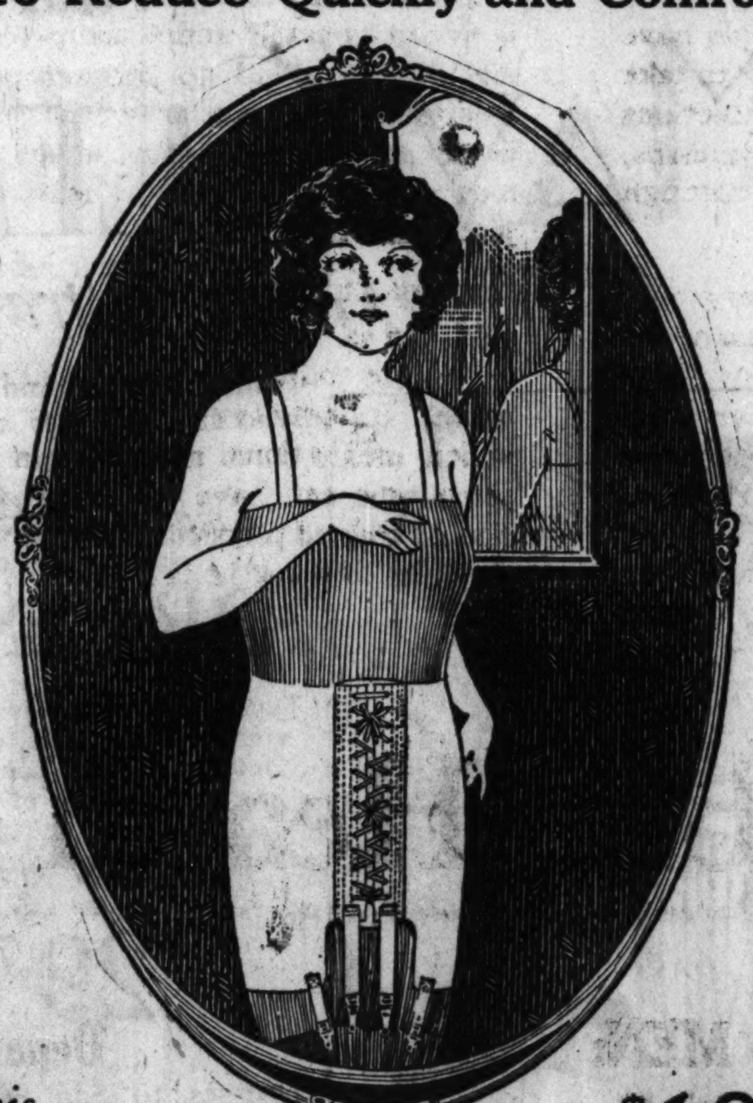
How to Reduce Quickly and Comfortably



In this Perfected Justrite Para-Rubber Girdle

$10.00
Flesh tint rubber silk brocade

You will look reduced at first
And really be reduced daily

Just as soon as you put on this Perfected Para-Rubber Girdle, you will see and feel that the skill of "Justrite" designers has given you straight, flat lines. At first the Girdle does it, but a little later this grace of line becomes really yours, because the Girdle actually reduces you. The more constantly you wear it, the more quickly will you become slender.

Look for the "Perfected" Features

The material is Improved "Veneer" Rubber guaranteed by the U. S. Rubber Company. The outside is of delicate flesh tint, but the inside, next to the body, is natural rubber without dye. The Girdle is front lacing, so that it may be adjusted easily at the diaphragm or abdomen, or both, as the reducing process continues. The wide tongue under the lacing protects the flesh and insures complete closure of the Girdle which is important to its reducing effect. The "Justrite" Para-Rubber Girdle is guaranteed by its makers.

WOMEN WITH IDEALS
want a paper with ideals. Therefore they read THE TRIBUNE —every morning.

"Something Snapped in His Brain" —He Had a "Social" Disease

"Dropped on the street from a stroke of paralysis," said the newspapers.

"The result of overwork," said some of his friends.

"Too much worry," said others.

" 'Social' disease," said the doctors.

The doctors were right. A venereal infection had made the walls of his arteries so brittle that they couldn't stand the blood pressure—they broke and he is now a helpless invalid when he ought to be at the very peak of health and vigor.

He thought that he had been cured, but he had not taken the proper treatment long enough to banish the disease, so it kept on at its insidious work of destroying his body. It won out because he deceived himself about his condition.

Hundreds of thousands of people have suffered the penalty of neglecting to take proper treatment for venereal infections and to keep it up until skilled physicians, after careful observation and thorough tests, pronounced them cured.

These people are found in every condition of misery—many are insane or idiotic, many others are hobbling about with locomotor ataxia, or are crippled with paralysis. Countless numbers are afflicted with painful forms of rheumatism, while others have become blind or disfigured or are suffering from serious diseases of the genito-urinary organs, from the same cause—"social" diseases. Many of them have carried their infection to wives or children. Thousands of innocent people have contracted these diseases from accidental contact with victims or with articles used by infected persons.

If you have acquired one of these scourges in whose trail there is such an appalling number of human wrecks and to which 250,000 or 300,000 deaths are traceable yearly—what are you going to do about it?

You can't dodge the fact that you have run into trouble that needs correction. If you don't get the best of it, it will get the best of you. Any doctor will tell you so, and any doctor will tell you also that "social" diseases can be cured.

There is only one thing to do—and that is to put yourself under competent medical direction and go through with the treatment until you are cured. If there is any doubt in your mind about the true nature of your disease at least find out just what the trouble is.

The Public Health Institute was organized and is conducted to give treatment to people suffering from venereal diseases. Its services are offered to you—which means that at a very small expense, you can have the personal attention of trained physicians who give treatment by the methods which have been found most successful in fighting these diseases.

The Institute has every facility for giving each case individual attention and the fees are not only small, but the same to all. No patient pays more than another for the same service.

If you have any false modesty which makes you hesitate about obtaining the help you need, remember that no matter how you feel about it, sooner or later you will have to consult a doctor. These diseases, if untreated, always grow worse. Delay, therefore, means that your case will become much more serious and necessitate a longer course of treatment.

Already thousands of men and women have come here in all stages of these diseases and have been restored to health. There is no reason to believe that this service will not do for you what it has done for them.

Women and Children

A special department for women and children, with women assisting as nurses and attendants, is located at 72 East Randolph Street. Every facility is provided here for effective treatment and the utmost privacy with the highest degree of comfort is assured.

With such service as this available, no one who needs treatment should delay. "Social" diseases can be cured.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A PERMANENT $10,000 JOB IS LOOKING FOR THE MAN.

Nearly 100 dominant SALESMEN selling in IDEA on ONE CALL to president of ALL organizations throughout the entire country carry proof that our INDUSTRIAL SERVICE plans are bringing PROFITS TO about 22,000 well known concerns. This assures your profits.

YOU may join these $10,000 a year SALESMEN if your actual selling experience qualifies you.

We stop PREVENTABLE HUMAN ELEMENT LOSSES in business by a SIMPLE, AUTOMATIC, INEXPENSIVE, USABLE PLAN. Contracts average over $500. We pay large straight commission and bonus on quota basis with weekly settlements. Strict territory assignment. No drawing account. We want only men who know their ability. Prefer men now employed earning about $5,000 incomes from straight commission work, and not now broke financially. This means taking up a life's work. Many men with us over five years.

Individual inside and field training given with adequate compensation while learning this business. Cities worked until all business concerns interviewed. Every possible home office co-operation.

No consideration given ordinary salesmen. We want TWO of the highest type to complete National Organization quota. Every opportunity to advance to inside executive positions is offered the A1 salesman. Promotions depend almost entirely on a man's SELLING RECORD in the field. No favoritism. Present executives were so selected.

Are you willing to pay the price in wholehearted work for a $10,000 income the first year in the most clean cut, honest, service giving organization in the country? If so, write us, say who you are, where you worked, how much you have made on straight commission, and your age.

Write J. [illegible] MOORE, Director of Personnel, 1555 E. Superior-st., Chicago. Telephone Superior 0555.

AFTER YOU

get tired going around and listening to a lot of bunk and hot air about making lots of money easy—if you want to get down to real business and are willing to work hard when you can earn from $100 to $200 a week, drop in and see me. I can prove to you that my good men are all averaging more than $100 a week. Some better than $500. Real estate experience is not essential if you are a salesman and a hustler. Men 25 yrs. to 45 yrs. of age given preference. Call 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

A Better and Bigger Opportunity for Salesmen.

We have just opened two new subdivisions, located on and adjoining the Main-st. station.

We have additional property to open in same locality as rapidly as these are sold out.

Our organization works in perfect harmony at all times.

Every member is ready at all times to help you in making sales.

Experienced subdivision salesmen can make a very profitable and valuable connection with us at this time.

We will teach a few men of ability, not experienced in real estate salesmanship, the proper method of subdivision selling, by which you can make more money than any similar sales work.

APPLY 9 A. M. TO 9 P. M.

IRA D. MALBROUGH,
Director of Sales,
NORTHWESTERN EXTENSION REALTY CO.,
29 S. La Salle-st.,
Room 648.

A LIVE SALES ORGANIZATION

is expanding, and has openings for a few high grade representatives.

It is possible with this organization to reach an earning capacity of $500 or more per week within a short time.

Real estate experience, while desired, is not essential. We teach you.

We have acquired several choice subdivisions along the North Shore. Our subdivision at Fort Sheridan will open soon. Our Niles Center subdivisions are selling fast. We will also open several more choice subdivisions in the Niles Center district, located along the new L extension.

This will be the best year Chicago has ever known in real estate subdivision development.

We make special and attractive arrangements with those who have automobiles.

See our Sales Employment Department.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

A million dollar corporation, in business 27 years, wants a couple of real high grade salesmen to work out of their local branch office. We are manufacturers and marketing a nationally advertised mechanical device, which merchandises a highly nutritious food product, on which millions of dollars was expended last year. An exceptionally large volume of our business is done on leads furnished the men in the field. The men we want must range from 26 to 50 years of age, must possess the two fisted fighting spirit of the real salesman, and while previous sales experience is not necessary, men who have come to us from such lines as registers, safes, filing stations, adding machines, insurance, etc., have done exceedingly well. This is not stock, bonds, nor real estate. Our average commission exceeds $150. We will train you and guarantee you commission on all sales in your territory. If you can qualify and are looking for a profitable, permanent connection, with a future, see Mr. Nelson, 108 N. Franklin-st., Monday only, from 11 to 12 and 2 to 4.

A WEEKLY INCOME of from $50 TO $75 PER WEEK

CAN YOU MEET PEOPLE?

We are in a position to take on several new salesmen. Previous sales experience either in investment or insurance lines would be an asset but is not essential. We present in an entirely new manner—to men in business as well as to the average wage earner—a thrift program, which allows him to save for himself in the future through monthly deposits in the Illinois Merchants Trust Company, and at the same time to provide for the future welfare of his business or his family if he should die. The supply of prospects is unlimited, for there is no one who cannot save at least a few dollars a month under our plan.

This is a dignified, profitable, permanent connection for the right man. In Chicago it is identified with one of the largest financial institutions in America, and you need not fear to call back to see your clients. The fact that we already have quite a large number of depositors in Chicago alone shows its appeal. We will work with you and give you expert sales instruction, necessary to present the proposal effectively. Let us explain our plan and show you what some of our men are doing with it each week and you can judge for yourself the opportunity it holds for you.

APPOINTMENT BY PHONE ONLY.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN, COME AND LET ME EXPLAIN MY $200 A WEEK PLAN.

I will show you how and why I can afford to offer you such an extraordinary opportunity to make money. My spectacular advertising campaign, which is just beginning, makes it possible. I am Chicago's largest subdivider. A big, successful organization is behind you. Luxurious automobiles are at your disposal. It's the help I give my salesmen that makes them the best paid men in Chicago. I am selling millions of dollars of property in the shadow of the great Ford Plant in the heart of the Ford-Calumet Harbor District. Another big Ford plant is now being built. My salesmen are now selling seven out of every ten prospects they take to my property. Put yourself in their place. Do you want to make money like that? Come and see me personally.

G. FRANK CROISSANT,
14th floor Lake View Bldg.,
116 South Michigan-av.

SALESMAN—BY OLD STRONG LIFE INsurance company from New York. We will have a school where the best methods to sell life insurance will be taught for three weeks in July. Come with us now and receive your preliminary training before school starts. No limit to earnings while in preliminary training, in school or afterwards. If you are not getting the money you feel you are capable of earning, if you are dissatisfied with your present business, profession or position, if you want to get into the life insurance business where men are making big money today, if you want to sell an article that is bought by every man in America who is interested in the future of his family and himself, in short, if you are really and truly looking for an opportunity to better your condition, to make more money so that you may have all the necessities and some of the luxuries of life, this is the most unusual proposition ever offered in Chicago by a real old, progressive life insurance company. SALESMEN.

Somewhere in Chicago is a real man that is a salesman or wants to be a salesman, a man that when he is invited to a home on a real lead [not a phone book lead] can go and talk intelligently. This is what you have back of you:

A firm that has 12 subdivisions.
A firm with three new subdivisions to open.
A firm that builds homes.
An advertising campaign that no other firm has ever attempted, and all of it good clean advertising.

You do not need experience in our line, as

TO YOUNG COLLEGE WOMEN DESIROUS TO SUCCEED.

Do you want very much to succeed? Then you must learn the methods of success from association with those who have succeeded.

An organization which is one of the outstanding successes in its field requires the services of several young women of high intelligence, pleasing personality, and of outstanding industry.

Besides the high character of the work you would do, we can offer you the association of other young women of refinement and an environment that is more professional than commercial.

The earnings of young women in this department are about $25 a week to start. This amount is increased to $35 after a short length of time and when expertness is attained $40 a week is the average compensation.

Previous experience is not necessary, as we give each employe adequate training.

Write us a letter, giving your age, address, phone number, whether or not you live at home, and any other information you may care to give.

Address P X 519, Tribune.

WOMEN. LIVING COSTS ARE HIGH.

Are you making as much money as you think you are worth? If not, I would like to talk to you for 10 minutes and explain how you can add any amount to your income. If you are employed you can keep your present position, as this work will not interfere. Housewives or women employed can take this up. If you are interested, come in and have a personal interview.

SEE THE MANAGER.

WANTED

WOMEN TO LEARN A BUSINESS OF HAPPINESS.

The happiest occupation in the world is showing women how to improve their appearance. It brings happiness to them—untold happiness. It brings satisfaction and fortune to you.

You can learn this business of happiness in a few weeks of fascinating work. First we teach you how to improve your own personal appearance. That brings happiness to you. Then you learn how to improve the appearance of others. That brings happiness to them.

Complete course in Facial and Scalp Treatment, Shampooing, Manicuring, Marcel, Water and Permanent Waving, Hairdressing, Electrolysis. Attractive surroundings. Easy terms.

The time is past when women have to be contented with meager earnings just because they are women. In almost any point of the map we have Marinello Shop Owners earning from $3,000 to $20,000 a year in a highly respected calling. More salaried positions are open for trained Marinello graduates than we can fill.

Right now decide to look into this business of happiness. It is the opportunity of a lifetime. Write for catalogue and complete booklet, or Phone Superior 8741.

Hotel SHERWIN

SWEPT BY LAKE BREEZES.
ON LAKE MICHIGAN AT SHERWIN-AV.

The new Hotel Sherwin, located on Lake Michigan at the foot of Sherwin-av., in exclusive Rogers Park, one block from Sheridan-road motor busses and two blocks from the elevated express lines at Jarvis station, affords the last word in modern apartment hotel construction and equipment.

The apartments and rooms offer all of the distinguishing features of a private home—comfort, dignity, and individuality surrounded by all of the conveniences of a high grade hotel. The Sherwin contains very desirable apartments, all with a view of the lake, consisting of Living Room with in-a-door bed; Dining Room; Kitchen; Glass Tiled Bathroom; very spacious closets with built-in wardrobes; in-door, full length mirrors; circulating refrigeration. Also other most attractive and larger apartments with bedrooms, and single guest rooms. Rates are very moderate and include complete hotel service.

Marine Dining Room Now Operating.

The Marine Dining Room opening on to Morningside Terrace, overlooking the lake, food shop, coffee shop, soda fountain, and other shops catering to home wants, offer convenient and unexcelled services to guests.

A luxurious Lounge, Lobby, and Promenade, Club and Reception, and other Public Rooms contribute to the enjoyment of Hotel Sherwin's social indoor life, and the hotel's privately owned natural sand beach provides unusual facilities for bathing and aquatic sports. The private park offers tennis, golf, bowling, and other games and an ideal playground for the children. A private pier with motor launch service to Randolph-st. offers enjoyable jaunts by water to the loop.

The Sherwin's own orchestra and pipe organ furnishes music daily from 6:30 to 9:30 p. m., and for supper and dinner dances. Sunday afternoon concerts by selected artists are other enjoyable features at the Sherwin.

You are cordially invited to visit the Sherwin and afford Mr. Vernon C. McGill, the owner, and his management the pleasure of showing you through this commodious and delightful hotel home on the shore of Lake Michigan.

PAY IN—NOT OUT

When you rent an apartment, you pay out every month. At the end of the year you have a bundle of rent receipts.

When you purchase an apartment under The Andridge Co-operative Plan, you build up your capital and borrowing power. A small down payment starts you and you pay the balance in monthly installments.

All Andridge buildings are new, well located, carefully planned and equipped for comfort and convenience. All are close to transportation, schools, stores, churches, recreation centers.

Visit THE SHOREHOLME, 7710-18 South Shore-dr. TODAY and let our representative give you full information about The Andridge Plan and tell you EXACTLY how much you can save each month by owning one of these attractive apartment homes.

12 NEW BRICK BUNGALOWS

2423 to 2459 N. Newland-av.

Of the 72 bungalows that I have lately built on the Northwest Side these are the most up to date. Saving in standardizing construction enables me to sell them at the same price, $8,250.

New bungalows are located in the most desirable part of the Northwest Side. They are ½ block from Grand-av. street car line, 2 blks. from steam railroad, 2 blks. to Rutherford Park, 3 blks. from schoolhouse, and close to all churches.

These new bldgs. stand on a ridge of land overlooking Chicago at an elevation of 74 ft. above the lake.

I am building them with the idea of pleasing the most discriminating class of Chicago homeseekers. The houses contain so many of the most modern features that you will need less furniture. I select as purchasers only the most desirable people. During a recent sale of 17 bungalows I rejected 35 applications. You will be pleased with your neighbor.

Price $8,250, on terms of $1,500 cash and balance $75 per mo., including interest.

Take Grand-av. car to Sayre-av. [70th-av.] and walk one block east and one-half block north to the bungalows.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.

VACANT—NORTH SIDE.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

WHILE MOUNT EVEREST is the highest mountain in the world the GREEN BRIAR additions to Rogers Park and North Edgewater have the distinction of being the highest restricted and the best located property in the world.

THAT'S WHY GREEN BRIAR was called the "WORLD'S GREATEST SUBDIVISION."

THAT'S WHY THOUSANDS of wise investors, builders and speculators have made HUGE PROFITS and many have already made FORTUNES in GREEN BRIAR.

TWELVE YEARS AGO the first GREEN BRIAR Addition was opened to the public. 33-foot residential lots were then sold as low as $275. Today those same lots are worth [$3,500.00] three thousand five hundred dollars.

TEN YEARS AGO the second GREEN BRIAR Addition was put on the market. Business lots were then sold as low as eighteen dollars per foot.

TODAY this property can be sold at $300 per foot, that's about 1,500 PER CENT PROFIT, or over 100 per cent per year.

T. J. GRADY & CO.

Owners and operators of the GREEN BRIAR Additions.

ANNOUNCE

the opening sale on Sunday, May 11, of ANOTHER TWO MILLION DOLLAR GREEN BRIAR Addition to North Edgewater. This newly developed addition adjoins the former GREEN BRIAR Addition—is only 1¼ miles from the lake, and is surrounded by FOUR BOULEVARDS, less than one-half mile from TWO GOLF COURSES, near THREE CAR LINES and only one block from the proposed branch of the RAVENSWOOD "L."

MANY, MANY FORTUNES have been made in Chicago Real Estate, but never in the history of Chicago has a better opportunity been offered the public than this. Every lot ready to build on with improvements in and paid for.

COME OUT SUNDAY. Put everything else off and see for yourself the actual reality; nothing said on paper could describe its possibilities. Ask any bank in Chicago what they know about the Green Briar Additions.

TITLE GUARANTEED by the Chicago Title & Trust Company.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take the Ravenswood "L" or any street car to Western and Lawrence, walk one-half block north to our office, 4832 Lincoln avenue, our machines will take you to the property in 5 minutes.

AUTO ROUTE—Any North Side street to Peterson boulevard, west on Peterson to California Avenue, north on California to our three branch offices, corner California and Devon, California and Granville, Peterson Boulevard and Fairfield. Come early, watch for the Green Briar signs. Sale opens at 10 A. M. sharp. No lot held without a deposit. For appointment call Wellington 2880-7073. Rogers Park 9413.

SALES AGENT.

Exceptional Opportunity.

A well established New York company seeks a responsible individual or organization capable of directing a force of salesmen to market a high-grade specialty to the grocery and delicatessen trade as well as to hotels, restaurants, institutions, etc. This specialty is the only one of its kind on the market. Its sale is noncompetitive. It produces an absolutely pure food product consumed in the United States to the extent of over two hundred millions of dollars. It is a provable constant money-maker for the buyer, increasing his immediate profits to 300 per cent. It is the best business builder from every angle ever offered to this trade.

This is a splendid opportunity for a sales agent to earn in excess of $25,000 a year on an exclusive territorial contract. The amount of capital required is commensurate with the extent of territory desired and is for the purpose of financing office and demonstrators necessary to properly conduct the business. You do not carry stock nor finance accounts. Commissions are advanced on orders. We help you start your organization and work with you until you are on the road to success. Address a detailed application [including telephone number] to S F 250, Tribune.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

START A BUSINESS OF YOUR OWN

Have you ever wondered at the phenomenal success of the syndicate Variety Stores?

They handle the kind of goods that sell fast and pay a profit whether business generally is good or bad.

The originators of the Variety business, today the largest wholesale distributors of Variety Goods in the world, can put you in touch with a choice location for a Variety Store and tell you exactly how you can apply to your own business the methods that have made the syndicate stores great.

Just now, we know of several excellent locations in different parts of the country which will not conflict with stores now established.

If you have a genuine ambition to own a profitable business and are in a position to invest $1,500 to $5,000, write us fully about yourself, giving us some idea of where you would prefer to locate, and interview will be arranged.

Should you be interested in the purchase of a Variety Store now in operation, we can put you in touch with one in a Chicago suburb which can be bought for $8,000 and another in Wisconsin for $3,500.

Replies will be held in strict confidence and place you under no obligation whatever.

New Car Beauty and Performance at from 33 1-3% to 50% Off by our Special Reconditioning Process

By this plan you can buy the high grade car that you want at the price of a new car of a much lower grade.

We cater particularly to the prospective purchaser who has a limited amount of money to spend for an automobile but who wants to drive a car of a much better grade than his budget allows.

Here's how and why we make it possible to do just that thing:

Every new car can only represent a certain KIND and AMOUNT of transportation, all depending on the class of car it is.

The average good new car represents five or more years of satisfactory transportation, but for various reasons, many owners of them buy new ones every season. This does not mean that the car has outlived its usefulness or that there is anything chronically wrong with it. It is done because Mr. New Owner has the price to satisfy his sense of extra refinements and changes of models.

It simply means that his transportation is going to cost him more and that he is perfectly willing to stand the depreciation that "trading in" necessitates.

Most of the transportation up to this point that he has taken out of it can be put back in by means of our special reconditioning process, resulting in a car that through USE is an equal performer to the car when it was new.

From your standpoint this used car becomes the best buy and is a much better car than a new car that you could purchase for the same money. Mr. New Owner, together with our reconditioning process, made this possible for you.

For approximately $1,000 to $1,500 you can buy a car in the $3,000 class.

There is always a lively exchange of cars going on at this time of the year which naturally makes our stock complete. After inspecting these, you will agree that it is difficult to discriminate between them and new cars. You will find in the selection a variety of models in Roadsters, Sedans, Coupes, Touring cars, Sport and Special jobs, each and every one representing many miles of good transportation, together with the satisfaction of knowing that the original depreciation has already been paid for by the first owner.

The wise buyer of a motor car will decide first on how much he wants to pay for transportation. If he wants the latest refinements in the way of equipment, he is not adding one extra mile of transportation, but is actually paying more per mile. All the special fitting and accessories he could possibly add to the car would not increase his mileage. If, on the other hand, he wants the comfort afforded only in high grade cars, he can, by our reconditioning process, get an equivalent in transportation at from 33 1-3% to 50% saving.

Make it a point to come in today and let us actually prove this to you, at the same time giving you your choice as to special paint jobs and any extra equipment you desire. There are hundreds of Cole owners in this sensible buying class.

Come in today. Look these over and view the parade from our window. We are open Sunday all day and evenings during the week.

CADILLAC

Offers Some Special Bargains in Used Cars

Cadillac's Annual Spring Salon, which closed May 10, has brought into the Used Car Department a number of automobiles of various makes which are excellent bargains. These cars, trade-ins on the new V-63 Cadillac, are in a wide variety of body styles and are on sale at prices ranging from $200 to $3,300.

Careful appraisal of these used automobiles and thorough inspection by skilled Cadillac mechanics has enabled us to price them at figures which are true guides to their actual worth.

Among them will be found a car to fit both the needs and the pocketbook of the person who is seeking a good used car. Some of these cars are:

Locomobile 38 tour	$ 625
Lafayette roadster	1,600
Cole coupe	200
Barley 6 sedan	750
Lafayette torpedo [run 300 miles]	3,250
Pierce Arrow 38 imperial limo	2,000

A number of our reconditioned, warranted Type 61 Cadillacs are also on sale. These cars have been completely repainted, put in A1 condition mechanically in our own service shops, cleaned up thoroughly, equipped with 5 new cord tires, and are sold under the regular 90 day new car warranty.

According to the owners of these reconditioned Type 61s, they represent the best used car values obtainable today. We welome a visit to our Used Car display and will be glad to show the reconditioning in actual process in our service department.

WILLS Sainte Claire

"SUPREMACY OF THE HIGHWAY"

The best motor car investment possible to make is a reconditioned Wills Sainte Claire, with its powerful 8 cylinder V type motor set at a 60 degree angle, with overhead valves and camshaft, combined with its long, low sweeping, artistic lines. There is charm to them—an atmosphere of distinguished character that is a fitting outward expression of the inherent quality of the Wills Sainte Claire.

1921 Wills Sainte Claire 5 pass. Phaeton, completely equipped, including an expensive winter glass inclosure. The lowest price we have ever quoted is	$ 975
1922 Wills Sainte Claire 5 pass. Phaeton, refinished in Arizona brown, striped in Italian wine lake. Equipped with new seat covers. An unusual bargain at	1,425
1922 Wills Sainte Claire 5 pass. Phaeton, fully equipped, including 4 new tires, seat covers, California top. Just refinished in Ditzler's Italian wine lake. An exceptional bargain at	1,550
1922 Wills Sainte Claire 2 or 4 pass. Roadster. Just beautifully repainted in black and striped in vermilion. This is undoubtedly the smartest roadster on wheels. A real bargain at	1,525
1922 Wills Sainte Claire 5 or 7 pass. Sedan. This car has had very little mileage and is in A1 condition throughout. A sensational bargain at	1,975
1923 Wills Sainte Claire 5 pass. Brougham. Mechanically perfect. Equipped with new Vogue tires. Paint color optional. Priced to sell today at	2,250

JORDAN

AUBURN TOURING, 7 PASS. This is a late series car in beautiful condition every way. Newly finished in Powder Blue, black chassis. Mechanically exceptionally fine and can be depended upon to render high class service. 7-R Continental engine. Top, upholstery, and details will please the most exacting. Has 5 excellent tires, spring bumper, spotlight, snubbers, etc. Bargain, $500.

HUDSON, 1922, 4 PASS. COUPE. Cars of this series in the coupe type are very scarce and sell rapidly. For this reason we urge your immediate action if interested. Is painted in deep maroon, interior in perfect condition, and presents the appearance of new. Mechanically it operates smoothly and quietly and is in condition we consider excellent. 5 excellent cord tires, bumpers, mirror, motometer, other extras. We are fortunate in being able to offer this $2,800 coupe at the low price of $1,000.

JORDAN 5 PASS. TOURING, 1921. You would hardly think it possible to buy a high grade late model Jordan in this condition at the price. It is safe to say its condition is such that you cannot find fault with it in any respect. Is beautifully refinished in Dark Green. Top and upholstery in almost new condition. Equipped with excellent cord tires, 2 bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, and numerous other extras. Carries "Mark of Jordan Service"—guaranteed the same as new Jordans. Don't overlook the chance of buying this smooth operating, easy riding car that you can get at the bargain price of $800.

CHANDLER 1923 SPORT, 4 PASS. Presents exceptionally attractive appearance owing to its individual fenders, special dark green finish, burbank top and leather upholstery to match. Has spare wheel and tire at each side. Had low mileage and delivered to us in new car condition. Completely equipped. Best Chandler sport value in city. Don't fail to see it today. $1,150.

FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN, SERIES 9-B SEDAN. A car you can afford to own for it will give you 18 to 20 miles per gallon on gas, 15,000 to 18,000 miles on tires, with no water to boil, leak or freeze. All Franklins have aluminum bodies and the efficient 6 cylinder air cooled engine with the 7 bearing crankshaft. Franklins travel roads at 40 miles per hour where other cars beg you to slow down to 20. We do not need to tell you that such a car will give you the most comfortable tour—that it will not wear you out, whether driver or passenger. This one is guaranteed mechanically; its upholstery is positively like new, and has almost new cord tires, spare, and other equipment. Some lucky purchaser gets this car with a cash payment of $575, bal. monthly.

FRANKLIN, SERIES 10, TOURING, 5 PASS. This car has just come into our hands from the original owner and to all appearances proves beyond any question that it has been given superlative care. It is the latest style car and has only been driven 4,926 miles. Painted Midnight Blue. Has 5 cord tires that show practically no wear. 2 spotlights, 2 nickeled bumpers, tonneau windshield, etc. Guaranteed same as new Franklins. For this sale, $825 cash, bal. monthly.

FRANKLIN, SERIES 9-B, TOURING—We have made it possible for the salaried man to own and drive a high grade, economical Franklin. Is in sound mechanical condition and should give years of excellent service. Paint, upholstery, tires, etc., good. Has wire wheels, spare wheel and tire, bumpers. $200 cash, bal. monthly.

KISSEL 1922 TOURING. Presents the appearance of new with its beautiful finish of "Blue-Devil Blue" and cream wheels. Top, upholstery, other details and mechanical condition positively first class. Has the bullet type headlamps, beveled edged body, 5 good cord tires, 2 bumpers, automatic windshield cleaner, lock, motometer, clock, etc. $425 cash, balance monthly.

PLAN TRACTION "CO-OP" FOR CA EMPLOYES ONL

Twenty-seven Flats Wabash and 69th.

And now Chicago's going to hav "co-op" for street car employe It was going to be called the Bell apartments, but the owner change mind and decided Bell Court woul more dignified, if not quite so propriate.

Anyway, it'll be at the south corner of Wabash and 69th, a selected because of its nearnes the big street car barns on Vincen a short distance away, and becaus on a car line.

To Have "Cool Closet."

Wolf, Sexton, Harper & Truex drawn plans for a twenty-seven building for J. W. Torrance, ow There'll be four and five room s with four closets in the four r flats and five in the fives, with t stores on the 69th street front.

One of the novelties will be the " ifornia cool closet," an unpatented vice said to be common on the P coast but which Chicago archi seem to have overlooked. It en the housewife to keep her food plies cool without ice except in and August.

For Car Employés Only.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

PLAN TRACTION "CO-OP" FOR CAR EMPLOYES ONLY

Twenty-seven Flats at Wabash and 69th.

And now Chicago's going to have a "co-op" for street car employés only. It was going to be called the Bell Cord apartments, but the owner changed his mind and decided Bell Court would be more dignified, if not quite so appropriate.

Anyway, it'll be at the southeast corner of Wabash and 69th, a site selected because of its nearness to the big street car barns on Vincennes, a short distance away, and because it's on a car line.

To Have "Cool Closet."

Wolf, Sexton, Harper & Truex have drawn plans for a twenty-seven flat building for J. W. Torrance, owner. There'll be four and five room suites with four closets in the four room flats and five in the fives, with three stores on the 69th street front.

One of the novelties will be the "California cool closet," an unpatented device said to be common on the Pacific coast but which Chicago architects seem to have overlooked. It enables the housewife to keep her food supplies cool without ice except in July and August.

For Car Employés Only.

The building will be in English Gothic, with terra cotta trim. There'll be a garden in the court. The land and building will cost a reported $200,000. The site is 100x137 . Work will start within a month. It'll be sold on the 100% "coöp" plan and only street car employés will be allowed to buy.

BEGIN WORK ON $500,000 FIVE STORY FACTORY

The Hardin-Lavin company, mail order heating and plumbing supplies, has started work on a $500,000 five story factory, 125x114, at the southwest corner of Pershing road and the Rock Island tracks, from plans by Wolf, Sexton, Harper & Trueax. It'll be completed Sept. 1. The firm is now at the northeast corner of Cottage Grove and 46th.

Plan $450,000 Apartments at 6446 Kenwood Avenue

C. H. and H. T. Daemicke and Architect Thomas R. Bishop will build seventy-two unfurnished apartments, of two to five rooms, at 6446-56 Kenwood on a 150x165 site. The building will have several hotel conveniences, such as lobby, parlors, club room, refrigeration, filtered water, etc. There'll be playrooms and baby carriage rooms. Although only three stories it'll have elevators. The cost is placed at $450,000.

Window Sash Makers Buy Factory on Austin Ave.

The Budhal Manufacturing company, makers of window sash, has bought the three story factory building, containing 25,000 square feet of floor space, together with the vacant property adjoining at the southeast corner of Armour and Austin, for a reported $50,000 from the Schram estate. The property had been used by the Schram Brothers company, furniture makers. William Kaplan was broker.

Building Permits

There were fifteen building permits issued yesterday, for a total value of $440,000, and of those nine were over $5,000 and those for $10,000 and more were:

Kildare-av., S., 1510, three story brick apartment; L. Barron owner; Eisenberg, arch.; Galler-Fish, masons	$ 18,000
Washtenaw-av., N., 1304-08, three story brick apartment; R. Levi, owner; D. J. Schaffner, arch. M. Galler & Fish., masons; S. Sanger, carp.	75,000
Longwood-av., 10228-40, two story brick church and school; Catholic Bishop, owner; A. Foster, arch.	125,000
Division-st., W., 3325, three story brick apartment; Cohen Bros., owner and carp.; B. A. Comm, arch.; W. F. Cohen, mason	50,000
Oakley-av., N., 1009-11, three story brick apartment; D. Scholsky, owner; A. I. Himmelblau, arch.; Midland Constr., mason	55,000
Midway Park, 5907-09, two story brick residence; E. F. Hansell, owner; F. M. Proy, arch.; J. Duff, mason; H. Hunstermann, carp.	25,000
Hoyne-av., N., 4809, two story brick flats; G. Johnson, owner and carp.; O. Johnson, arch.; J. Swanson, mason	10,000
Throop-st., 8358, two story brick residence; T. Donlan, owner; Kocher-Larson, arch.; Lambert Constr. Co., mason; J. N. Mungell, carp.	15,000

Southwest General Hospital

The three story and basement building at the southwest corner of 57th and Wood, partially completed a year or so ago, is to be remodeled into the what will be called the Southwest General hospital, from plans by Architect Byron H. Jillson. It'll have fifty-four beds and will be operated by Dr. G. E. Maxwell, Dr. George W. Funck, and Dr. Clyde R. Landis. The estimated cost is $200,000. The building is 80x170.

HERE'S OFFICIAL STATION LIST ON NILES LINE

Official information regarding new stations along the Niles Center extension of the "L" system was made public yesterday. The first station west of Howard will be at the Ridge, the next will be at Asbury, and then Dodge. There'll be a station half way between Crawford and Prairie road, with entrances at each end into the two thoroughfares. Then will come a station at Schreiber road, one at Oakton, another at Main, and the terminal at Dempster.

It is now claimed by "L" officials that the running time on the fastest trains will be thirty-nine minutes to the loop instead of forty-five, as originally announced. This is based on a fifteen or sixteen minute run from Dempster to Howard. Of course the trains other than the "shoppers' specials" will take considerably longer than forty-five minutes to get to the loop.

Illinois Tool Works to Build West Side Factory

On April 15 this department reported that the Illinois Tool works had contracted for a factory site with 272 feet of west frontage on Keeler, 634 feet north of Fullerton, from the Phipps Industrial Land trust, and contemplated a one story factory. This is now confirmed and the price given as $100,000. Newton Grey and J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. represented the seller, and Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. the buyer. Puckey & Jenkins and Mundie & Jenson will be architects. The quarters now occupied by the tool works at the northwest corner of St. Clair and Erie streets are owned by E. J. and F. M. Bowes and will be converted into an office building.

Publisher Buys Diversey Apartment Hotel; $230,000

Axel H. Johnson, builder and owner of the Commonwealth hotel, has sold the Diversey Apartment hotel at 430 Diversey parkway to Henry G. Eisert of the American Poultry Journal, for a reported $230,000, subject to $149,500, through John F. Vokoun. William Mellin was broker for the seller. The building has eighty-one rooms and stands on a 50x150 lot.

LINCOLN AVENUE SALE.

Mardi R. Plotke, Albert Grosby, and Elsador Friedman have sold the ten stores, two offices, and eighteen flats at 2566 Lincoln and 2537 Sheffield to Ernest Miller for a reported $130,000, subject to $83,000. The new owner intends making additions and alterations to the Lincoln avenue part of the building. Isador Ferguson & Co. were brokers and will manage the property.

APPRAISAL NIGHT AT "Y."

Arthur W. Draper Sr. will talk on "Residential Appraisals" and Callistus S. Ennis on "Business Property Appraisals" before the Chicago Real Estate board's class in real estate practice at the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce on Tuesday evening.

CICERO ODD FELLOWS BUILD.

The Consolidated Odd Fellows of Cicero are erecting a $150,000 three story building at the northwest corner of West 25th street and South 55th avenue, 50x125, with stores, offices, lodge halls, and auditorium. Frank J. Petru has underwritten a $60,000 bond issue.

ELECTRIC CONCERN LEASES SPACE.

The Ward Manufacturing company, electrical specialties, has subleased the space formerly occupied by the Dame Nature company, toilet preparations, at 937 Wellington. L. A. McHale of Farnham, Kuhn & Co. was broker.

[For other real estate news see following page.]

PLANS BUSINESS BLOCK AT 71ST AND CONSTANCE

James E. Bistor, of Hedberg & Bistor, states he intends to improve the southwest corner of 71st and Constance, 134x60, with a two story business block, to contain stores, offices, and flats, from plans by Carl W. Westerlind. It'll cost in the neighborhood of $125,000. Work will start in two weeks.

August West has bought the northwest corner of 71st place and Constance, adjoining Mr. Bistor's property, and is erecting a fifty-four flat building from plans by Thomas Bishop. It was incorrectly reported recently that Mr. West had bought Mr. Bistor's corner.

Uptown Lutheran Church Buys House for Parsonage

The Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, at the northeast corner of Magnolia and Balmoral, has bought the brick house across the street at the northwest corner, from Richard L. Neunuebel, for $20,000 and will remodel and use for a residence for the pastor, the Rev. David A. Davy.

SOUTH MICHIGAN DEAL.

Louis Blank bought the thirty-six flats at 5630 South Michigan from Fay O. Behymer for an indicated $160,000, subject to $63,000. Phillips & Co. were brokers.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

FLOSSMOOR NOW HAVING A MILD CASE OF "NILES"

De Luxe 'Sub' to Be Laid Out by City Planners.

BY AL CHASE.

EDWARD H. BENNETT. [Kaufmann & Fabry Photo.]

One of the most significant developments of the subdivision business in Chicago and vicinity is the apparent growing realization of the realty men that just to sell out a subdivision to a hundred or more families, with no water, sewer, gas, electricity, or paving in or contemplated, isn't good business for firm, buyer, or city. Such subdivisions are a block to the growth of the city; in many of them no home building has ever been done and every lot owner probably feels far from kindly toward the realty men and doesn't hesitate to say so.

Recently, however, more and more subdivision firms are joining the ranks of the old-fashioned, high class firms, such as McGuire & Orr, Koester & Zander, William Zelosky & Co., and several others, who put all improvements in their subdivisions before they sell them and in many cases build for their clients.

New "Sub" for Flossmoor.

A still more recent development, and perhaps the most significant, is the tendency to engage well known city planners to lay out subdivisions. The recent case of the realty men in Niles joining hands in seeing that their district developed in an orderly manner, was an important step in improving the subdivision situation.

Yesterday it was learned that Flossmoor, the Illinois Central's pet town, twenty-three miles or so to the south, is to have a brand new subdivision, which will be laid out by Edward H. Bennett, Parsons, and Frost & Thomas, an internationally known firm of city planners.

To Cover 155 Acres.

The South Shore Land trust owns 155 acres just north of the Flossmoor Country club and west of and across Dixie highway from the Idlewild Country club. It's bounded on the west by Western avenue and the I. C. right of way.

It'll be called Flossmoor park and will be restricted exclusively to high class one family residences. Flossmoor's custom of naming streets after persons and things related to golf will be carried out in the new subdivision. There'll be Evans road, Gardner road, Hutchinson road, Hagen lane, Marston lane, Varden lane, and MacDonald lane.

For Golfer or Banker?

The principal thoroughfare will be a diagonal, wide boulevard called Carroll parkway. John A. Carroll, Hyde Park banker and real estate man, is one of the trustees of the South Shore Land trust, owner of the subdivision, and he plays golf. Whether it's because of his golf or his being a trustee that he has a parkway named after him, we don't know. Charles Fox, president of the marketing company, merely grinned when he was asked about this riddle.

The total investment in Flossmoor park, it is claimed, will be $475,000. Of this $300,000 will be spent in paving roads and putting in all improvements, including street lights. The price of lots will include all improvements.

Flossmoor Having Mild Boom.

Flossmoor is having a mild little imitation of the Niles whoop 'er up boys subdivision boom, for which the Illinois Central electrification program is responsible. The Land trust paid $1,000 an acre for 115 acres which they could have bought a few months before for $600. Later when they bought forty acres more they had to pay $1,500 an acre. The South Shore Investment company will manage and market the new subdivision.

It is expected that L. Buurma, River Forest builder, will soon erect twelve attractive residences for the Phipps Industrial and Land trust, which controls the South Shore Land trust. Several thousand elms and sycamores are to be planted along the subdivision roads, all of which will be winding.

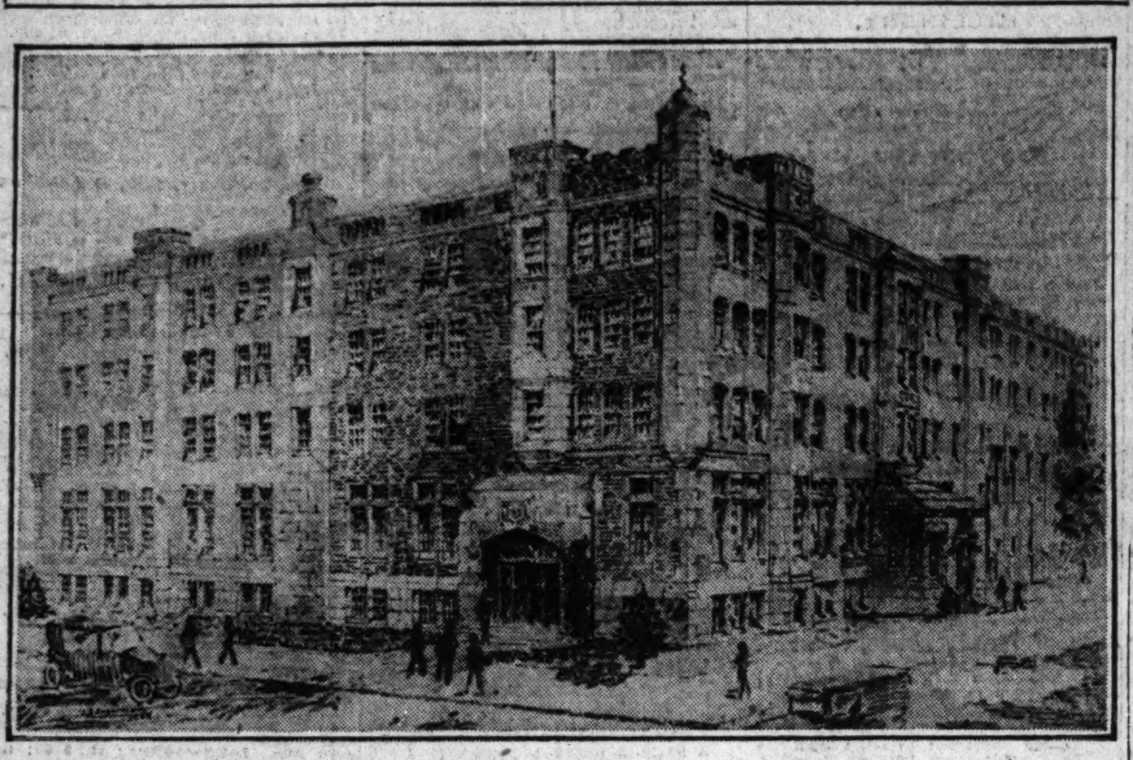
More Flossmoor Deals.

Another good sized Flossmoor deal was closed yesterday, a syndicate represented by Paul E. Brown of William H. Brown & Sons, buying 130 acres just south of the Flossmoor Country club from H. Vollmer for an undisclosed consideration. Part of it may be subdivided and the balance used for a semi-public golf course, though plans are not yet matured. A. G. Morgan was broker for the seller.

The property fronts half a mile on Vollmer road and a third of a mile on Western avenue, and is rolling and partially wooded.

Murray Wolbach has bought from William F. Larkin, John F. Hough and Clarence A. Toolen 110 acres on Kedzie avenue, between Illinois road and Vollmer road, in Flossmoor, at $101,750, or at the rate of $925 an acre. Newton B. Lauren & Co. represented all parties.

New Y. M. C. A. Building for Far West Side



Above is the second "Y" building in the Chicago Y. M. C. A. building program, which calls for twenty-six new structures. It was designed by Berlin & Swern and will be erected at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Race street, in the Austin district. More is told in a nearby column.

LIEPOLD & HICKS MERGE WITH G. M. FORMAN & CO.

The real estate firm of Liepold & Hicks, composed of A. J. Liepold Jr. and John Hicks, has been merged with George M. Forman & Co., mortgage bankers, at 105 West Monroe street. A. J. Liepold Jr. will be in charge of the real estate department, which is based on the real estate organization of Liepold & Hicks. Mr. Hicks has charge of the renting office with his quarters at 1569 Howard street, the former headquarters of Liepold & Hicks.

A. J. LIEPOLD JR. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

PLANS $80,000 FLATS.

Lillian M. Callinan has bought the vacant 50x150 at 1220 Sherwin from Dr. Thomas L. Grismore for a reported $22,000 and will erect an $80,000 flat building, with six six room suites. H. W. Jansen of Frank J. Murnighan & Co. was broker.

DENIES BANKERS UNITE TO SHOVE RATES UP TO 7%

Earle G. Krumrine, president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, sends THE TRIBUNE the following statement, evidently inspired by a recent statement in the Economist that some of the leading mortgage banking houses in Chicago were considering the matter of making 7 per cent the rate of interest on all loans to quicken the flow of funds in this direction:

"The fact that some of the reputable mortgage loan houses are selling 7 per cent loans seems to have created an impression that there is no money to be had on construction loans at 6½ per cent interest. This is not in accord with the facts, because several of the mortgage loan houses who are offering 7 per cent first mortgage bonds for sale are, at the same time, selling bonds at 6½ per cent.

"Some of the larger houses are opposed to putting out paper at a higher rate than 6½ per cent. There has been no agreement or understanding between the mortgage loan houses in the city to charge a given rate of interest on building loans, nor could there be. The rate of interest is determined entirely by the law of supply and demand, and always will be.

"There is plenty of money in the market at the present time for good construction loans. The amount of money that a borrower can obtain and the rate of interest is dependent upon the class of security offered, the occupancy or use of the building, its location, the supply and demand for such bonds, or, in other words, their salability.

"At times certain sections of the city may be overbuilt with a particular kind of building. When such a situation arises and the property owner in that section approaches a mortgage banker for a building loan he may be asked a high rate and commission to discourage him, so that he will not build until the demand has caught up with the supply."

Subdivision News

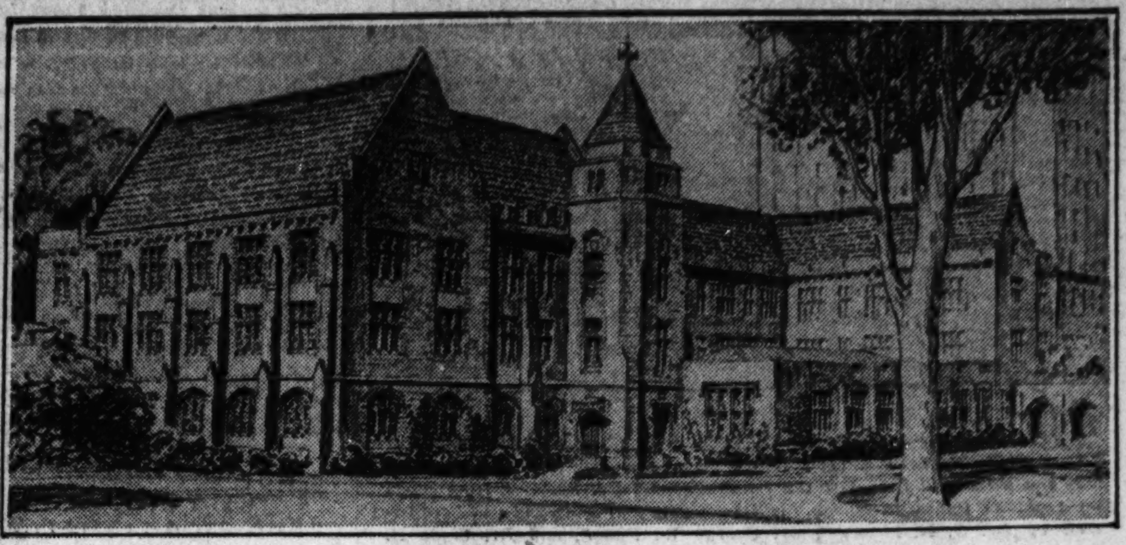
Edward R. Diederich is subdividing his thirty acre tract between the Glen View Golf club and the C., M. & St. P. statio nat Golf into what he calls the "New Home Town." He says he is catering only to those who can afford to pay $15,000 and upwards for homes. The new subdivision will have curved roads. Later Mr. Diederich intends to incorporate his new community.

Feuerborn & Klode report opening an eighty acre subdivision bounded by 76th, 78th, and Belmont avenues and Addison street. Water, walks, trees, and graded streets will be installed. Each buyer will be required to pay $3 annually for five years into a trust fund to be used for the beautification and maintenance of the subdivision. A bus line will be operated from the subdivision to the end of the Grand avenue car line at Harlem.

The Rectenwald and Reed tracts in Highland Park, containing eighty-six and a half acres, for which Louis Alter paid a reported $103,000, is to be platted and improvements costing $250,000 to be started at once, according to G. P. Koeneke of the Clayton Realty company of Waukegan. It'll be called the Ridge addition to Highland Park, and Mr. Koeneke will be in charge of the selling. The property is wooded.

Another subdivision is announced for the main line of the C., M. & St. P. through Du Page county. J. M. Lyon & Co. announce their Grant Highway subdivision, at Ontarioville, fronting south on the Grant highway and a block west of the railway station.

New View of Northwestern School of Commerce



Above is a brand new perspective of the School of Commerce of Northwestern university to be erected on the McKinlock Memorial campus on the Lake Shore drive. The picture shows a view of the proposed building from the northeast. This structure is planned to form a wing on the north side of the campus, paralleling Chicago avenue. The group as an entirety will form a quadrangle, with Commerce, Law, Dental, Medicine, dormitories, hospital, and related buildings built to form a hollow square, opening towards the lake.

The drive for funds has reached the $250,000 mark. It is divided into four branches: special gifts, donations by firms and corporations, gifts by realtors and near north side property owners, and pledges by students of the school. James Gamble Rogers and Lowe & Bollenbacher are architects.

AUSTIN TO HAVE $600,000 "Y," FINEST IN CITY

Second of Twenty-six for Chicago.

Work is to start soon on the Austin Y. M. C. A. building, according to an official announcement last night by A. H. Clement, chairman. This is the second building project in the Chicago Y. M. C. A. expansion plan of twenty-six new buildings.

The building will be four stories and ground floor and will cost $600,000. Berlin & Swern have designed a building to occupy the 165x201 lot at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Race street, across from Holden park. It is hoped to have the roof on by the end of the year.

Two Main Sections.

While appearing from the outside to be a single structure, the building really will consist of two main sections, one for men and the other for boys. According to Mr. Clement, it will be the finest Y. M. C. A. building so far erected in Chicago, although not the largest.

In the boys' part of the building there'll be a lobby with a large fireplace, check, reading, game, work, and locker rooms, and shower baths. Common to both men and boys will be two gymnasiums, swimming pool, storage rooms and tailor shop, and a playground.

175 Dormitory Rooms.

The men's portion of the building will contain a large lobby, with a fireplace, a reading room, a billiard room, offices, club and committee rooms, classrooms, check room, shower baths, locker rooms, handball courts, cafeteria, with private dining room, and 175 dormitory rooms.

The officers of the executive committee are A. H. Clement, P. D. Castle, George J. Dehn, Frank Druley, Louis O. Runner, and F. E. Short. Harry J. Gardner is executive secretary.

Greenleaf and Glenwood Flats Sold for $355,000

The fifty-one flats and six stores at the southeast corner of Greenleaf and Glenwood, 150x178, were sold by Harry Feder to Morris Zevin for $355,000, subject to $200,000, according to Irving B. Tow, who represented all parties.

Brokers' Notes

R. M. Sayers, who since 1915 has been active in the south central district, in offices of Mark Levy & Brother, and until recently with Oliver & Co., has opened his own real estate offices at 2132 South Michigan, where he'll continue to specialize in south central property. His phone is Calumet 5040.

Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., subdividers, after having been seventeen years at 106 North La Salle, have moved to the new Burnham building.

After alterations are completed Frank H. Lang & Son will occupy the entire bank floor of the Real Estate Exchange building. They state they will increase their real estate sales force and enlarge their first mortgage bond department.

Emil J. Dirks announces that he will move tomorrow to temporary quarters at 2764 Lincoln avenue, just south of Racine and Diversey, pending the completion of the Diversey Trust and Savings bank and office building which he is to erect at his present location. A picture of this structure was shown in this department on Sunday, April 27.

Harrison & Reidy have moved to larger quarters at 4641 Sheridan road, opposite the Pantheon. Same phones.

News of the Architects

The Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects will meet in its new quarters at the University club on Tuesday evening at 6:30. It'll be a business and preconvention session. The six best drawings of the Chicago. Architectural club traveling scholarships will be shown and discussed and their authors are specially invited as guests of the chapter.

R. G. Wolff, architect, has moved to larger quarters in the north section of the Wrigley building, suite 544.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

May 11, 1924

BATTLING THE RED PLAGUE that constantly threatens Uncle Sam's great lumber supply is one of the tasks developed to a high degree by the U. S. Forest Service. More than 500 "crow's nests" like this one on Castle Peak Lookout in Holy Cross national forest, Colorado, are perched on lofty crags overlooking the great national preserves to detect the first sign of smoke.

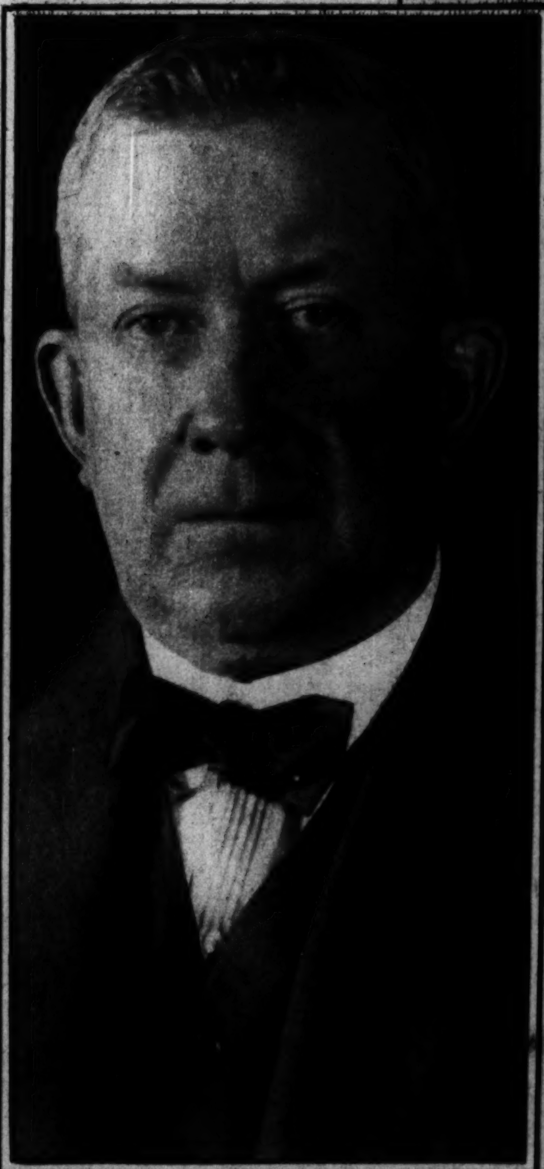
HUNGRY FLAMES, like these of a typical night forest fire, destroy timber sufficient to house the population of Washington, D. C., each year. To prevent this huge loss the government has flung an army of fighters over the country. They hold ceaseless vigil on mountain tops, fast power boats, in airplanes, on foot and horseback to save the nation's trees.

(Photograph series from Wide World.)

LOCATING THE SMOKE of forest fires is a fine art with the U. S. rangers. If careless campers and others won't be educated to prevent such devastations, the department has found that the next best thing is scientific fire fighting. Here is the "Osborne fire finder" on the Devil's Head lookout station, Colorado.

KNOWS WHEN HE'S WELL OFF, does Maj. Edward James Monroe of Jacksonville, Fla., Mexican and Civil war veteran. He's the youngest son of President James Monroe, but, at that, he will celebrate his 108th birthday next July 4. He lives as a bachelor, cooks his meals and does his own washing, raising most of his food on this truck farm.

(Photograph from Wide World.)



DRUMS OF SORROW sounded in Tammany April 25 when one of the greatest political organizations the world has ever known learned of the death of its veteran leader, Charles F. Murphy. The man who rose from the job of stringing wire and driving a street car to command New York Democrats since 1902 is shown here as he looked at the height of his power.

MOTHER AND MOTHER-IN-LAW are the dual roles played by Mrs. Clark Howell Sr., shown at the left of the picture with her daughter. It all came about through the double romance of the Clark Howells of Atlanta, Ga. When the senior attended his son's wedding last fall, he fell in love with the bride's mother. Result: Another wedding and one happy family.

NEW GREYHOUND OF THE NAVY takes the water at Cramp's shipyard in Philadelphia. The U. S. cruiser Memphis is a sister ship of the new Trenton. It was christened by 5 year old Elizabeth Rowlett Paine, daughter of the mayor of Memphis, Tenn. Since the disarmament agreement stopped the building of great battleships, naval rivalry has centered upon light and speedy battle cruisers. These ocean speeders are designed to prey upon enemy commerce in war times, cutting off his supplies and perhaps starving him into submission.

UNCLE SAM'S OLYMPIC MERMAIDS sail to battle for the world's championships in France. The picture was snapped in the swimming pool of the steamship Arcadian. The group includes Ann Kinnaly, Frances Meany, Liza Lindstrum, Eileen Riggin, Adelaide Lambert, Gertrude Ederle, Helen Wainwright, Doris O'Mara, Virginia Whitenack, Ethel McGary, and Agnes Geraghty.

TURTLE HUNTING IN ABYSSINIA is a popular pastime. Averse to work of any sort, the natives consider this good fun, and incidentally Mr. Turtle provides food, which is about all there is to worry the wilder Abyssinians. Clothes they scorn, as our hunter's costume would indicate. This chap has just bagged one big turtle with his powerful bow and steel-pointed arrows. Now he is parked on the bow of his dugout, waiting for a shot at No. 2.

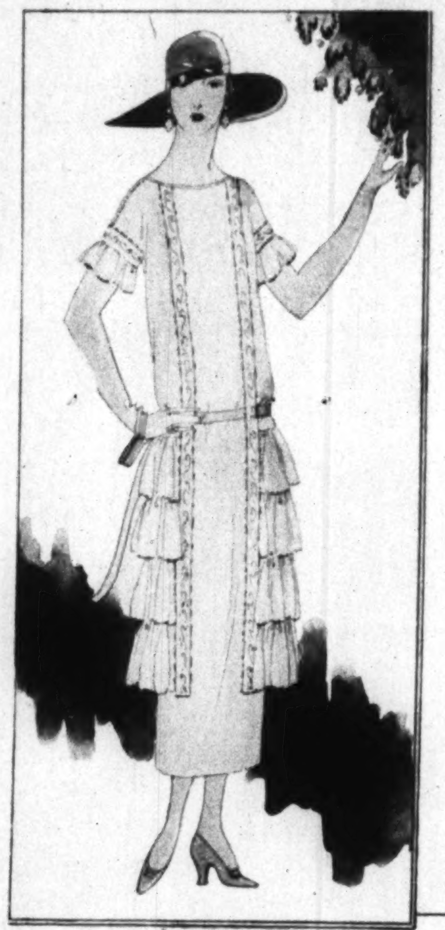
The New Styles Paris parades at the Races

you can start making them tomorrow



ALL PARIS is at the races where the great designers display their new creations! Into the pesage trips a mannequin in one of the new sleeveless frocks of dead white crêpe. Here a murmur of admiration greets some new modification of the cape back. There heads turn to observe the new use of flounces or the frock that sponsors tucks.

These are the new styles that you want yourself—and every one of them can be yours. There is a Butterick pattern ready for each one of them.

For at the races, at smart restaurants, at the play, at every fashionable gathering where new styles are shown, there is an expert from Butterick's Paris office. As each new mode appears, it is noted—its effect, its details, its success. Quickly that expert cables the news of each important style tendency. Sketches follow by fast steamer. And immediately patterns are made for each of the successful new modes.

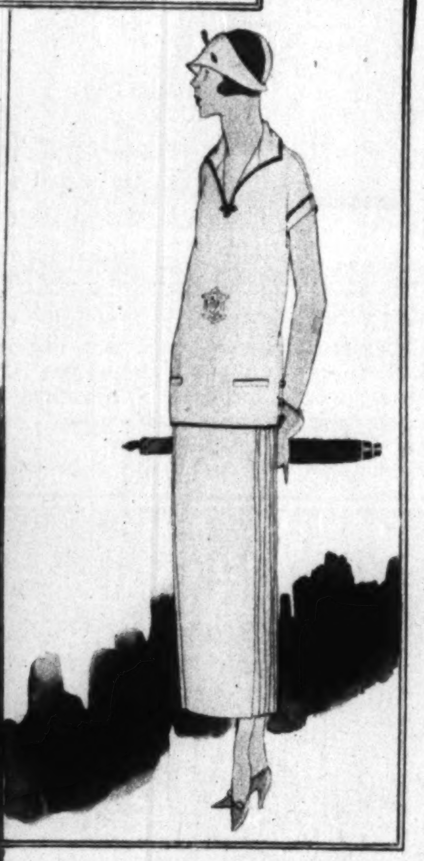
The new sleeveless frocks, the dresses with flounces used in new ways—you can buy a Butterick pattern for those modes! The partly plaited frocks Paris is wearing, the dresses with stripe-like tucks—there is a Butterick pattern ready for each new style! And with each pattern you get the secret of how to make that new French dress—the Deltor that shows you just how to cut out, put together, and finish that new style.

Because the Deltor gives you this complete unique fashion service, you are sure of the success of each French style that you select.

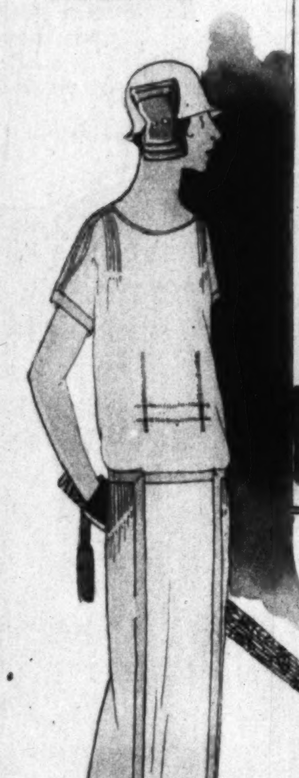
The Deltor is so complete in its service that women who know the time and material and effort it saves them, and the difference it makes in the look of their clothes, are no longer content with ordinary patterns.

The Deltor insures the success of each new style by Butterick of New York, of Chicago, of Paris, of London.

Ruffles used in the new ways are shown in Butterick patterns



Tucks and drawn work delight Paris and Butterick



The partially plaited frock is a great favorite—you find it in Butterick patterns

No other pattern approaches the complete service the Deltor gives you

The easiest pattern to use

Just what each piece is, which to put together first, and just how to put them together, step by step, is shown you in the Deltor. Every single step is shown you, not just one or two that leave you to work out the rest for yourself. No other pattern has a Deltor that shows you everything.

The only complete finishing directions in any pattern

The Deltor shows you how to give your clothes the French finish that is half the charm of Paris clothes. Other patterns practically ignore this all-important service. The Deltor shows you each tiny detail—no other pattern does.

The pattern that really saves you money

Ordinary patterns give you one, two, or maybe three general cutting charts. The Butterick Pattern with the Deltor, is the only pattern that insures you an individual cutting layout for your size and view laid on the very width material you are using. It saves material as no general chart can.

HOW THE MIGHTY WILSON DAM AT MUSCLE SHOALS WILL LOOK WHEN IT IS FINISHED—Better than any photographs thus far taken of the great Alabama power development project, this painting gives an idea of the immensity of the plant which Henry Ford wants the United States government to turn over to him. It is the most gigantic undertaking of its kind ever launched, being designed to supply 625,000 horse power through the harnessing of the Tennessee river. The dam, accurately pictured from the engineers' designs, is now under construction by the government and will be completed in the summer of 1925. It will be the largest concrete monolith in the world, surpassing in size even the famous Assuan dam in Egypt. Over its illuminated top will pass the traffic of three national highways.

(Copyright by Winsboro McClung, from Kadel & Herbert.)

ANGIER DUKE'S WIDOW, Mrs. Cordelia Biddle Duke, became the bride of Thomas Markoe Robertson in New York the other day, and provided the inspiration for this airy snapshot as she left St. Bartholomew's church with her husband after the ceremony.

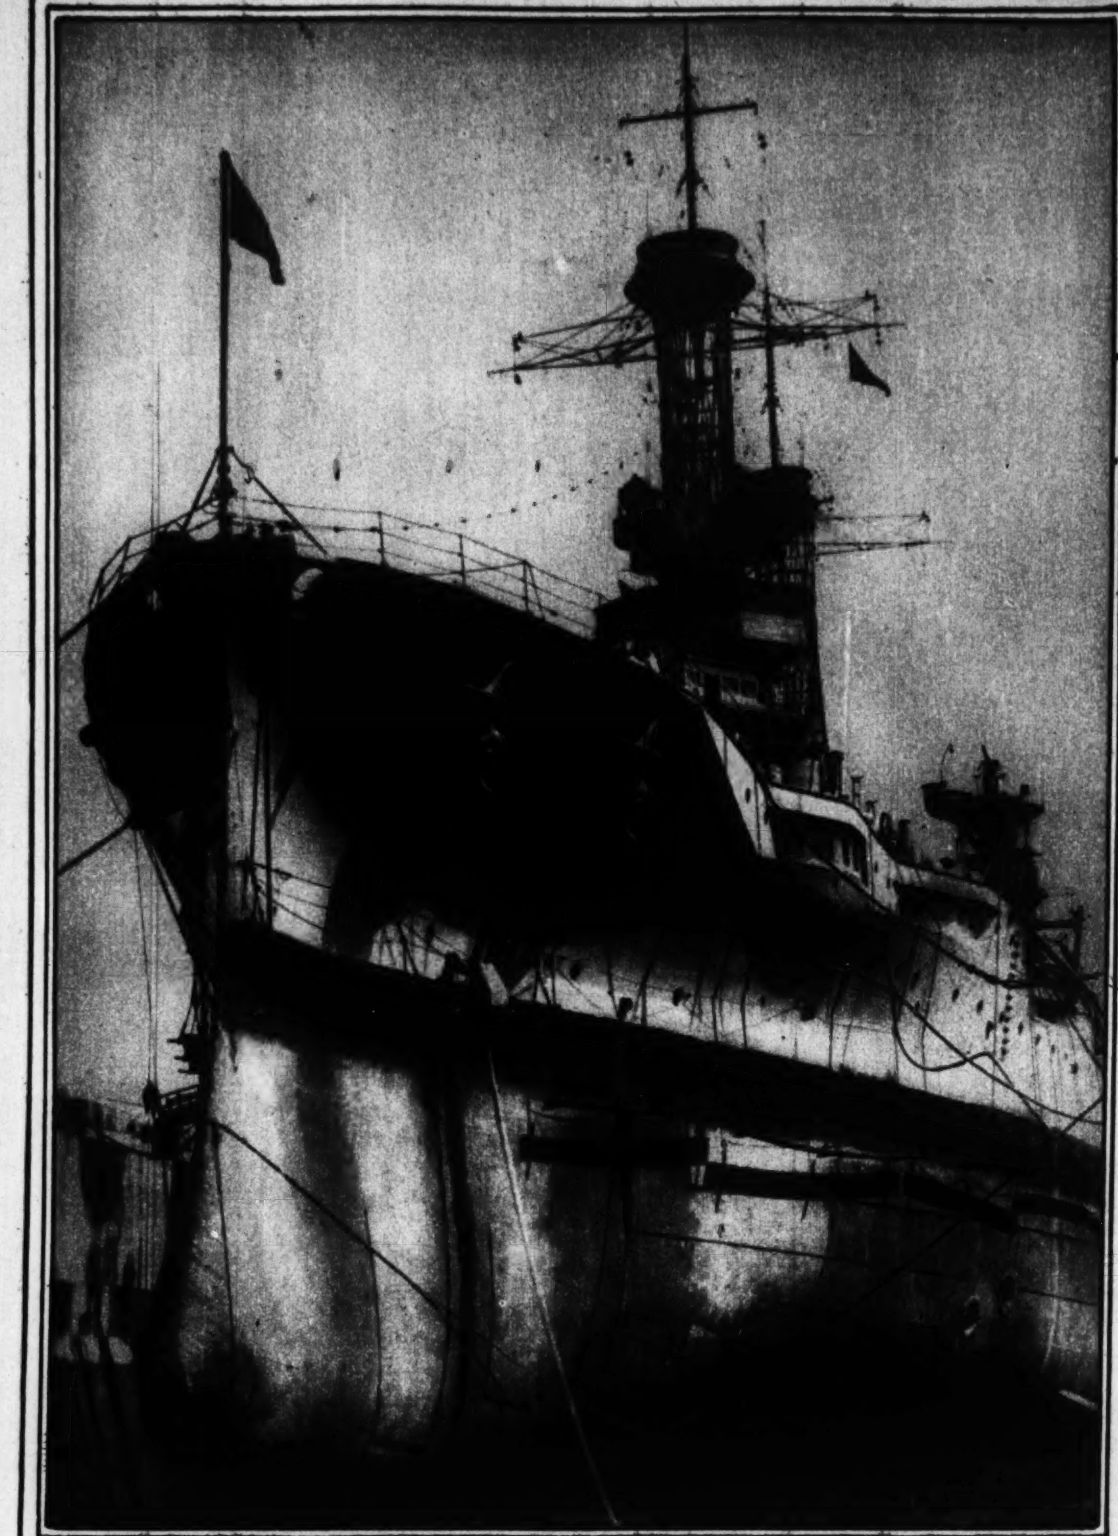
(Photograph from Pacific & Atlantic.)

AMONG THOSE PRESENT at the Robertson-Duke wedding were Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt II. and her daughters, Muriel and Consuelo. The picture shows them (with Mrs. Vanderbilt, of course, in the center) strolling up Park avenue on their way to the ceremony.

(Photograph copyright by Keystone.)

MORE VANDERBILTS—Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt and her daughter, Cornelia, photographed at the Biltmore, N. C., horse show shortly before the latter's wedding to the Rt. Hon. John F. A. Cecil. Can you tell which is the mother? She's at the right.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)



WHY DON'T BATTLESHIPS TIP OVER? is the illuminating legend supplied for this picture by the photographer who took it. Because, explains the camera man, so much of them is under water. Here is his proof—the U. S. S. Texas, in drydock for a scrubbing.

EXQUISITELY EMPHASIZING THE CHARM OF LOVELY WOMEN

THE POWER OF A SYMBOL

Today, EVERYWHERE, the Gray Goose of Wills Sainte Claire is known and understood. Whether it reposes on the chaste, silvered radiator of a Wills Sainte Claire car in front of a quiet home of limitless wealth—or flys silently past fine cars that are doing their best to prevent it—the Gray Goose of Wills Sainte Claire is known and understood.

* * *

To the hard-fisted man of affairs, who takes a sheer sportsman's joy in squeezing the last ounce of possibility out of a dollar, and a mile, and a minute—it means a great new-found leverage, a great new gear assembly in the machine of his business, and of his living that steps up his power and his play time by giving him a new, uncanny mastery over distance and hours.

* * *

To the woman of independent intelligence, gifted and trained in the art of judging finely between good and bad, it means a great new broadening of her power of enjoyment—a swifter, softer and silenter way of getting about.

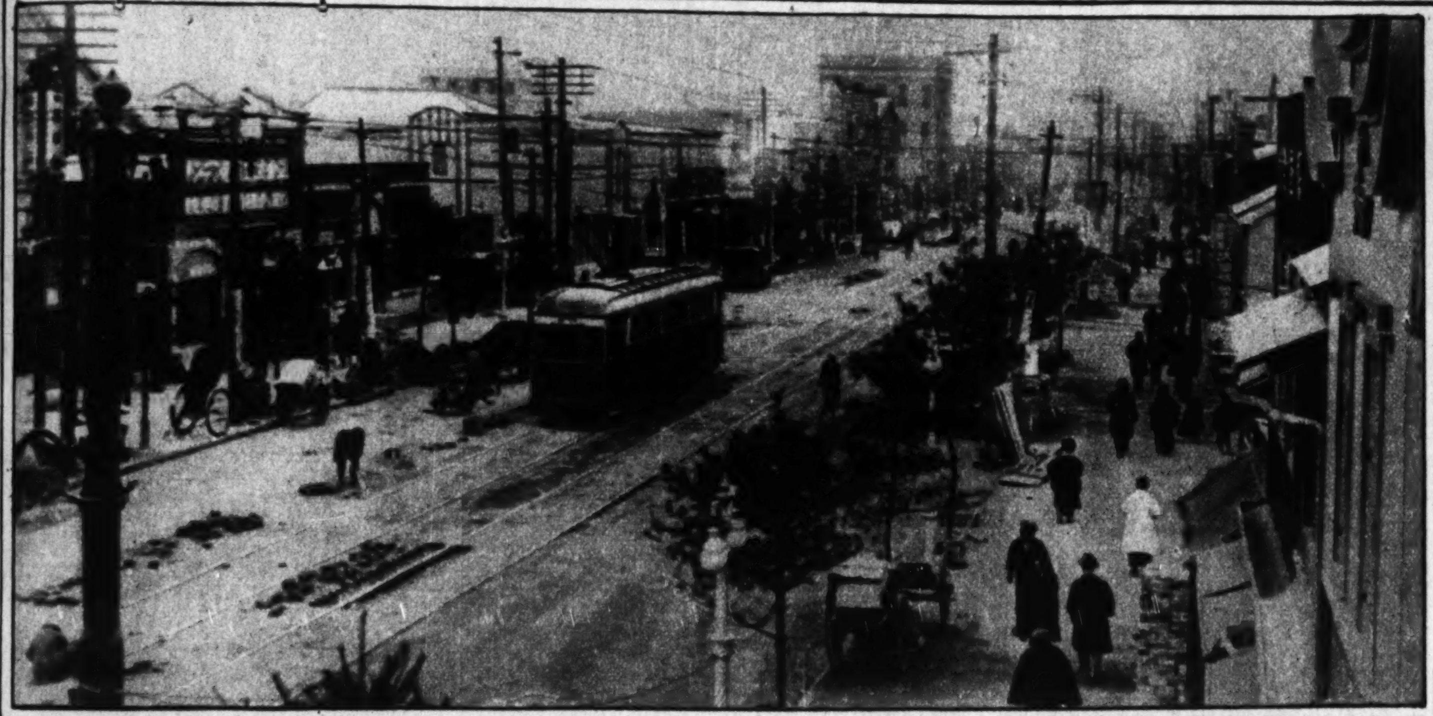
REBUILDING IN JAPAN—Here is a section of the Ginza, Tokio's Broadway, photographed shortly after the great earthquake, when the apparently hopeless task of clearing away the wreckage was just starting. Note the shattered walls and the scene of desolation in the middle distance. Now look at the picture below.



THIS IS THE SAME STREET, photographed from approximately the same spot, a short time ago. The wreckage is gone, little trees have been set out, and new buildings, quickly erected, are in evidence. Shops, restaurants, and theaters again line the way and normal activity is gradually being resumed. American-made goods, it is reported, are more in evidence than ever.

HE CATCHES LIONS BAREHANDED, does Bob Baker of Libby, Mont. In twenty years Bob has captured more than 500 mountain lions, all alive and kicking and biting and snarling. A robe and a couple of good dogs to run down the prey are all Bob needs for his hunting. His daring pays well, too. Besides the state bounty on lions, he gets fancy prices for them from zoos and circuses.

NORMANDY VOILE

ITS colors are so charming and clear, its designs are so dainty and original, that Normandy Voile makes the most attractive little "dress-up" frocks imaginable! But it's just as popular for school and general wear — it tubs so well, is so easy to iron, and its little dots are absolutely fast.

In back of the very charming ready-to-wear Normandy Voile Frock shown above, are four of the numerous patterns especially appropriate for children's dresses.

The many poor imitations make it advisable to buy only when you see the words "Normandy Fabric" on the selvage, or a "Normandy Voile" label in the dress.

A PARTY OF ADVENTURERS on Nisqually glacier, in Rainier national park, Washington. Instant Beauty Effects with Moist Hair Brush

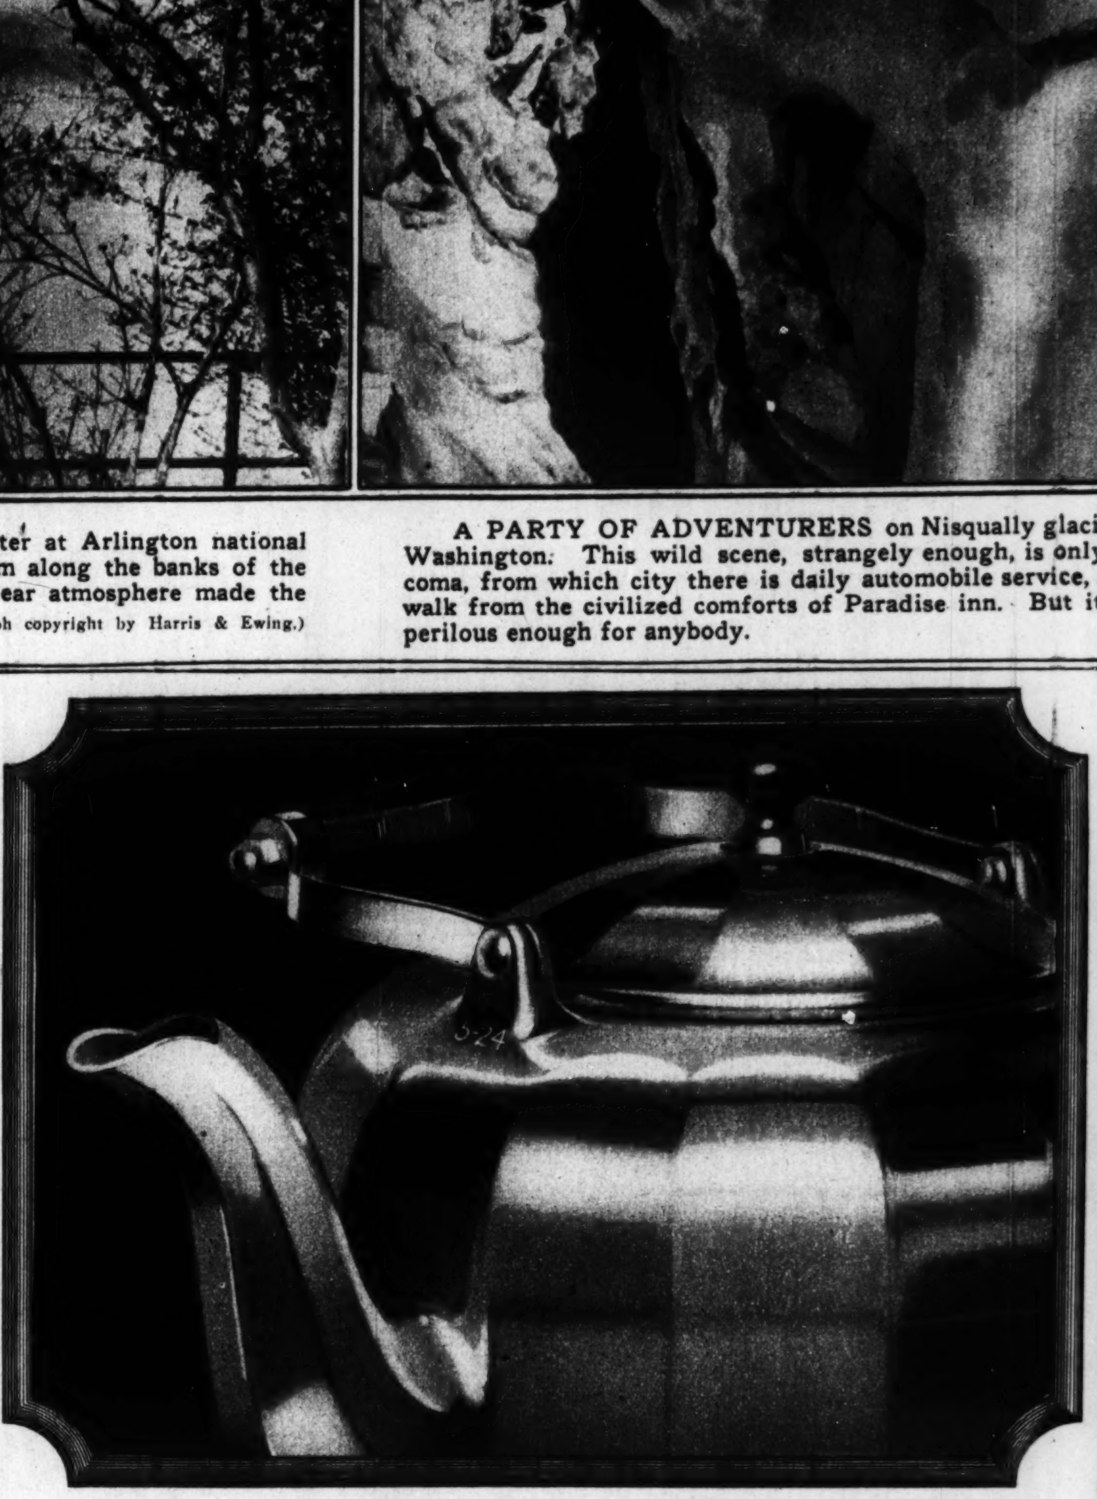
Girls! Try It! A Gleamy Mass of Soft, Wavy Hair

You actually see plain, flat, oily or colorless hair become soft, fluffy, lustrous and abundant in a moment.

When combing and dressing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is astonishing! You can do your hair up immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy—a mass of gleamy hair, sparkling with life and possessing that incomparable softness, freshness and luxuriance,—yet not greasy, oily or sticky.

While beautifying the hair "Danderine" is also toning and stimulating each single hair to grow thick, long and strong. Hair stops falling out and dandruff disappears. Get a bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter and just see how healthy and youthful your hair becomes.



Date Your Mirro Aluminum

If you want to know how long Mirro Aluminum lasts, date it. Just mark on it with the point of a knife the month and year; for example, "5—24." Then prepare to wait very patiently.

A simple test, but it will prove to you that there is only one cost worth considering when buying kitchen ware; the true cost—the price you pay, divided by the years of service. It will prove that good aluminum ware like Mirro is unsurpassed—many say unapproached—in durability and low cost by the year.

Women who have used Mirro know that Mirro utensils stand the wear; and that their smooth, polished surface is exceedingly easy to care for.

The reason is found in good thick metal, made dense, tough, and glassy-hard by rolling and rerolling under eight tons' pressure.

Even so, Mirro is not expensive. If it does cost more than some other wares, that is because it is better, thicker, more durable. You get more. It is more beautiful, too, but that costs you nothing.

Buy Mirro next time, date it, and see for yourself. The utensil you need will surely be found in the complete Mirro line with its 610 articles; and probably in our Miniature Catalog No. A14, which we should like to send you. You can examine Mirro, The Finest Aluminum, at good stores anywhere.

I Have Found Out How to Get Rid of Superfluous Hair At Once

Here's the Secret

I had become utterly discouraged with a heavy growth of hair on my face and lip. I tried every way to get rid of it—all the depilatories. I had heard of, electrolysis, even a razor.

I thought it was hopeless until there came to me the simple but truly wonderful discovery which has brought such great relief and joy to me and to other women that it really cannot be expressed in words.

My face is now not only perfectly free from superfluous hair but smooth and soft as a baby's, all by use of the simple method which I will gladly explain to any woman who will send her name and address.

This amazing method is different from anything you have ever used—not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It will remove superfluous hair at once and will make the skin soft, smooth and beautifully attractive. Its use means an adorable appearance. And you face the brightest light—the most brilliant electric lamp—even the glare of sunlight joyously.

With this method, used according to the simple directions I will give you, your trouble with superfluous hair is over permanently. You will never again appear with that ugly growth to disfigure your face.

So overjoyed was I with the results this discovery brought to me that I gave it my own name—Lanzette.

A book that tells just how this wonderful method gets rid of superfluous hair is free upon request. Don't send a penny—just a letter or postcard. Address Annette Lanzette, Dept. [illegible], care Hygienic Laboratories, 204 S. Peoria Street, Chicago, Ill.

Nature-Made Spring Tonic

and a Luscious Food

Best for

Peeling

START ten breakfasts with a glass of orange juice and note the better days that follow.

A better appetite, due to stimulating, natural salts and acids.

Better digestion, too, for these salts and acids are natural digestants as well as appetizers.

Fresh vitamines in abundance. Orange juice is rich in these life-giving elements of food.

More regularity of habit also is the result of good fruit juice.

Though known as "acid fruit," oranges, after digestion, have an alkaline reaction in the blood which offsets the acidity caused by other foods--one more reason for the daily, purifying glass of orange juice.

You'll enjoy "better days," in fact, from every standpoint when you take this delicious, natural Spring tonic with every morning meal.

Make the ten-day test and see.

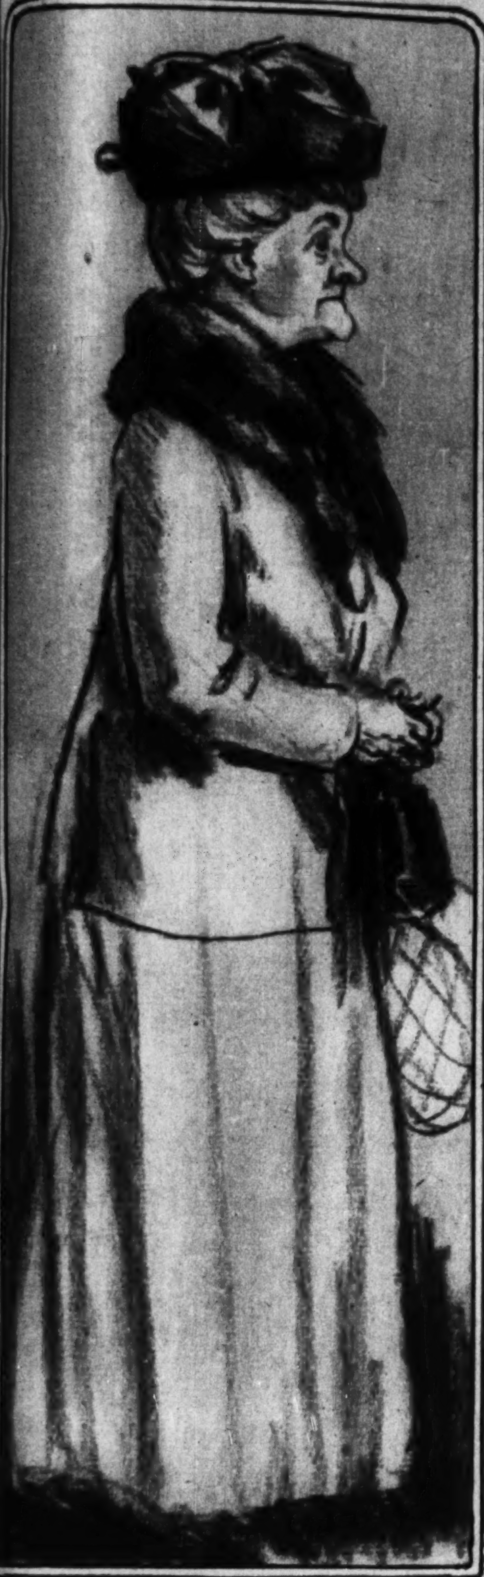
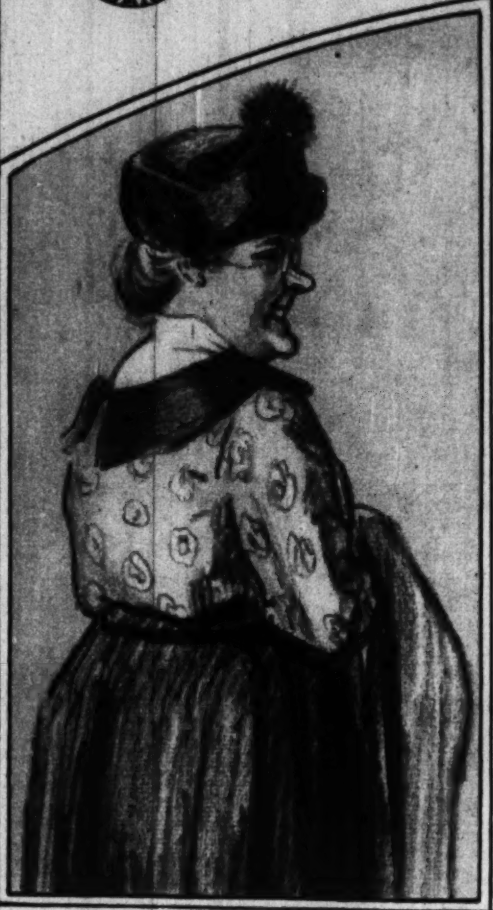
THE LANDLADY

—By—
W. E. HILL

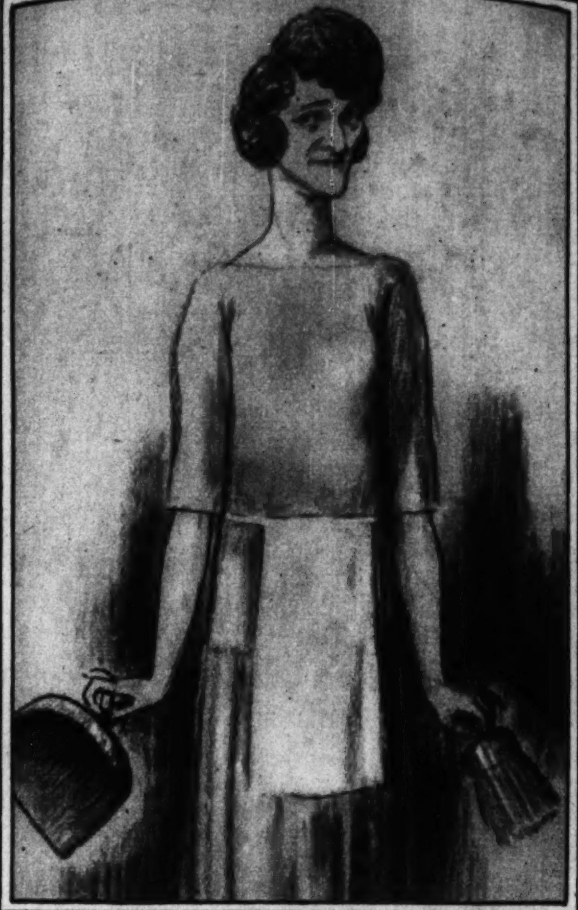
Copyright, 1924, by
The Chicago Tribune



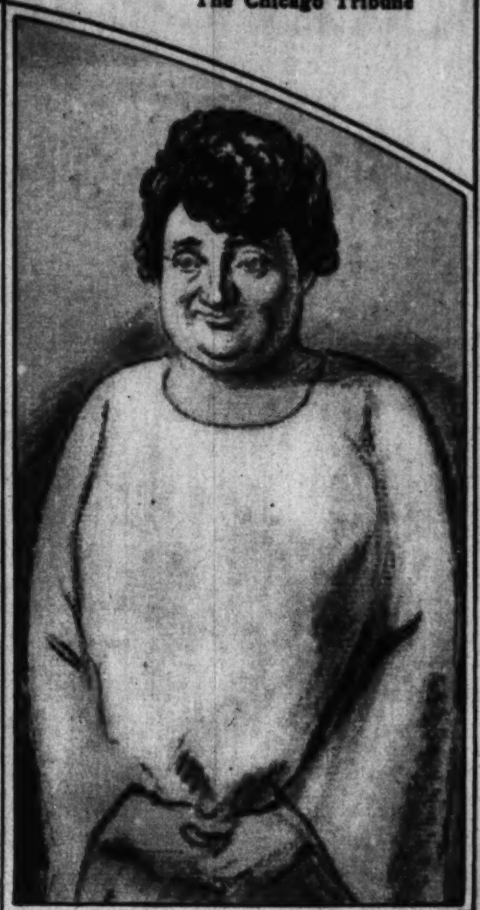
The landlady who boasts of the home atmosphere is out shopping for a nice bit of hip steak and other delicacies of the season.



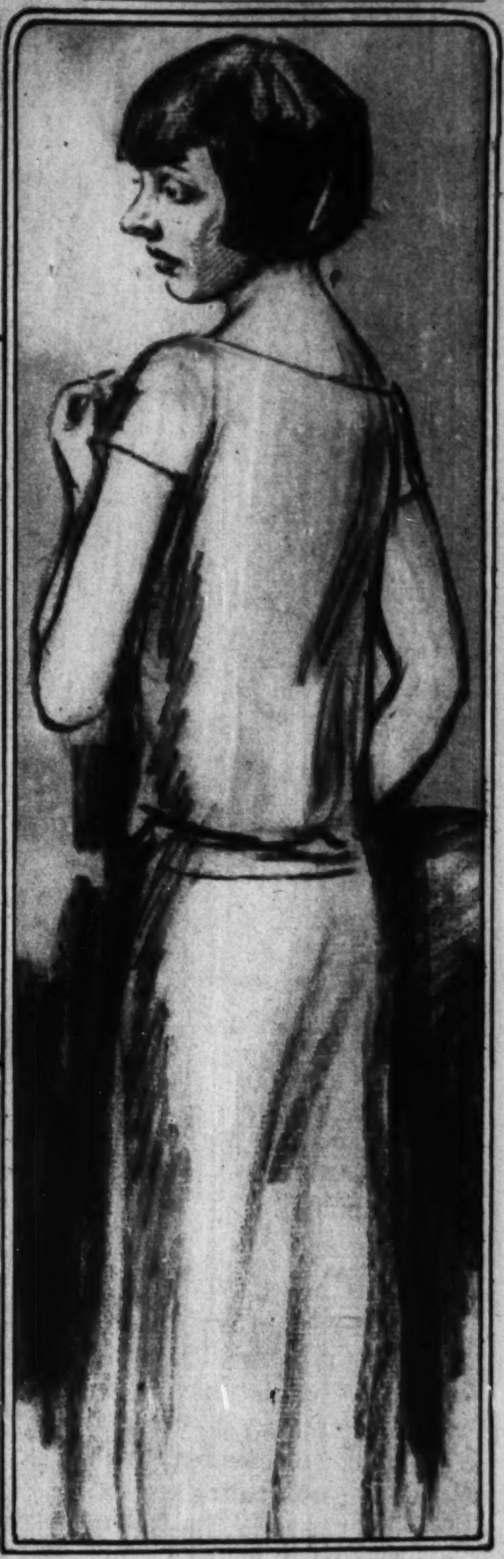
The summertime landlady takes in a city boarder or two for June, July and August. More for company than anything else.



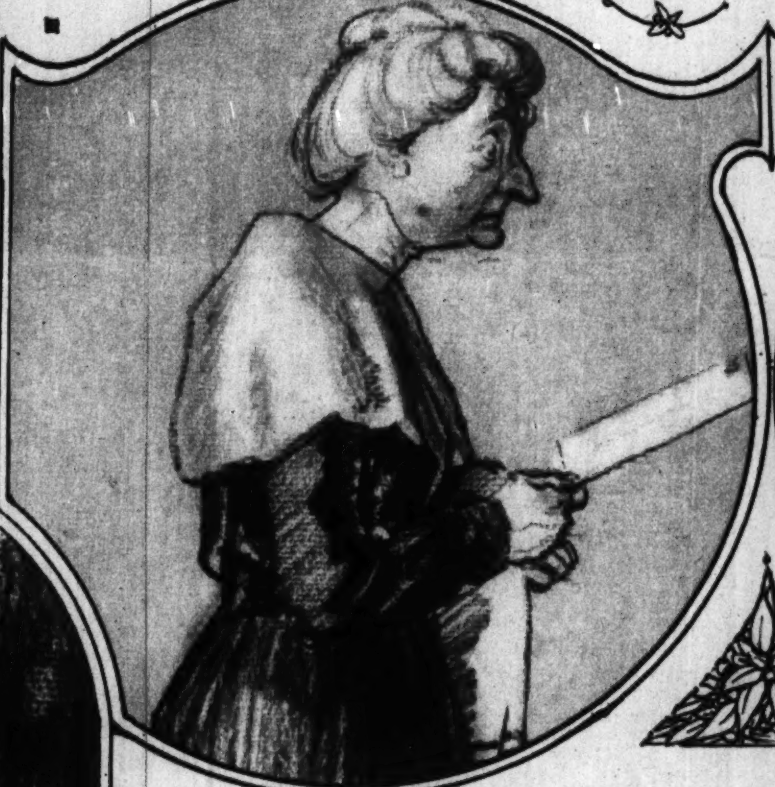
The pathetic landlady has had SUCH a sad life. She will be overjoyed to tell you all about how cruel her lawful wedded husband was, going off and leaving her that way. She has a sad, sweet smile.



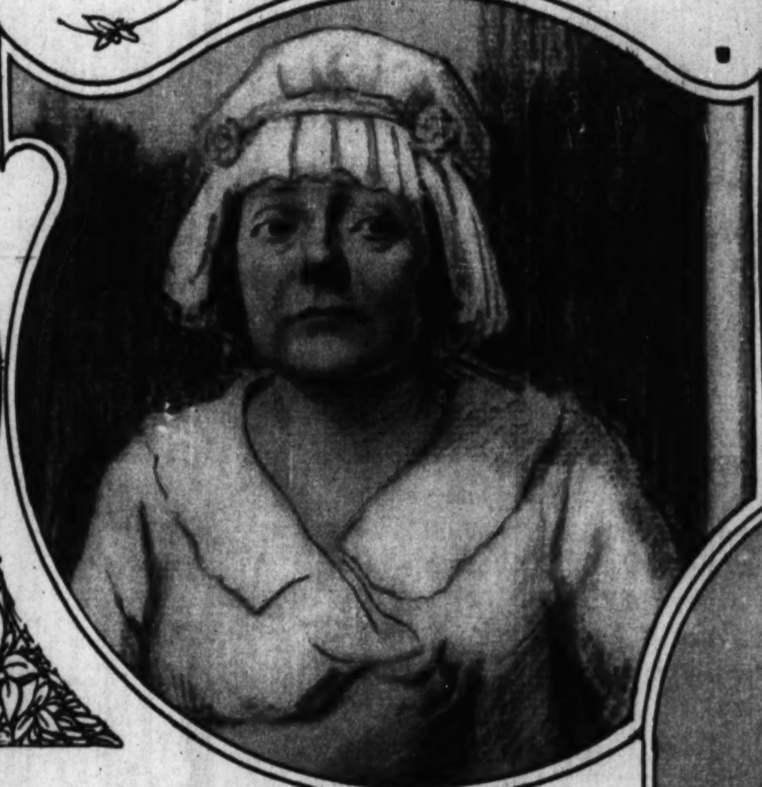
The landlady who likes to let her second floor front and back to nice doddering old gentlemen.



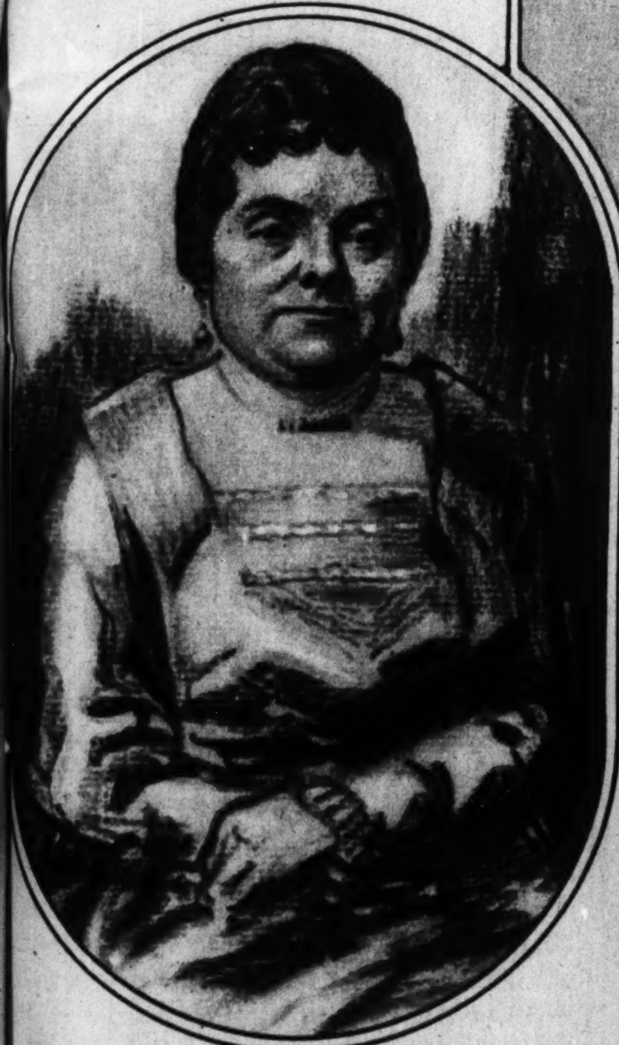
This is the landlady's lovely daughter, hoping to goodness the callers won't find out that Mamma takes lodgers.



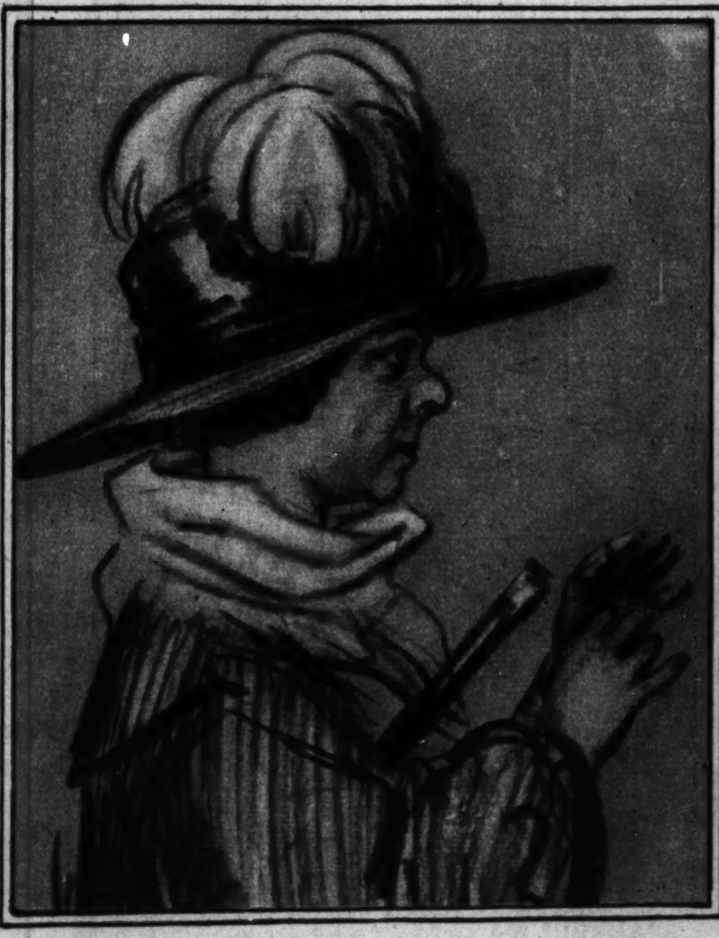
The morose landlady always expects the worst of her lodgers. Doesn't like the look of some one's mail, not one little bit. "Now what CAN he be doing up there in his room all this time?" she will say. "I almost wish I hadn't let the room to him—something told me," etc., etc.



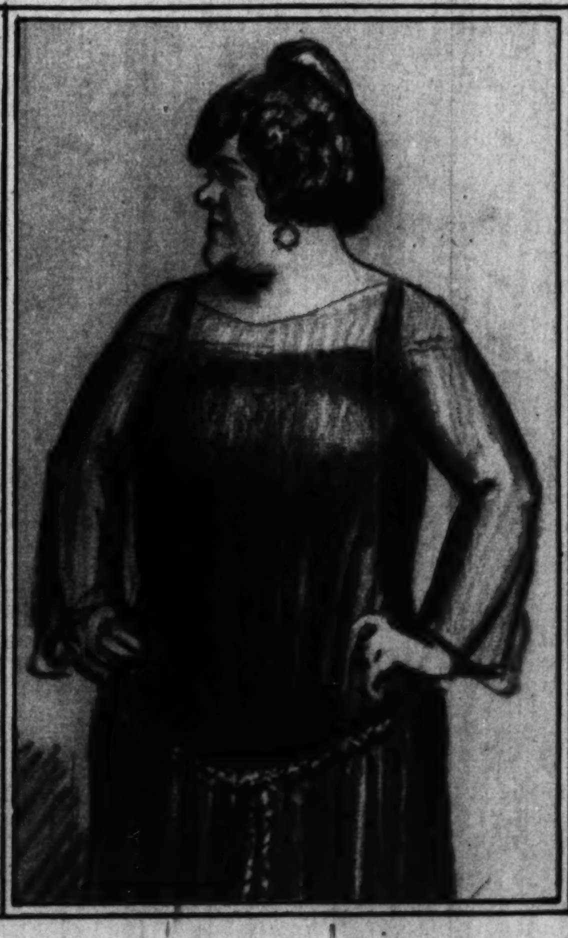
The suspicious landlady is always suspecting some one of thievery, knavery, or chicanery. What with the hot water faucet being left running on Saturday night, or the lights in the second floor rear left burning, life is indeed a burden. The suspicious landlady is usually suing ex-boarders or being sued by them.



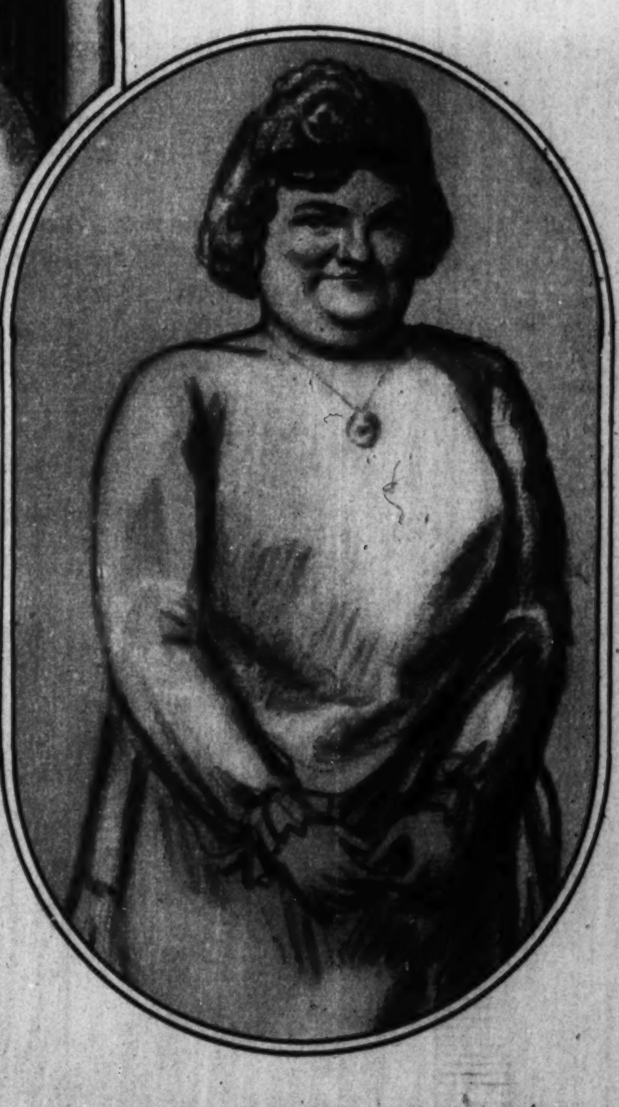
The landlady who once saw better days still has her evening at home. Any lodgers lying around loose will be inveigled into attending, and will be entertained by tales of the good old days when the best was none too good and the choicest members of the four hundred graced the festive board.



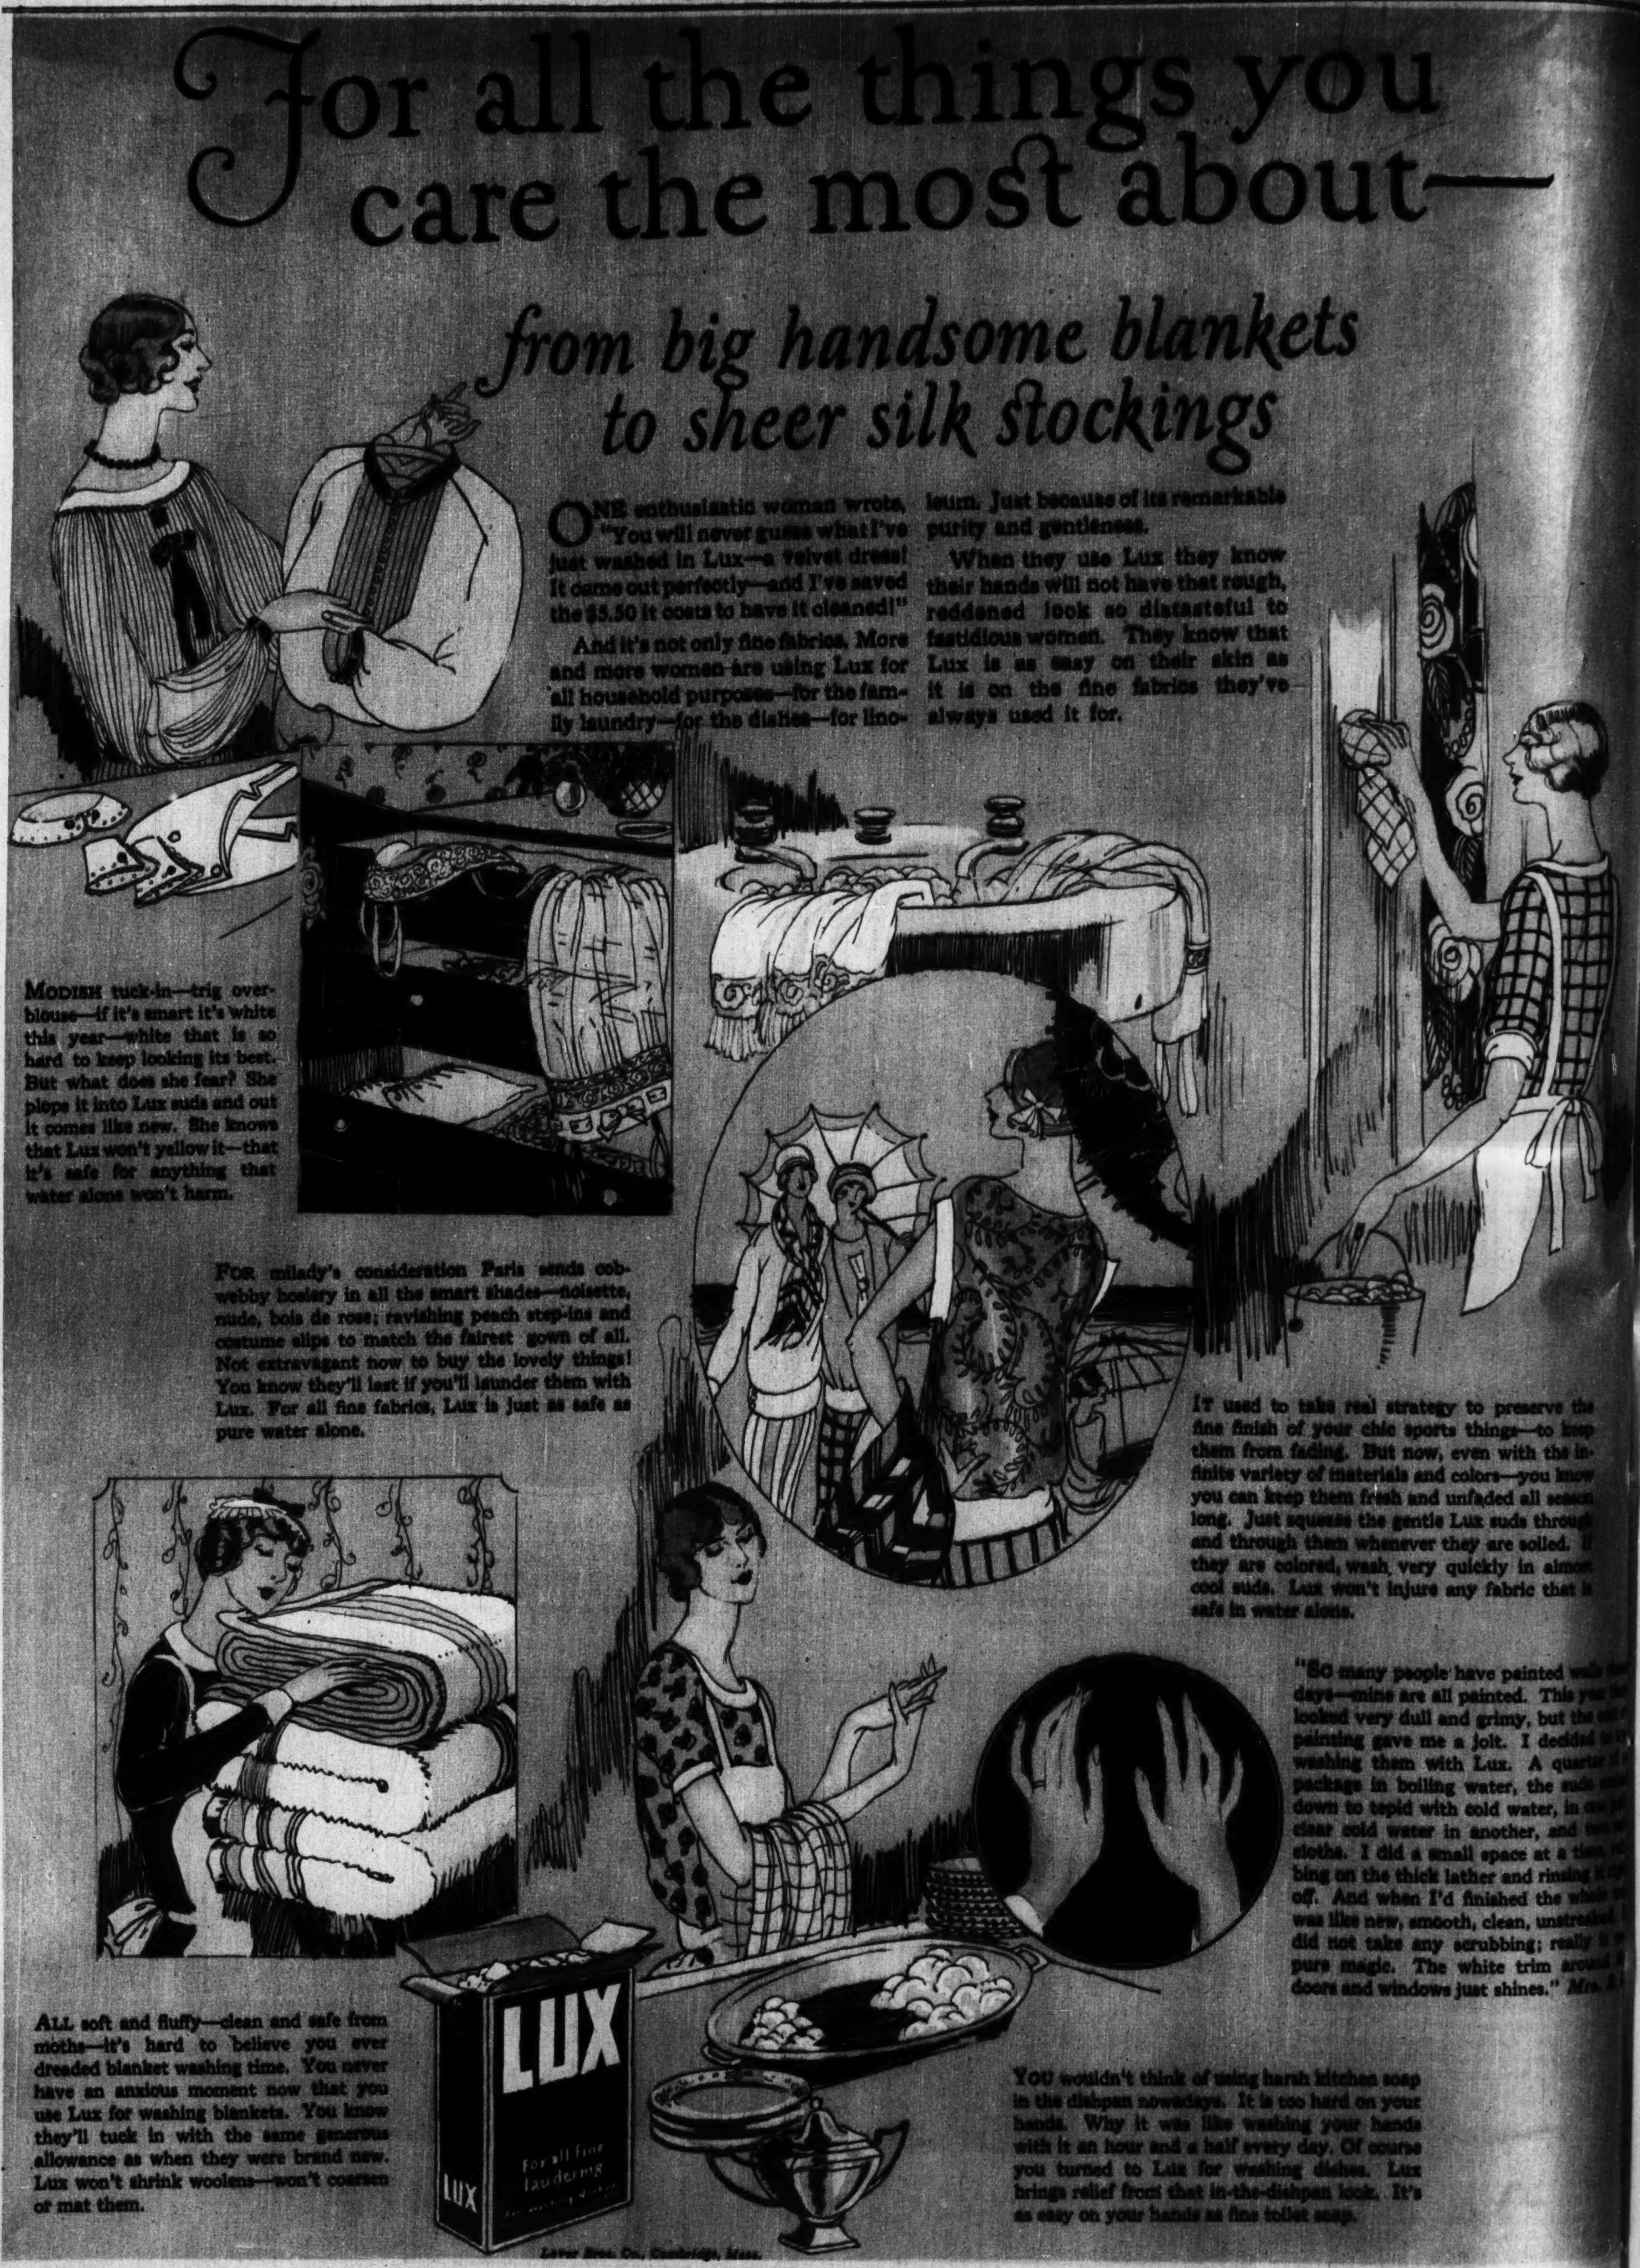
The social landlady dearly loves a few young men in her household. A young male escort is invaluable on the night of the monthly ball given by the members of the North Dakota society at the Hotel Wallop.



The theatrical landlady used to be in the business herself. Time was when she was the whole plot, lines and lyrics of "The London Belles."



The nice motherly landlady wants to mother all the young men lodgers. The young ladies can shift for themselves, the minxes!



For all the things you care the most about—from big handsome blankets to sheer silk stockings

ONE enthusiastic woman wrote, "You will never guess what I've just washed in Lux—a velvet dress! It came out perfectly—and I've saved the $5.50 it costs to have it cleaned!"

And it's not only fine fabrics. More and more women are using Lux for all household purposes—for the family laundry—for the dishes—for linoleum. Just because of its remarkable purity and gentleness.

When they use Lux they know their hands will not have that rough, reddened look so distasteful to fastidious women. They know that Lux is as easy on their skin as it is on the fine fabrics they've always used it for.

MODISH tuck-in—trig over-blouse—if it's smart it's white this year—white that is so hard to keep looking its best. But what does she fear? She plops it into Lux suds and out it comes like new. She knows that Lux won't yellow it—that it's safe for anything that water alone won't harm.

FOR milady's consideration Paris sends cobwebby hosiery in all the smart shades—noisette, nude, bois de rose; ravishing peach step-ins and costume slips to match the fairest gown of all. Not extravagant now to buy the lovely things! You know they'll last if you'll launder them with Lux. For all fine fabrics, Lux is just as safe as pure water alone.

IT used to take real strategy to preserve the fine finish of your chic sports things—to keep them from fading. But now, even with the infinite variety of materials and colors—you know you can keep them fresh and unfaded all season long. Just squeeze the gentle Lux suds through and through them whenever they are soiled. If they are colored, wash very quickly in almost cool suds. Lux won't injure any fabric that is safe in water alone.

"SO many people have painted wa days—mine are all painted. This yea looked very dull and grimy, but the painting gave me a jolt. I decided washing them with Lux. A quarter package in boiling water, the suds down to tepid with cold water, in on clear cold water in another, and tw cloths. I did a small space at a time, bing on the thick lather and rinsing off. And when I'd finished the whol was like new, smooth, clean, unstreak did not take any scrubbing; really it pure magic. The white trim around doors and windows just shines." Mrs.

ALL soft and fluffy—clean and safe from moths—it's hard to believe you ever dreaded blanket washing time. You never have an anxious moment now that you use Lux for washing blankets. You know they'll tuck in with the same generous allowance as when they were brand new. Lux won't shrink woolens—won't coarsen or mat them.

YOU wouldn't think of using harsh kitchen soap in the dishpan nowadays. It is too hard on your hands. Why it was like washing your hands with it an hour and a half every day. Of course you turned to Lux for washing dishes. Lux brings relief from that in-the-dishpan look. It's as easy on your hands as fine toilet soap.

THE "RISING TIDE OF COLOR" IN CALIFORNIA—Japanese immigration, long a troublesome problem on the Pacific coast and now an acute international perplexity, is vividly illustrated in the pictures on this page, newly taken by a persistent photographer with a gift of gab. They show scenes in the Sacramento valley, considered by many the best agricultural district in the state—scenes typical and common enough, but rarely glimpsed by outsiders, since the Japanese are reluctant to face a camera. Here are part of the 150 oriental schoolchildren at Walnut Grove, Cal., pledging allegiance to the flag of the United States. After their American schooling is over each day they go to oriental schools, where they are instructed in the traditions and religion of their mother country.

(Photograph series from Pacific & Atlantic.)

PICKING ASPARAGUS on Ryde island, near Walnut Grove. Hours in the scorching sun mean nothing to these hardy little workmen.

THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF ACRES of the valuable Sacramento valley property are controlled and operated by Japanese—thrifty and industrious folk, but an alien race, and accustomed to standards of living which no American wants to accept. The laborers in this big onion field work almost literally for "next to nothing."

CHEERFUL WORKERS in the asparagus washing plant on Ryde island. The woman dons her rubber boots and pitches in with a zest equal to that of the men.

JAPANESE FARM HANDS on the C. C. Morse ranch, near Clarksburg, Cal. This picture was obtained only by dint of long argument and much persuasion on the part of the photographer.

California

A place for YOU
Where life is better

EACH MONTH come new thousands of fine, every-day people to California to build their permanent homes and establish their occupations in this land of wonderful beauty, wonderful advantage, wonderful progress.

Because this great State can support a population of thirty millions, there is still abundant room. There is room for you—room to grow and prosper—room to live as you would like to live!

Country and City Advantages

Farmers in the Great Valley and the many other central California valleys produce more than two-thirds of California's annual four hundred million dollar harvest of crops and fruits.

In the great metropolitan San Francisco Bay district with its high average of sunshine-days, thousands of industrial plants operate, and thousands of workers live in a climate that combines the maximum efficiency temperatures for mental and physical effort and enjoyment. Sixty-four per cent of California's income dollar comes from manufactures.

What California Offers You

Everywhere, in cities, suburbs and country, life in California is better. It is better in the Great Central Valley, 400 miles long, with its fertile lands and tremendous harvests. It is better in the quick access to mountains, ocean, national parks, lakes, redwood forests and to city advantages that everyone can reach. It is better in cash returns.

California almost surely has a place for you. Come and discover it this year. Any railroad in America will sell you a low-cost, round trip excursion ticket to San Francisco on or after May 15th, and you can then see for yourself what California offers and why you can get much more out of life in enjoyment and profit by living in California.

Come to San Francisco

Come to San Francisco, America's coolest summer city and the headquarters of Californians Inc., a non-profit organization of citizens and institutions interested in the sound development of the State. Some of the most beautiful suburban districts in California adjoin this great port, the metropolis and trading center of the Great Valley and of the garden valleys of the Coast Range.

Californians Inc. will give you every possible assistance when you arrive, and aid you in planning your trips or choosing your home. Write today for the illustrated, free booklet, "California, Where Life Is Better." It tells a story you should know, and every statement in it is authoritative. Fill in and mail the coupon and we will send it to you.

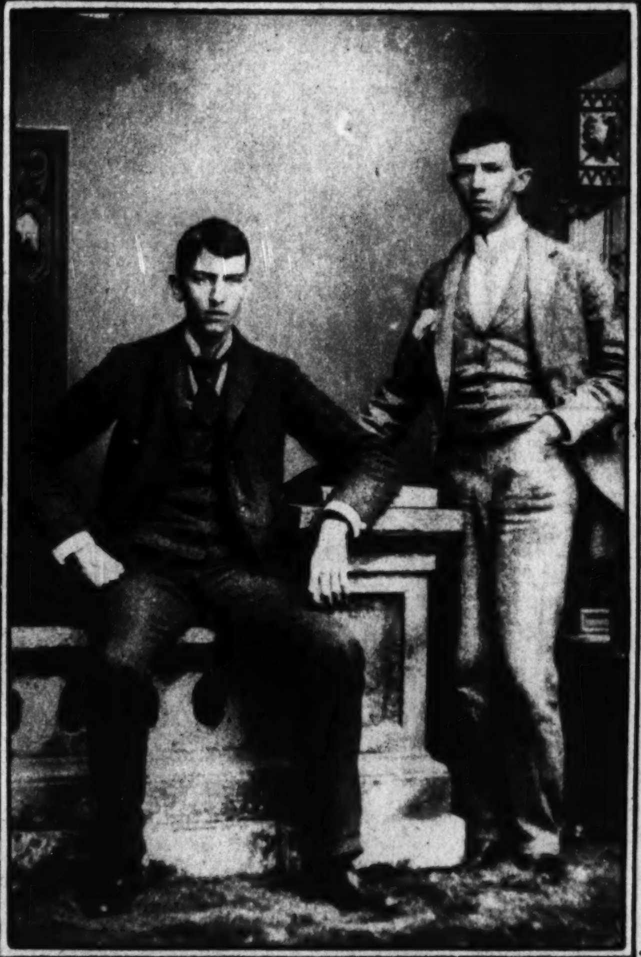
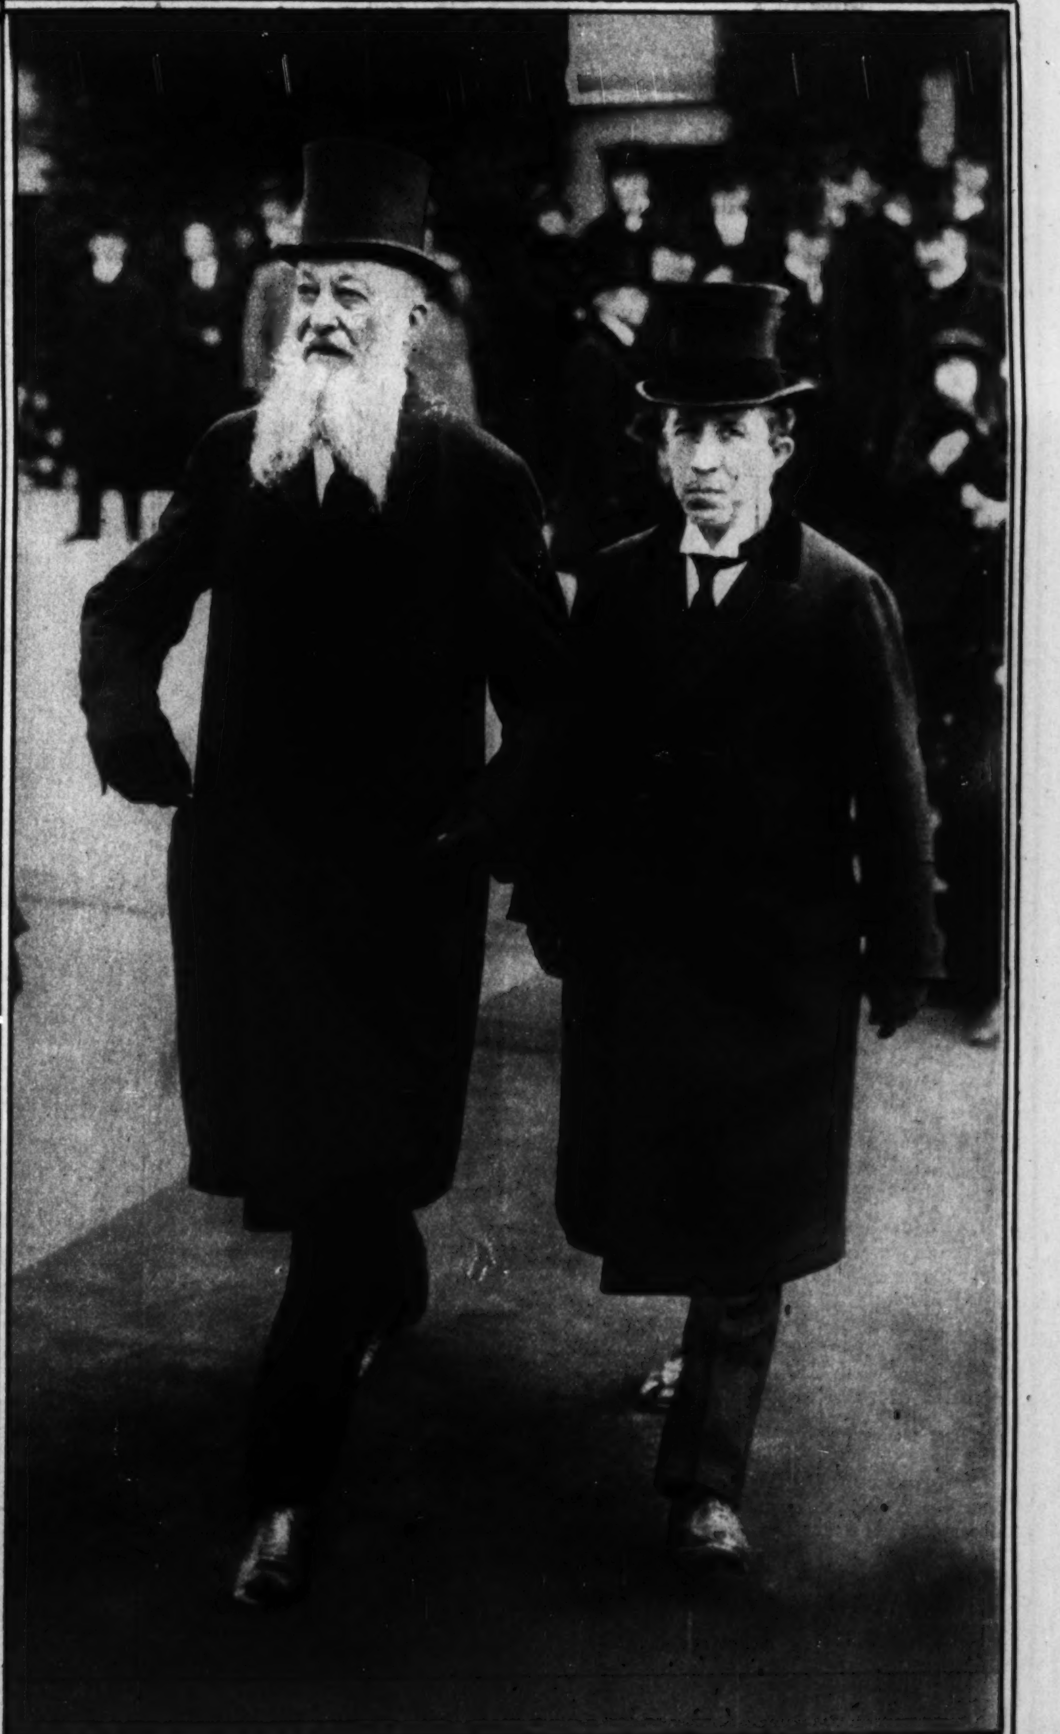
NEWPORT HAD A THRILL the other day when the oil tanker Llewellyn Howland went on the rocks about a mile and a half off shore, providing an impressive spectacle of shipwreck. The vessel's tanks were smashed and 26,000 barrels of heavy oil were spilled on the water, to be washed up on fashionable Bailey's Beach, where, it is said, bathing won't be as pleasant as usual this summer.

(Photograph from Wide World.)



REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN George Ade and John T. McCutcheon were gay young college blades at old Purdue? George of the slangy fables doesn't look very humorous here. John T., the ace of cartoonists, pretty stern, too. Probably having one's picture taken was a serious business in those days. Mr. Ade left Purdue in 1887, and Mr. McCutcheon in 1889.



LAST RITES FOR HUGO STINNES, Germany's mightiest industrial magnate, called forth a great gathering of notables in Berlin. Here, at the left, is Admiral Von Tirpitz, not much heard about since he was the "man of iron" in the U-boat campaign which brought the United States into the great war.

THEY COULDN'T DECIDE where the new statue of Gen. "Summer Wonderland"

it is called by thousands who have been here

HERE in a small section of the United States travelers find the wonders of three continents combined.

And each day is fine for outdoor play—no rain to mar a single hour. Each night is cool enough for blankets. Southern California is an ideal summerland, as you will see by the forty-seven year records of the average mean temperatures recorded by the U. S. Weather Bureau in a central city of this district:

47 Junes	66 deg.	47 Augusts	71 deg.
47 Julys	70 deg.	47 Septembers	69 deg.

You motor for hours on a mile-high boulevard. Or you pass between miles of orange groves that are strange and different.

You see a desert like Sahara. You wander in gardens of rare blossoms from many lands. Or you stroll along a sandy beach.

Come and see. Play golf or tennis. Hike, ride and swim. Fish in mountain brooks or deep sea fishing grounds. Do anything you like to do. Rest. Relax. That's what you need for a real vacation. It will send you home fresh and eager for the coming year's activities.

Special round-trip summer railroad rates. Ask your railroad ticket agent. Or send the coupon to us for additional information.

Come now, or come this summer. Here is your ideal vacation-land.

Nearby sources of raw material, an unmatched year-round climate, the cheapest hydro-electric power in America, and healthy, happy workers have brought an amazing industrial growth here with untold opportunities for manufacturers and investors.

A MENACE FROM GREENLAND—From the deck of the coast guard cutter Modoc, assigned to international ice patrol duty, a giant iceberg is seen floating in the North Atlantic. The crew of the ship is charting its position and drift, and will send out radio warnings to all approaching steamers. Near this spot, and only a short time before the picture was taken, memorial services were held on the Modoc over the ocean grave of the Titanic for those who perished in the greatest of iceberg collision disasters twelve years ago. Brush your teeth with Forhan's

Every man and woman is in danger of Pyorrhea.

According to reliable dental statistics, four persons out of every five past 40, and thousands younger, too, are victims of this disease.

Are you willing to pay the penalty—lost teeth and shattered health?
If not, don't neglect your teeth.

Visit your dentist regularly for tooth and gum inspection, and make Forhan's For the Gums your dentifrice. Most pleasant to the taste.

Forhan's For the Gums, if used in time and used consistently, will help prevent Pyorrhea or check its course; and keep the gums firm, the teeth white, and the mouth healthy.

There is only one tooth paste of proved efficacy in the treatment of Pyorrhea. It is the one that many thousands have found beneficial for years. For your own sake, make sure that you get it. Ask for, and insist upon, Forhan's For the Gums. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

TWO THOUSAND TASTY DINNERS, conversing happily in duck language, floated down the Grand Canal to Chinkaing the other day to grace the tables of lucky Chinese families. The wily commission merchant simply hired a few coolies and a couple of boats, hazed his wares into the water and let them paddle themselves to market. They believe in using their water resources to the limit in China.

No more shiny nose

New cream fills long-felt need— in 60 days wins 30,000 Chicago users!

Vauv
Vauv
for shiny nose, forehead etc.

A year ago, Vauv was just an idea in the brain of a clever woman who realized the need of an effective remedy for shiny, oily skin.

Less than two months ago, it was offered to fastidious men and women of the middle-west.

Today, its users in Chicago alone number 30,000.

Instant acceptance, enthusiastic endorsement! For Vauv has a new effectiveness. Unlike the ordinary creams and powder that you have fussed with so long, it does not cover up shine—but actually prevents it.

So cool and soothing! The mere touch is a pleasure. Apply it to the nose, the forehead—the whole face. Rub it in quickly, lightly—the shine has disappeared! In its place has come a delicate freshness; a new finish—soft and fine and smooth as satin.

And better yet, this finish lasts—for a whole day or evening! At dinner, the theatre, the dance—imagine, if you can, the luxury of knowing that your skin looks just as fresh and lovely as it did when you first applied this dainty cream.

Vauv is more than a beautifier, in the ordinary sense of the word. It is a corrective—gentle and absolutely harmless—for shiny, oily skin. It contains a certain porous substance that absorbs excess oil and perspiration; and a certain mild astringent element that reduces enlarged pores.

That is why, as you continue to use Vauv, your skin gradually becomes finer and firmer; less and less inclined toward shine and oiliness. You will have less trouble with blackheads, too. For Vauv does not clog the pores. On the contrary, it cleanses them; for when it is washed off, it carries away the impurities that it has absorbed from the surface of the skin.

And it has so many other advantages that you will appreciate! It makes a perfect base for powder. It protects the skin from sun, wind and germ-laden dust. For your special convenience, it is put up in tube form. You will be surprised how long this generous 50c tube will last—for a month or more, even with regular daily using!

Ask for Vauv where you buy your toilet goods. If it is not yet on sale, send us 50c and 3c postage; and we will mail you a regular-size tube at once.

THE VAUV CO. (for Jane Morgan)
205-B Blair Avenue Cincinnati, Ohio

Men like Vauv especially after shaving

Men are enthusiastic over Vauv as an after-shaving cream. They like the cool, fresh feeling that it gives; its soothing effect on irritated skin. They find new ease in the thought that once they have applied Vauv, they can be free for the day or evening from the old embarrassing shine, oiliness and moisture.

They are not Keds unless the name Keds is on the shoe

The hardest grilling sport shoes ever got —a whole season on the feet of one of the greatest tennis players of all times—and still good for more!

ATHLETIC-TRIM KEDS

Keds with athletic-trim come in various styles—lace-to-toe and lace-to-instep, black, brown, and grey trim. They are built for the hardest sports and vacation wear.

GRILLING practice games—famous championship matches. Bearing the brunt of every last ounce of energy from a human dynamo!

These Keds not only were still good for more wear after this terrific test—but they had already lasted over a period when this famous champion would normally have outworn three pairs of shoes!

Records like these help to explain why millions of people have found that when they buy canvas rubber-soled shoes today—it pays to insist on Keds!

They explain, too, why the long-wearing Keds quality makes these shoes the ideal summer footwear for the active feet of growing children.

Keds are a complete line of canvas rubber-soled shoes, varying in price according to grade, size and style—from $1.25 to $4.50.

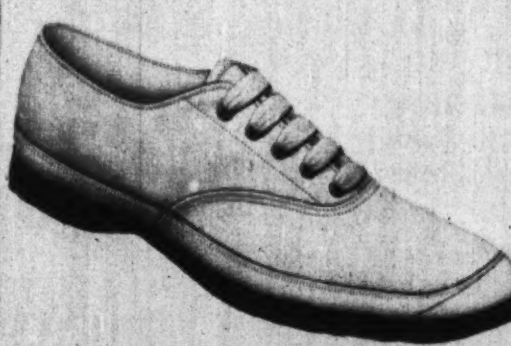
They are built to stand the continuous racing and tearing about—the games, hikes and camping trips—of vacation time. Strong, tough, durable—every pair means an unusual saving.

It is important to remember that all canvas rubber-soled shoes are not Keds. Keds are made only by the United States Rubber Company.

They come in a wide range of styles and prices. But every pair of Keds is built to give longer wear and better service.

And every Keds shoe has the name Keds on it.

If you want the standard shoes for sports of every kind—if you want shoes for a boy who seems to "go through" everything—if you want the longest wearing quality your money can buy—look for the name Keds.



A KEDS MODEL WITH CREPE SOLE

Crepe Sole Keds are distinguished by springy lightness, ground grip and long wear. Keds Crepe Soles are vulcanized which makes them tough, and gives the greatest possible adhesion between sole and upper. Insist on Keds.

Keds are a complete line of canvas rubber-soled shoes, varying in price according to grade, size and style—from $1.25 to $4.50.

Keds with athletic-trim are not only standard for sport and vacation wear, but are also the ideal long-wearing everyday summer shoe for boys and girls of all ages. Keds with Crepe Soles are the choice of thousands of tennis players—including the ten leading players in the country. Other Keds include attractive pumps and oxfords for street, home and all out-door wear.

Your skin can be as Lovely as any woman's
—if you give it the right care

DON'T be a fatalist about your skin!

Don't say to yourself that you have a naturally poor complexion, just as some women have a naturally good complexion.

A poor complexion is never natural to anyone.

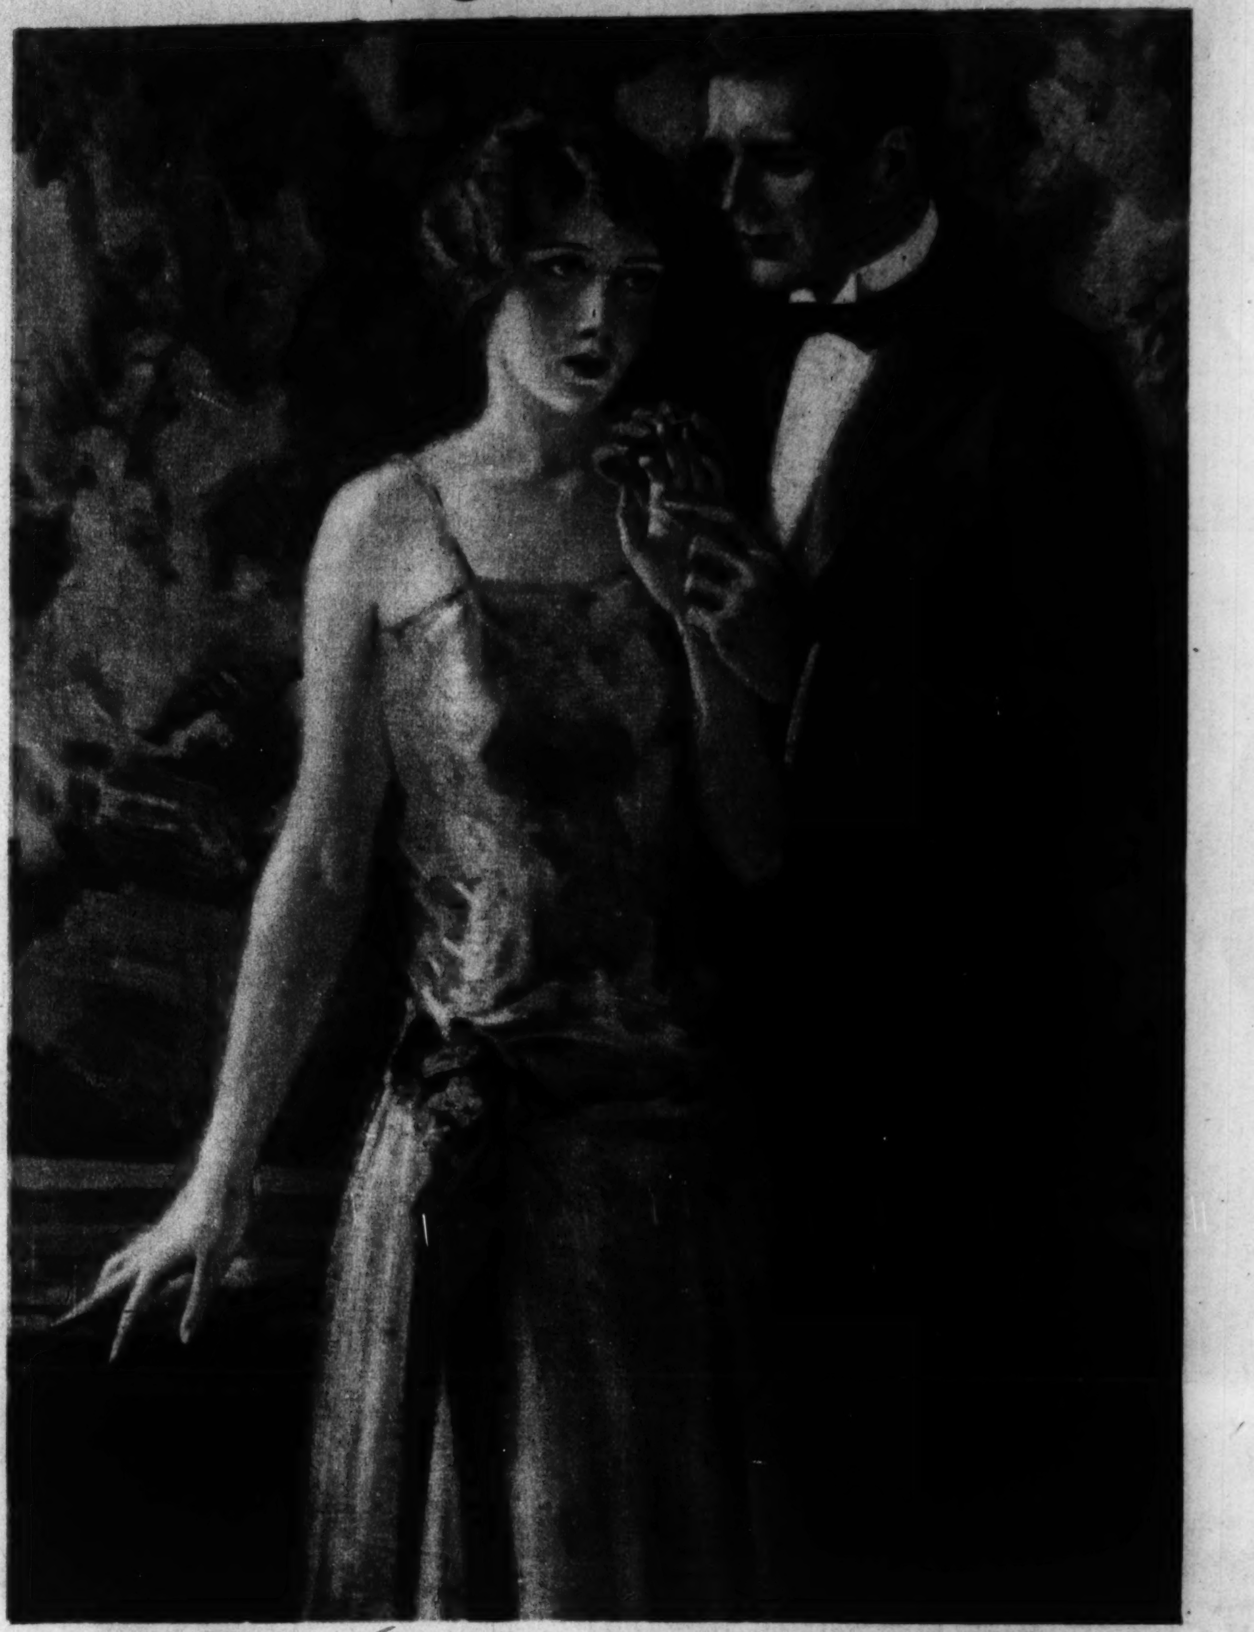
If there is something about your skin that keeps it from being attractive—if it is pale and sallow, or excessively oily, or disfigured with blackheads—with blemishes—then you can be sure that you are not giving your skin the right kind of care.

Begin now to overcome this condition! You can make your skin what you will, for each day it is changing; old skin dies and new takes its place. Give this new skin the special treatment it should have, and see how smooth and lovely you can keep it—how quickly the defects in it will disappear.

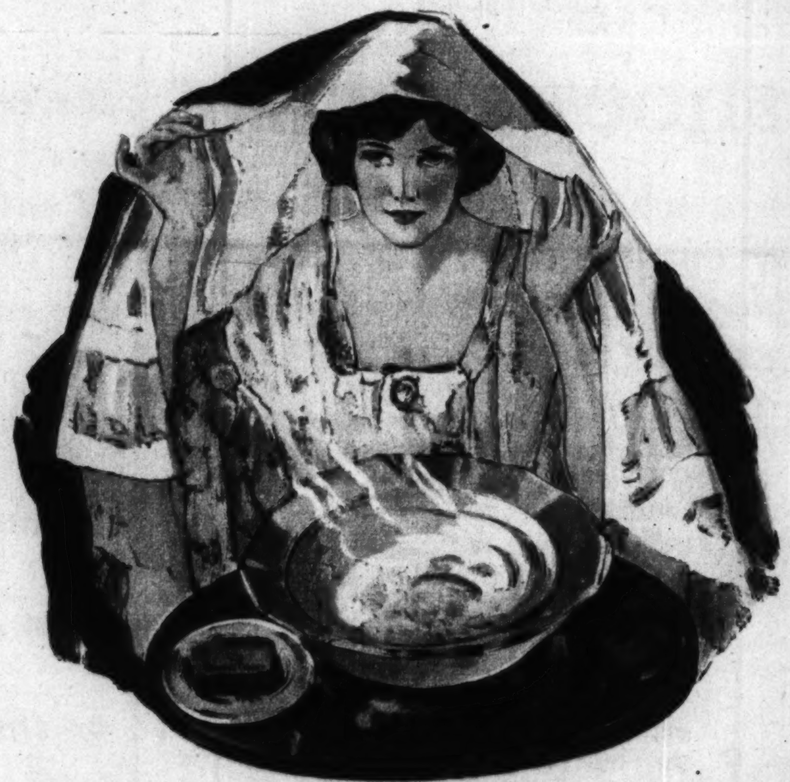
The right treatment for each different type of skin is given in the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch" which is wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today—begin tonight the right treatment for your skin! Within a week or ten days you will see a marked improvement.

A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts a month or six weeks for regular use, including any of the special treatments. You can also get Woodbury's in convenient 3-cake boxes.



A girl's skin can be a constant humiliation to her—or it can be one of the loveliest things about her, so fresh and sweet that no one can see it and not admire it. If you want to be attractive to other people—begin with your skin! Overcome its defects—learn to care for it in the way that will keep it clear, smooth, and flawlessly lovely.



If your skin is pale and sallow, use the following treatment to give it a fresh, natural color

Once or twice a week, just before retiring, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel. Steam your face for thirty seconds.

Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The very first time you use this Woodbury steam treatment your skin will begin to show more color. After you have repeated it a few times you will see a marked improvement in the whole tone of your complexion—your skin will look fresher, rosier, and younger.

Use this special method of cleansing to free your skin from blackheads

Every night before retiring apply hot cloths to your face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in this treatment. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Follow this treatment regularly, and soon your skin will be free from blackheads—you will rejoice in its smoothness and clearness.

Send 10c for a miniature set of three famous Woodbury skin preparations, including a trial-size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap, samples of Woodbury's Facial Cream and Facial Powder, and the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

THE GUMPS.
OH BOY
CUCKOO
CUCKOO
DON'T FORGET I HAVE A ROAST IN THE OVEN- IF YOU ARE NOT HOME AT 6 O'CLOCK SHARP DINNER WILL BE RUINED-
DON'T WORRY- AT SIX O'CLOCK WE'LL BE SITTING AT THE DINNER TABLE SINGING THAT DEAR OLD SONG ENTITLED "WHEN DO WE EAT?"
OH GEE PAPA, HURRY-
LOOK, PAPA- THE AUTO CLOCK HAS STOPPED AGAIN-
IT DOESN'T MATTER- TRYING TO TELL TIME BY THAT CLOCK IS JUST LIKE ENTERING A GUESSING CONTEST- I NEVER LEAVE THE HOUSE WITHOUT MY GOOD TRUSTWORTHY GOLD WATCH- YOU DON'T CATCH ANDY GUMP MISSING HIS NICE DINNER BECAUSE A THREE DOLLAR CLOCK LIED TO HIM-
WHAT'S THE MATTER?
THERE'S NOTHING THE MATTER- IT HAS PLENTY OF GAS AND OIL- EVERYTHING LOOKS O. K. BUT THERE'S SOMETHING WRONG- IT MUST BE IN THE CARBURETTER-
348
I KNOW AS MUCH ABOUT AN AUTOMOBILE AS THE NEXT GUY BUT I CAN'T FIND OUT WHY THE ENGINE WON'T TURN OVER- I'VE GONE OVER THE BLAMED THING SIX TIMES AND-
CAN I HELP YOU BROTHER? WHAT SEEMS TO BE THE TROUBLE?
348
THAT'S JUST WHAT I'VE SPENT THE LAST HALF HOUR TRYING TO FIND OUT- I CAN'T LOCATE THE TROUBLE AND WHEN I FAIL—
I SEE WHAT'S THE MATTER- THERE'S A PIN STUCK IN YOUR NEEDLE-VALVE- I WAS FOOLED THAT WAY ONCE MYSELF-
348
THANK YOU A THOUSAND TIMES- I HOPE I'LL BE ABLE TO DO SOMETHING, FOR YOU SOMETIME-
DON'T MENTION IT- I NEVER PASS A FELLOW MOTORIST IN TROUBLE- I KNOW YOU WOULD DO THE SAME THING FOR ME IF I WERE IN TROUBLE-
348
THAT'S THE KIND OF MAN I LIKE TO MEET- NOW I'LL SEE WHAT TIME IT IS AND WE'LL SPEED HOME FOR SUPPER- MY WATCH IS GONE- THAT CROOK PICKED MY POCKET-RUN AND CATCH HIM BEFORE HE GOES- MAKE HIM GIVE IT BACK-
348
JUST ONE MINUTE- HAND OVER THAT WATCH-
DON'T SHOOT! DON'T SHOOT, MISTER- I'LL GIVE IT TO YOU-
GEE, PAPA- I'M GLAD YOU GOT YOUR WATCH BACK-
I WAS ONTO THAT BABY'S GAME FROM THE START- ANY TIME A STRANGE GUY OFFERS TO HELP ME I GET SUSPICIOUS- I'D HAVE TAKEN HIM TO JAIL IF I WASN'T IN SUCH A HURRY TO GET HOME TO SUPPER
I'M GLAD I WAS TOO SMART FOR THAT CROOK- I WOULDN'T LOSE THIS WATCH FOR THE WORLD- IT'S AN HEIRLOOM AND BESIDES I'D HATE TO THINK THAT A SILLY-LOOKING SAP LIKE THAT COULD FOOL ANDY GUMP-
I'LL BET YOU'RE THE SMARTEST MAN IN THE WHOLE WORLD-
348
I WAS AFRAID YOU'D BE LATE- YOU FORGOT YOUR WATCH-
I DIDN'T FORGET MY WATCH- HERE IT IS-WHY, HERE'S YOUR WATCH- YOU LEFT IT ON THE BUREAU-
OH PAPA- YOU STOLE THAT NICE MAN'S WATCH-

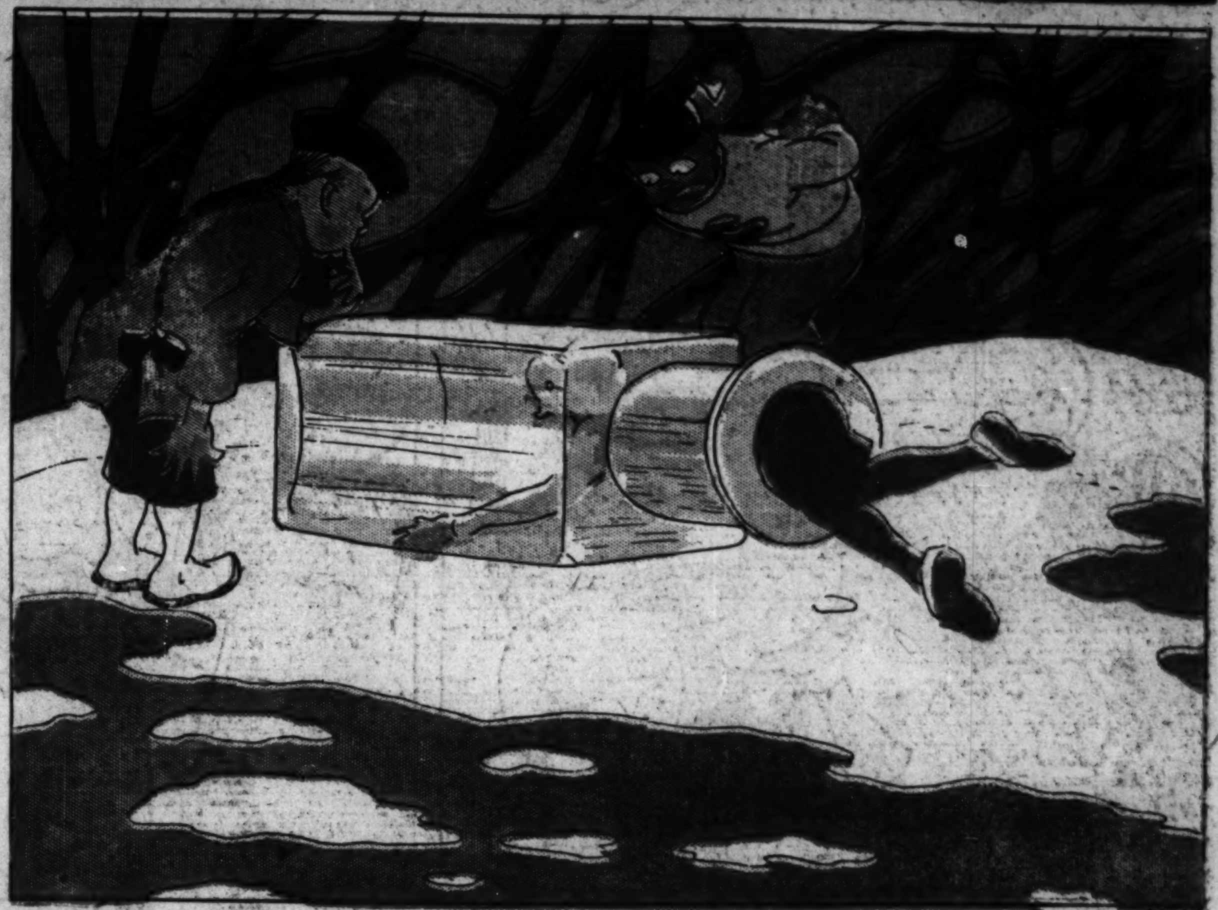
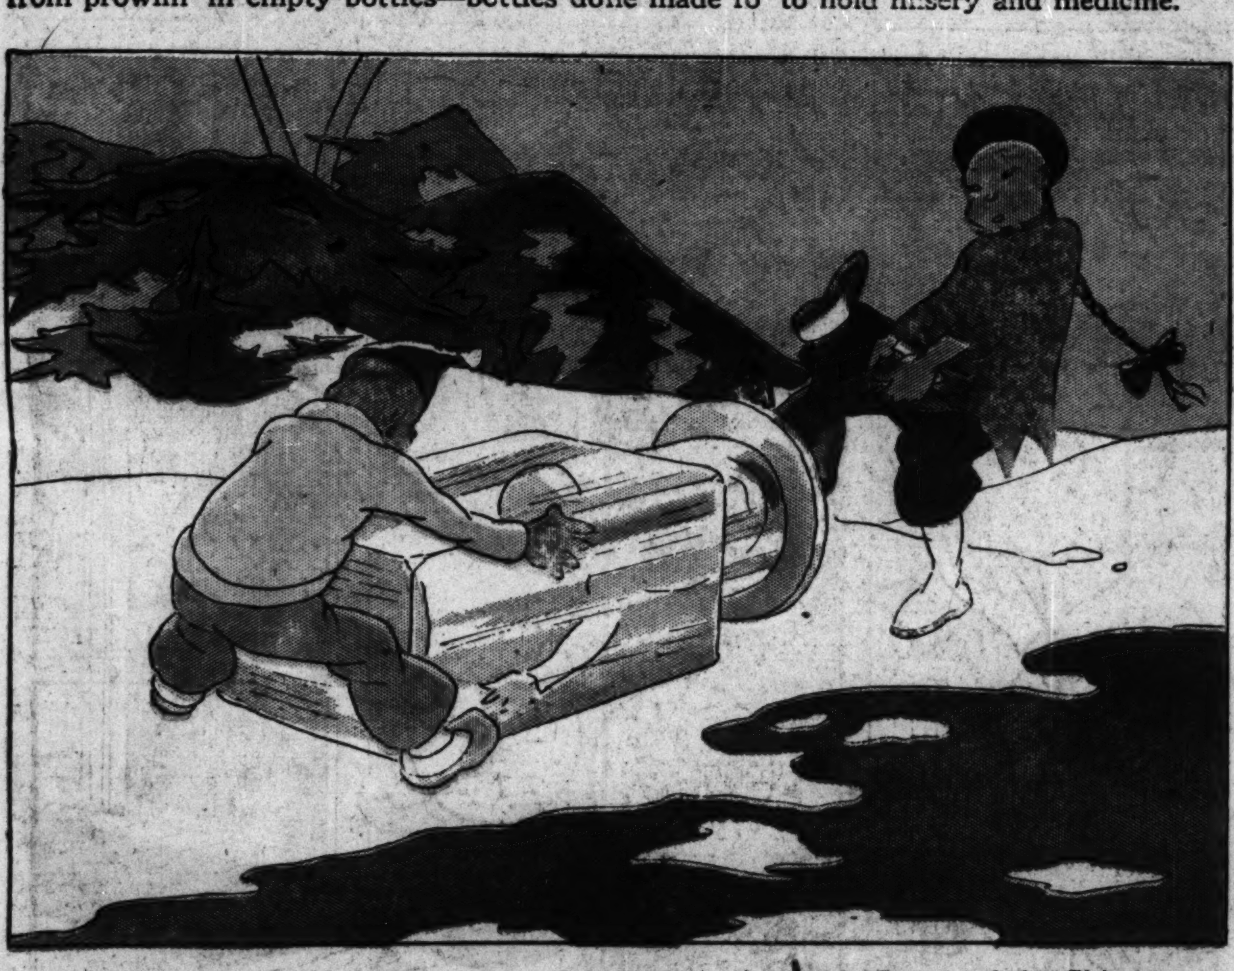
"I'll bet you I can crawl into that bottle," announced the Dunce, pointing to a small bottle that lay on the ground. Gogo and the Chinaman looked critically at the bottle and then glanced at the Dunce's plump little body.

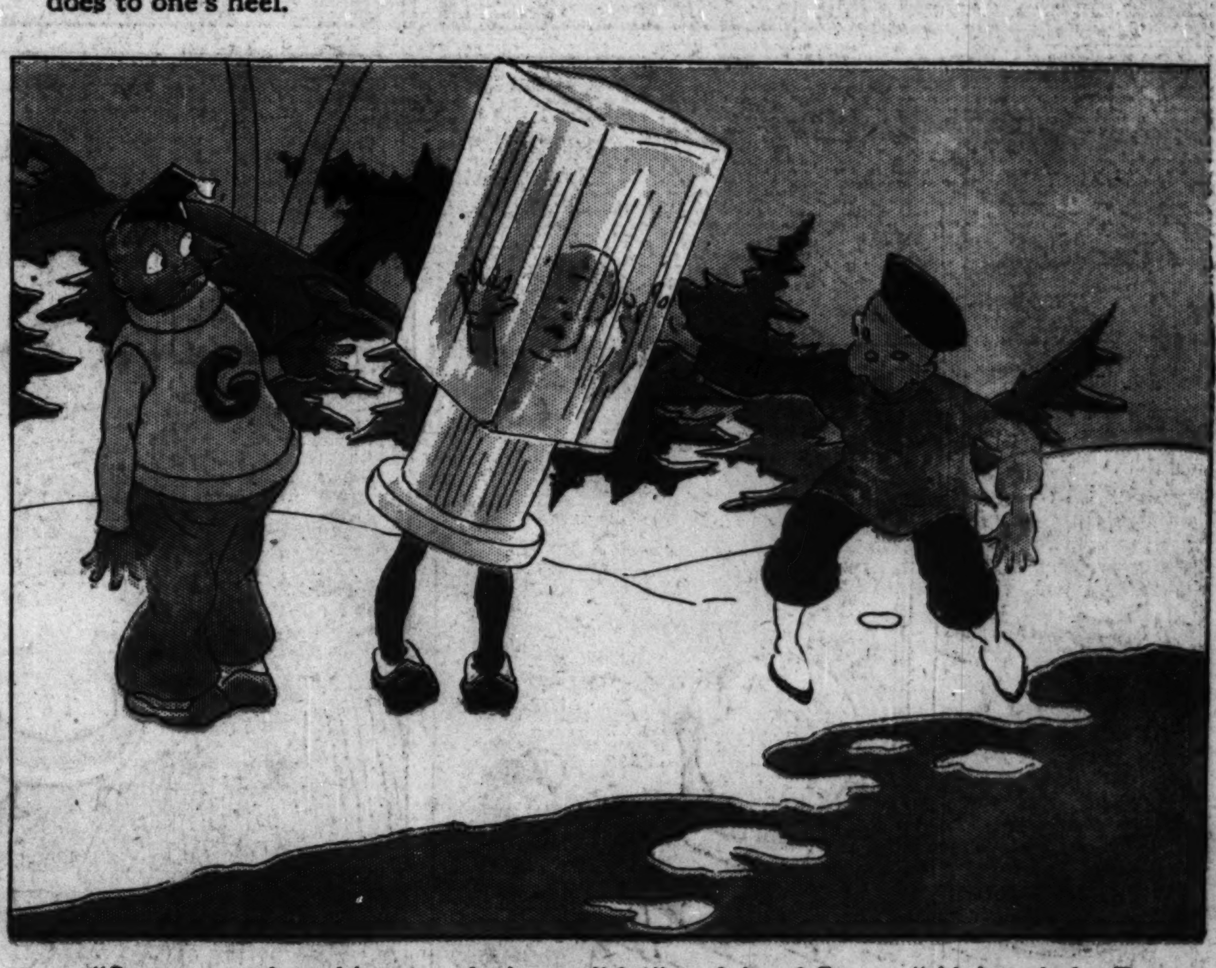
"Yo' all bettah stay out dat bottle," warned Gogo. "They's suttenly no good come from prowlin' in empty bottles—bottles done made fo' to hold misery and medicine."



"Well, I think I'll put a little misery in this bottle," said the Dunce, and dropping to his knees he started to crawl in. It was a pretty tight fit, and when the foolish little chap had wiggled half way in he found it couldn't be done, so he started to back out, but there his troubles started, for he found he was fast—he stuck tighter than chewing gum does to one's heel.

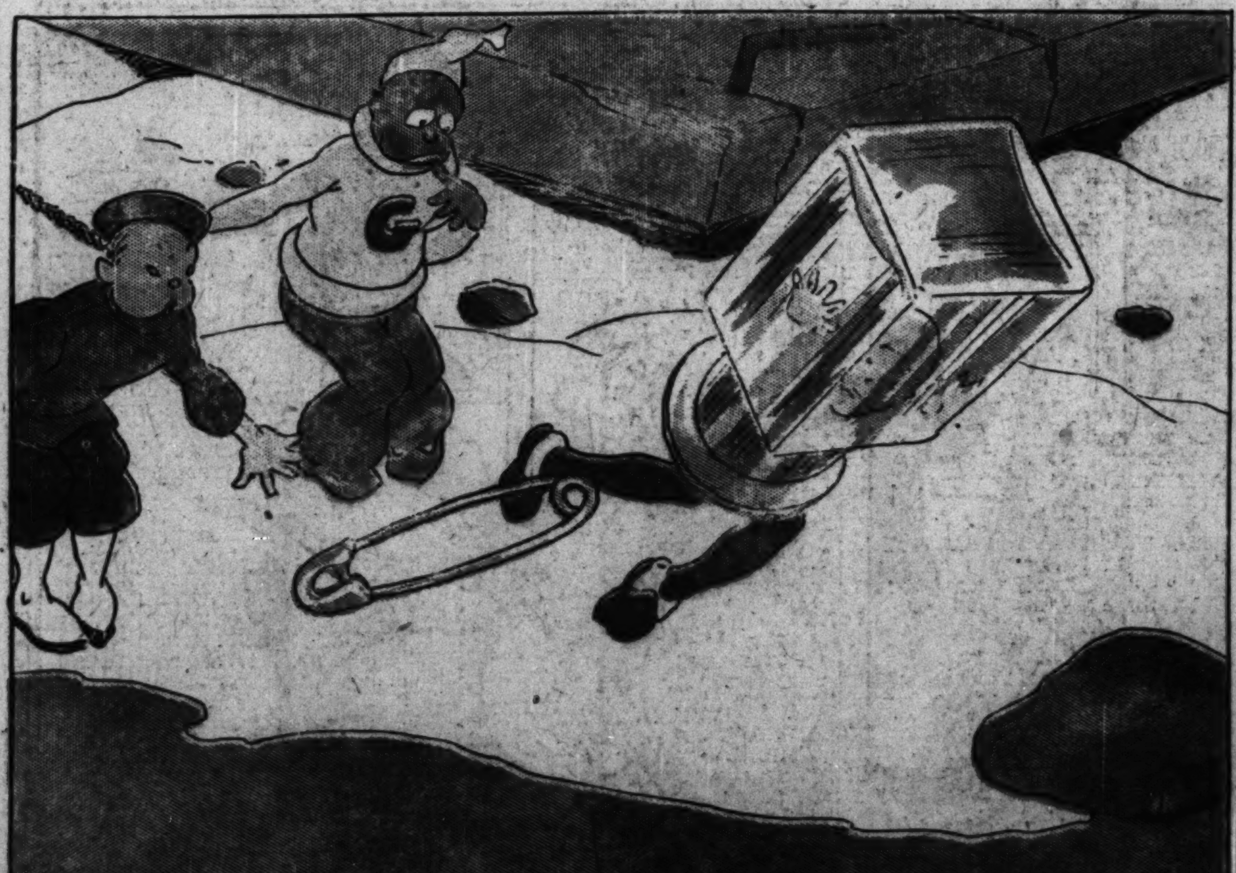


"Help! Help!" his voice came so faintly from the bottle Gogo and the Chinaman could scarcely hear it, but from his frantic kicking they soon realized what was the matter. Gogo held onto the bottle while the Chinaman caught the Dunce's feet and then they pulled with all their might, but all the good it did was to make the Dunce yell a little louder—they couldn't get him out.

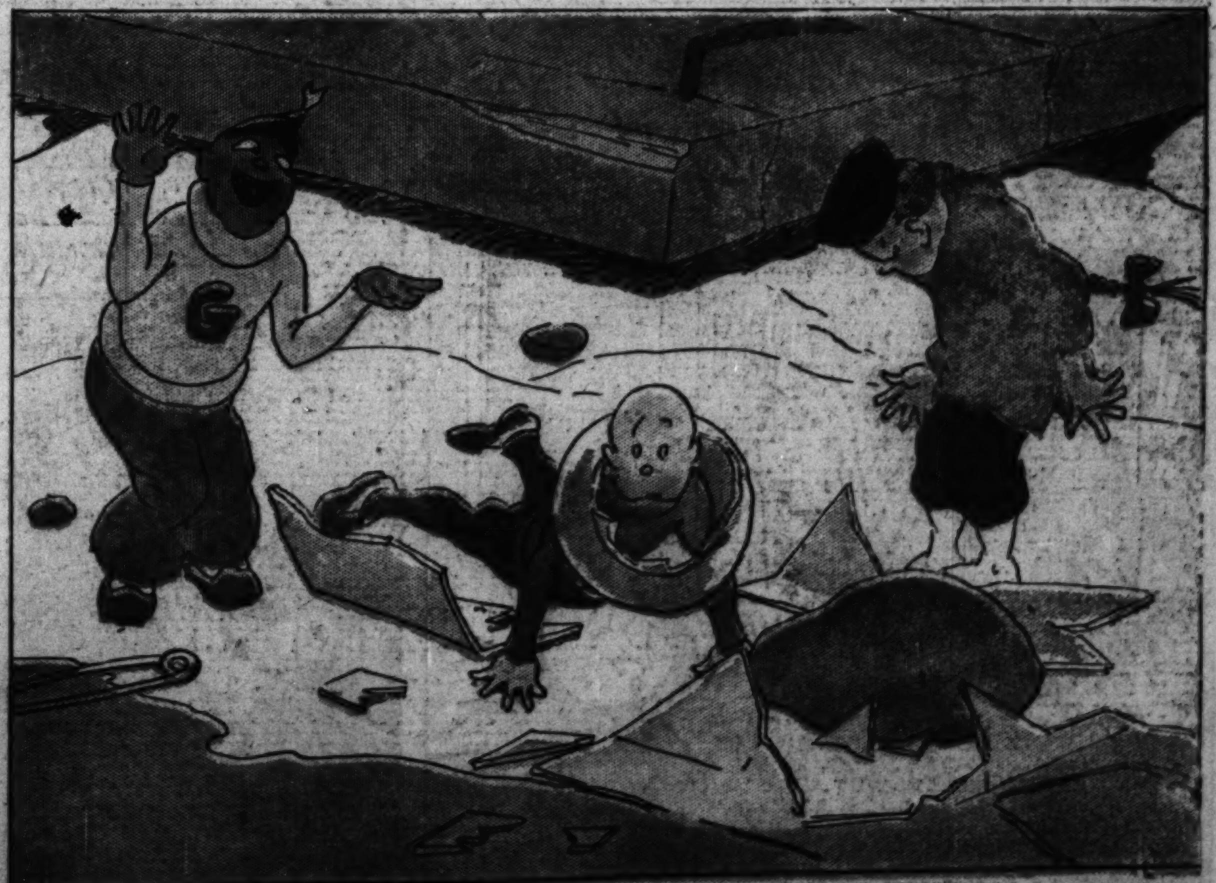


"Lawsy me, but this suttenly is turrible!" exclaimed Gogo. "Ah 'speck dat Dunce will have to starve a bit so he done get skinny enough fo' to get out dat bottle."

"Allie same he smother before he allie time starve," cried the Chinaman. "We bletter get Doctors rightie way." So they helped the half bottled Dunce to his feet and headed for home.



Gogo was wondering, as they ran along, if a cork screw would be of any help, when the Dunce, who was wabbling unsteadily on his feet, stumbled over a safety pin and pitched headlong on to a pebble. The bottle was smashed into a dozen pieces and fortunately the Dunce came out of the wreck without a single scratch.



"Yo' suttenly did go to de right doctah," cried Gogo pointing to the pebble. "Rigut there is de bestes little bottle extracter there is."

"Well, it wasn't your directions that led me to that little doctor," growled the Dunce, who was a little peeved.

"No, sah," answered Gogo with a grin. "It was de safety pin what showed you de way."
